Not long ago one of Campbell's constituents, a cattle dealer, with scarcely an interest in the world outside of livestock, came to Washington and called at the Campbell home. Mrs. Campbell was out, and Campbell himself was in the tub at the time, so the young daughter, with the chameleon pinned to her waist, marched into the parlor to entertain the visitor.

Conversation went along fairly well for a moment. Then the cattle-dealing constituent noticed the chameleon, and watched it with fascinated eyes. For a full minute he was silent. Then he pointed a fat forefinger and demanded:

"Where on earth did you get that thing?"

The young daughter smiled and stroked the chameleon's back with a loving finger."

"Oh," she replied, "I bought it."

The cattle dealer was silent for another minute. Then he spoke again.

"Bought it," he repeated, wonderingly. Then he leaned far over in his chair. "Say," said he earnestly, "tell me. How much is lizards a head, anyhow?"

SECRETARY TUMULTY NOW LL.D.

Secretary Tumulty now thinks the president has nothing on him, for recently St. Peter's college, an institution somewhere in New Jersey, made Mr. Tumulty an LL.D.

The president's secretary returned to Washington and was at his desk as usual, unruffled by his new honors and degree. He was at his office early and was sitting at his desk, while nearby and watching him was a politician from Trenton, N. J. This gentleman had been a frequent visitor on Mr. Tumulty, for he wanted a good job under the government. Mr. Tumulty was going over his mail and the gent from Trenton was watching, hoping someone had resigned and that he could get the place, when the president, having come to his office from the White House, walked into Mr. Tumulty's office.

"Good morning, doctor," was the president's greeting to his faithful man Friday.

Tumulty blushed, but returned the greeting. The politician, however, pricked up his ears at the appellation and after the president had gone into his private office, the gent from Trenton got up and walked over to Tumulty and said: "Didn't I hear the president call you doctor?"

"You did."

"Are you a doctor?" asked the politician.

"Got my degree yesterday," answered Tumulty with pride.

"Well, dis is luck," said the gent from Trenton. "I've got an awful pain in my side. What shall I do for it?"

Mr. Tumulty looked at the gent from Trenton for a while and then said: "My prescription is that you take a long walk."

WOULD MAKE NAVY FLOATING SCHOOL

"Every battleship a floating college."

This is the aim of Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy, as outlined by him before leaving on a tour of inspection of navy yards, training stations and equipment on the Pacific coast.

The secretary proposes to convert every battleship and training station into a school where enlisted men will receive three hours' daily instruction under graduates of Annapolis. Besides making enlisted service more attractive, Secretary Daniels says this new plan will offer to every young American an opportunity to receive a minor college education at the same time that he is serving Uncle Sam. It will offer a chance to young men to fit themselves for a trade or a profession, so that when their enlistment is ended they may become useful citizens.

In other words, Secretary Daniels' plan is to make the navy a great educational institution in time of peace and thus a more efficient defense in time of war.

SENATOR NORRIS' LITTLE MISTAKE

This is a tale of how Senator Geo. W. Norris of Nebraska was almost arrested. He had been a senator but little over a month, having graduated from the house of representatives, which pedigree explains his crime.

The senator was standing on a corner in Washington, thinking of the day when he led the fight in the house to overthrow Cannonism, when a car hove into view. He took it. When the car reached the Peace monument it turned to the right and landed the musing senator on the house side. He got off, strolled into the office building, still in a trance, walked down the corridor to room 214, opened the door of that room and mechanically hung up his hat.

An exclamation followed from a stenographer who didn't look exactly familiar. Senator Norris glanced up in an annoyed way, and of a sudden began to realize that the furniture of the room had changed over night. Then, and only then, did the statesman realize that, instead of riding to the senate office building and walking unchallenged into his magnificent mahogany suite, he had returned to the old room he occupied as a representative and taken possession.

COTTON MADE GOOD PROGRESS IN EAST

WEST IN NEED OF RAIN, AND CROP LOST SOME GROUND.

PAST WEEK WAS FAVORABLE

Good Rains Fell East of River and Over Most of Arkansas and Parts of Oklahoma—Weevils Plentiful, But Small Damage.

Memphis, Tenn.—Reports from all points of the cotton belt indicate a condition of the crop of 82.1, an improvement for the month of 0.3 of a point. The condition is based on July 25, the date upon which the government's condition report will be based.

The greatest improvement was noted east of the river, where, under very favorable weather conditions, the plant has made great progress, and made up, to a large extent, the lateness caused by a drouth early in the season. This improvement, however, has been offset in a measure, by some deterioration west of the river in Oklahoma and Texas.

The weather during the past week has been favorable in all sections except in Texas and Oklahoma and a few widely scattered sections in Arkansas. Beneficial rains fell over the east, most of Louisiana and Arkansas, and some portions of Oklahoma and North Texas. There was plenty of sunshine, while temperatures were around or below normal in all sections, except in Oklahoma and parts of Texas on one or two days of the week.

In Central and Western Texas deterioration has been pronounced and good general rains are badly needed to revive the plant and start it on the way to maturity again. Oklahoma is also needing rain, but many places received good precipitation during the week.

The crop is being laid by in an almost perfect state of cultivtion, except that in boll weevil districts cultivation is being kept up in an effort to destroy the the weevil. There are still many weevil in portions of Mississippi and Louisiana, but less than a fortnight ago. Damage to date from this source is small.

ARE DEADLOCKED OVER DEBT

Virginia and West Virgin a Cannot Settle 50-Year-Old Row.

Washington.—After joint sessions beginning early Saturday and continuing until a late hour, commissioners representing Virginia and West Virginia in the half-century-old debt controversy between the two states were deadlocked. The hitch revolved around the question of the amount of interest, the only issue now oustanding.

The Virginia commissioners demanded that West Virginia pay to Virginia $14,000,000 interest on the $7,182,607 judgment awarded by the supreme court to Virginia as the amount West Virginia should pay her as part of the public debt of the original state. To this, West Virginia's commissioners were unwilling to agree and they proposed as a counter proposition that the entire controversy be reopened by subcommittees representing each of the states.

NEGRO LYNCHED IN GEORGIA

He Was Supposed to Be Shooting Burglar Who Hurt Merchant.

Dunbar, Ga.—John Shake, a negro, was lynched here late Sunday by a mob, which captured him after an all-day search through swamps. The negro was strung up to a telephone pole in the heart of the local negro settlement and his body riddled with bullets. His corpse was left hanging.

Shake was supposed to be the burglar who shot and dangerously wounded J. F. Hammock, a local merchant. Hammock visited his establishment and discovered a negro in the act of rifling the place. Ordered to come out, the intruder loaded a shotgun, which he found in the store, and, emerging, fired two charges into Hammock's body.

Work Train Jumps Track.

Nutley, N. J.—Four men were killed and several others seriously injured near West Nutley Sunday afternoon, when an Erie construction train jumped the track and dashed into the midst of a gang of track repairers who had stepped aside to let the train pass.

INDICTMENTS FOUND.

Secret Report Made on West Virginia Mine Troubles.

Charleston, W. Va.—The special grand jury that has been investigating conditions in the strict districts of Paint and Cabin Creek coal fields Saturday made a secret report to Judge Henry K. Black of the Kanawha county court. While it is known that several indictments were returned, no names, the court announced, will be made public until the arrests have been made.

Twenty-Seven Tourists Injured.

Boulder, Col.—Twenty-seven persons were injured, six probably fatally, when five coaches of the Denver, Boulder & Western train overturned near El Dorado Sunday. In the five coaches were 125 passengers, mostly eastern tourists, who were viewing the scenery of the mountain train. The train was attempting to make the customary Wye turn when the rear coach left the track. The train crew endeavored to draw the coach back upon the track, when it overturned and carried with it the next four cars.

STRIKE OF EASTERN TRAINMEN IS OFF

ARTICLES TO ARBITRATE QUESTIONS AT ISSUE SIGNED.

THE MANAGERS CONCEDE

Articles of Arbitration Now Comprise the Sixteen Original Demands Presented by the Conductors and Trainmen.

New York.—The threatened strike of 80,000 conductors and trainmen of 45 eastern roads for higher wages and improved working conditions will not be called. Articles of agreement to arbitrate under the Newlands act the questions at issue were signed Saturday by the employes' representatives and the conference committee of railroad managers.

The agreement was not reached until the managers had withdrawn the proposal that their own grievances against the men also should be arbitrated. This claim, the managers announced, they had relinquished to "protect the public" from a tie-up, which they said the employes intended to force if the railroads persisted in pressing their point.

The peaceful outcome of the dispute was the result of efforts made by the board of mediation and conciliation recently created in the hurriedly passed Newlands act to meet the situation. The board, consisting of Judge William Lea Chambers, Judge Martin A. Knapp and G. W. W. Hanger, brought about the agreement after conferences with the disputants which continued more than a week.

With the elimination of the eight grievances for which the railroads desired consideration, the articles of arbitration comprise, without alteration, the 16 original demands presented by the conductors and trainmen. The only point gained by the railroads was the provision that the award of the board of arbitration to be constituted later of six members shall take effect Oct. 1, next, instead of May 1 last, the date requested by the employes.

CAN GO UP TO 100 POUNDS

Postmaster Burleson Is Not Deterred by Criticism of Senators.

Washington.—Despite sensatorial criticism of the proposed reduction in parcel post rates and the increase in the size of packages, Postmaster General Burleson Friday announced he would issue the final orders at once putting the changes in effect August 15. The announcement came after the wisdom of making the changes had been subjected to a searching review before the senate postoffice committee in the presence of the postmaster general.

Chairman Clark, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, explaining why the commission had sanctioned the proposed changes, said he believed the postmaster general had ample power under the law to make them.

"I am convinced the postoffice department can, ought to and will extend the parcel post until it will carry all packages up to 100 pounds," he said.

ARMISTICE REJECTED.

Greece and Servia Refuse Peace Plan Offered by Roumania.

Bucharest, Roumania. — Greece and Servia have definitely rejected the Roumanian proposal for the conclusion of a provisional armistice during the conference at Nish. The two governments say they can consent to the cessation of hostilities only after the signature of an armistice and of the peace preliminaries.

Thaw Wants Money.

Pittsburgh.—Counsel for the Fidelity Title and Trust Company filed an answer in orphans' court Saturday to the petition of Harry K. Thaw, which asks that the trust company be directed to pay him $30,000 from the income and funds he avers the company is holding in trust for him. The answer recites that Thaw has no property or estate, and no income, except that accruing from the trust estate of which the respondent company is trustee.

RECOGNITION OF HUERTA FAVORED

MEXICAN AMBASSADOR WILSON SAYS MEDIATION IS ALL "ROT."

CARRANZA ONLY A BANDIT

Accuses Mrs. Madero of Forging His Name to Letters—Says if Huerta Government Does Not Stand Anarchy Will Result.

New York.—Henry Lane Wilson, ambassador to Mexico, arrived here Friday on the Ward liner Mexico, and as no reply to his wireless request for instructions had been received from the state department, he said he would stay at the Waldorf until a telegram from Washington arrived.

When the reporters boarded the steamer at Quarantine Mr. Wilson said that he would answer all questions that the regulations of the diplomatic service permitted him to answer, and the first question put was whether the state department was to blame for not recognizing the Huerta government earlier.

"That I cannot answer," he said.

He was told that several constructions had been placed on the telegram he sent to the American consuls in Mexico, telling them to urge general submission and adhesion to the Huerta government.

"I stand pat on that," he replied. "It has been the custom for more than 100 years for American consuls to recognize a de facto government. The many exaggerated reports that have been received in the United States have been inspired by people who, for their own personal gain, wanted the American government to intervene.

"I believe that if the Huerta administration does not stand, anarchy of the worst kind will prevail. Gen. Carranza does not stand out as a big figure in Mexico, or as the coming president. He is nothing more or less than a king of bandits. There are a million bandits in Mexico. Men have proved it is easier to take other people's property in Mexico than to work."

"I don't want to bother with Mrs. Madero," he replied. "Her statements are all made for political effect. The state department knows the inside of the Madero death. Mrs. Madero's utterances are nothing but politics. She caused to be published letters over my signature that I never wrote. If I had not brought Diaz and Huerta together the City of Mexico would have been in flames."

Public hearings will not be held by the Interstate Commerce Commission upon the expediency of changes proposed by the postoffice department.

Falls 110 Feet; Walks Home.

St. Louis.—After falling 110 feet from the top of a steel roof, and after stopping with his head a bucket of tar which followed him in the plunge, Edward Horner, a steeplejack at the Granite City (Ill.) steel works, Wednesday waved aside hospital attendants, then walked half a mile to his home.

YOUTH GETS TEN YEARS.

Louisiana Boy Confessed to Stealing $22,000 From Express Company.

Lake Charles, La.—Herschel Pierce, the 17-year-old boy who confessed to stealing almost $22,000 from the Wells-Fargo Express Company's chest in the railroad station here, pleaded guilty on Wednesday and was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment. His brother-in-law, with whom he divided the spoils, pleaded guilty to the charge of receiving stolen goods and was sentenced to two years' imprisonment.

PITTSBURGH MEAT FAMINE.

Prices Are Three to Six Cents Higher Than Year Ago.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Pittsburgh faces not only the highest prices but the most serious meat famine in the city's history. Prices of veal, sirloin, tenderloin, mutton and lamb are from three to six cents higher than at this time last year. Pork as yet has not risen. Shortage of cattle is blamed for the advance in prices.

BAN PUT ON ARMS GOING INTO MEXICO

PRESIDENT DIRECTS STRICTEST NEUTRALITY BE ENFORCED.

GOVERNMENT IS NOT LEGAL

This Is the View Taken Concerning the Huerta Regime—Band of Armed Texans Would Go to Relief of Americans at Madera.

Washington. — President Wilson has determined that no faction in the present Mexican revolution shall obtain arms or ammunition from the United States and that neutrality must be observed in its strictest sense. This was the interpretation of the neutrality laws decided upon by the president Wednesday after conferences with Senator Bacon and Representative Flood, chairmen of the two congressional committees on foreign relations.

While the Mexican rebels have been getting no arms heretofore, developments mean that the Huerta administration will be deprived of the privilege previously accorded the Madero government and that the United States will treat all sides alike in the present dispute.

The situation was precipitated by the repeated complaints of constitutionalists and their sympathiers in this country that if the United States did not virtually assist the Huerta government by selling it munitions of war, a termination of hostilities would be possible.

Sentiment in favor of a new policy grew in congress to such extent that a canvass was made of the commitees in both houses dealing with foreign relations. It was found there would be little objection to repealing the joint resolution of March 14, 1912, which gives the president discretionary power to prohibit exportations of arms or munitions of war to countries where domestic violence existed, but permits him to allow the legally constituted government of any country to buy war supplies as usual.

Representative Smith of Texas presented to the war department a request from an El Paso newspaper that a band of armed Americans be permitted to cross the border to the relief of Americans said to have been endangered at Madera, Mexico. Mr. Smtih was told that such an act would be a violation of neutrality laws, a virtual act of war and that United States troops would prevent it.

COMMITTED MANY ROBBERIES

Youth, Arrested After One Policeman Wounded—Another Beaten.

Chicago.—In a statement made to police, Walter Novak, 20 years old, arrested with four companions Wednesday after they had fatally wounded one policeman and beating another, admitted having taken part in more than 30 robberies in two months, and boasted of his career.

"I was born a thief and I've been a thief ever since; I suppose I've committed 500 robberies," said Novak. "I don't care whether I go to the gallows. I started when I was 9 years old, stealing pennies from kids. I have been put in all kinds of institutions to reform me, but they only made me worse.

"There is only one good thing I can say for myself, and that is I never robbed a man dressed like a workingman."

WOMEN WORK TOO LONG

Dr. Eliot Favors a Limit of Five Years.

New York.—Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, is against the employment of married women teachers in the public schools and except in some instances against the employment of young women for more than five years. Dr. Eliot was asked for his opinion by Abraham Stern, chairman of the committee on elementary schools of this city, in the case of Mrs. Bridget C. Piexotto, whose dismissal has been recommended. He expressed his disapproval and added:

"It follows from these premises that the proportion of male teachers in the public schools should be increased, whatever the necessary cost."

WILL STUDY MOSQUITO.

Government Scientists Will Make a Tour of the Delta.

Washington.—To study the mosquito and its relation to malarial fever, the department of agriculture has decided to send Dr. D. L. Van Dyke of the bureau of entomology to the territory around the delta of the Mississippi river, where the insect pest does much harm in disseminating the fever. He will be occupied probably six months or more in studying the disease.

Bomb Wrecks Factory.

Paterson, N. J.—The explosion of a bomb partly wrecked the Helvetia Silk Mills early Tuesday, the resulting excitement bringing hundreds of workers who have recently been on strike from their beds to the streets. Great damage was done to the machinery and other fittings of the factory, many windows were broken and one wall was crushed in. The police began at once to conduct a rigid examination, but no arrests have been made.

The path to success of any kind is full of difficulties to the careless and indolent, but with energy, perseverance and practice it may be treaded with safety.

FARMERS' UNION NOT TRUST

State and Federal Law Should Encourage Co-Operation, Whether by Capital or Labor.

The difference is very clear between illegal trust and associated effort which is morally and legally right. If certain farmers unite to ship their produce in an endeavor to secure a fair price, that is co-operation. But if this same union prevents other farmers from selling their produce unless they join it or pay a tax to it, that is illegal restraint in trade. Labor may associate in a union to secure fair wages by proper means—that is co-operation; but if the labor union estops non-union men from work, it commits the crime of restraining trade.

In appropriating money for enforcing the anti-trust law, congress says none of it can be used to prosecute farmers' organizations or labor unions. But such action does not exempt them from the legal liability. The law itself should be made right, says the Farm and Home. We farmers want to know just how far we can go in associated effort. We do not want to co-operate in good faith, only to wake up and find that we have violated some law the enforcement of which may get us into serious difficulty. State and federal law should encourage co-operation, whether practiced by farmers and laborers, by other people, or by capital. How to do this, while preventing trust evils, is a hard nut to crack.

PREVENT SOFT SHELLED EGGS

Oyster Shells, Grit and Plenty of Green Foods Will Assist in Remedying Conditions.

An overfatty condition is one cause for the laying of soft shelled eggs. Sometimes it is caused by the overstimulation of the egg organs, brought about by the overfeeding of to much spice, which is apt to cause irritation of the egg passage.

Closely confined fowls not supplied with a variety of food are more liable to lay soft shelled eggs than those having plenty of range or supplied with exercise in an artificial way and fed a variety of grains in a well balanced ration. Oyster shells, grit, and plenty of green foods will assist greatly in preventing such conditions of the egg organs.

If your hens are too fat provide a diet low in fat producing elements, make the birds work for what they get, and put one teaspoonful of sulphate of magnesia to every pint of drinking water twice a week for a few weeks.

Should the hens still persist in laying soft shelled eggs add five drops of fluid extract of ergot to each quart of drinking water every other day for a period of one week. Do not have any other water around while giving them the mixture, otherwise the fowls will not touch it.

Conservation of Fertility.

Grass is the fundamental thing in the conservation of soil fertility.

PLANS TO AID THE FARMERS

Commissions of All Sorts Studying Problem of Marketing Farm Products to the Consumer.

To Officials and Members of the Union:

You can't pick up a paper these days without seeing something on marketing plans to aid the farmer to get his produce to the consumer without the great difference in price as between grower and consumer. Commissions of all sorts are studying this problem. Individuals, corporations, lawmakers and societies have the one and only scheme.

It is all mighty well; much of it all is very edifying. With so much discussion and planning and scheming and uplifting beneficial results must result. So much agitation can not take place without getting people to thinking, and after a while, with thinking along right lines, real results may come.

But I want to burn into your brains this idea, which I have stressed long and persistently—that the farmer isn't going to get any adequate, practical, worth-while marketing plan until he works it out himself. Moreover, he won't accept anybody else's plan, and I know it, as you know it.

If he does accept any semi-benevolent scheme in that direction, he won't stand by it. I know it, and you know it. It is best usually to be blunt when the truth is to be told, because to softsoap and palaver gets nothing but contempt in the end. I believe the vast majority of American farmers know now that I am their friend all the time, and that I have no axes to grind save their axes.

So I will stand forth and tell you the solemn facts, as I see and understand them, as I see and understand you. You are not going to get your emancipation, your freedom, your rights, through commissions, through individuals, through corporations, aye, even through your great government. It must come from your own efforts, your own organization, through plans formulated within your own ranks—and, I believe, through the Farmers' Union.

Do not understand that I minimize or would stop others in honest and genuine endeavor to solve your problems and get down to a tangible, workable, common sense plan for marketing. There are many unselfish and noble spirits at work, and, as I have stated, by the nation-wide agitation over marketing, good is bound to come.

But you are arbiters and masters of your own destiny. Work out your own plans, or let such plan come as the solid, concrete action from your own folk. Then, when it is in definite form, stand fast by your guns. Foemen on every side will assault your ramparts, but stand by your guns.

Patience, pluck, endurance, co-operation, determination, principle, leadership—all are needed. Get them, brother; get them all. Then we'll get somewhere.

FACTS ON GIN COMPRESSION

Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture Goes Into the Subject Rather Thoroughly.

Senator Sheppard's efforts to have the department of agriculture obtain and disseminate more information about gin compression are most excellent, albeit a trifle late for the yearbook of the department of agriculture of 1912 goes into the subject rather thoroughly and remarks that:

"The gin plant is the vital point in the cotton handling situation and offers an effective agency through which to bring about improved conditions. Well-organized, responsible co-operative growing and handling associations, acting in concert with the other elements of cotton trade, can ultimately bring about improvements that will save millions of dollars. Gin compression has many advantages which cannot be touched upon in the confines of a yearbook article. A comparison of the farmers' bale as delivered to a railroad platform in South Carolina (which looks like a typical bale as delivered at Galveston before compression) with the gin-compressed bale on the plantation, summarizes the difference in the two methods. (The gin-compressed bale referred to was shipped without further compression, to Bremen, Germany.)

"The gin-compressed bale as handled now is not ragged, has no sample holes, and no patches; is completely covered and is sold on net weight, doing away with the vicious 6 per cent. tare provision under which exporting is done at present. It commands a lower insurance rate, economizes warehouse space, and is shown preference in ocean shippers' rates."

Therefore, it would seem rather profitable for farmers' co-operative gin companies, wherever located, to look into the gin compression proposition.—Texas Farm Co-operator.

Sunshine for Hogs.

Hogs like the sunshine all right—if it is not too hot. Still, how few men ever think of providing anything like shelter for the porkers on hot days! Blistered backs and comfort do not go well together, which means that you will not have as much pork to sell by and by as you would have if you had been fair to the hogs.

Bad Management.

Lack of exercise and too much heat-producing foods will necessitate an early market for the young porkers.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

LATE NEWS OF THE WORLD TERSELY TOLD.

SOUTH, EAST, NORTH AND WEST

Notes From Foreign Lands, Throughout the Nation and Particularly the Great South.

Southern.

After an all day's search for a negro burglar, who shot down J. F. Hammock, a merchant of Dunbar, 15 miles south of Macon, Georgia, a posse captured the negro in a swamp at Wellston, and, after taking him back to Dunbar, strung him to a pole in the heart of a negro settlement and riddled his body with bullets. Mr. Hammock was taken to Macon and lies in a critical condition at the Williams sanitarium suffering from gun shot wounds in his wrist and his breast.

Sixty barrels of whiskey, shipped from Chattanooga, Tenn., to various persons at Decatur, Ala., were attached by Sheriff R. N. McCullough and locked in the county jail. The sheriff met the steamer carrying the shipment before it had reached the boundaries of Morgan county. As soon as the line was crosesd the sheriff made the attachment.

Eighteen charred bodies of convicts were removed from the ruins of the Oakley, Miss., state convict prison fire in which a total of 35 convicts, all negroes, perished. The bodies were found huddled together in the corner farthest from where the fire started. When the alarm was given all possible means of escape for the imprisoned men had been cut off by the flames, but prisoners in another pen were formed in a relief squad and worked desperately to fight back the fire. The thirty-five prisoners had perished in less than an hour after the fire started.

The Balkan peace conference is expected to open at Bucharest, but in the meantime serious fighting continues. The Greeks refused Bulgaria's request for even a three' days truce, and, after heavy fighting, have gotten through Krefina pass, defeating the Bulgarians at Simekle, capturing three siege guns and driving the Bulgarians back on Djuma. The Greeks claimed they annihilated the whole left wing of the Bulgarian army.

Word has reached Panama City from Peronome, in the interior of the republic, that Segundo Sanchez, a native of that section, has proclaimed himself the Messiah. He has predicted the destruction of the world by a deluge in a short time and some of his eighty adherents are building an ark, while others are busy collecting in pairs animals of all species found in their region. His followers also have armed themselves and the Panama government is taking steps to avert possible trouble.

Sixty convicts in the dregs of the New York criminal class—were taken one by one from their cells in Sing Sing prison and placed aboard a train for the state prison at Auburn. Recent riots in Sing Sing caused the warden to take no chances. Each convict was heavily handcuffed and shackled and then chained to his place in the railroad car which had been brought inside the prison enclosure. A hundred prison guards did this work while in the state armory; not far away a company of naval militia waited.

With six militia companies on duty and other state troops en route, the strike of copper miners settled measurably towards a state of dull routine. Some of the more enthusiastic union members marched through several locations, but there was practically no disorder. The union leaders of Calumet, Mich., hold fast to their attitude demanding recognition of the Western Federation of Miners, but this was not even considered by the company management.

The vatican at Rome is in a veritable state of siege. This was the outcome of them utiny of Swiss guards, whose demands, in form of a memorial relating their grievances and setting forth the conditions on which they would remain in the service, were rejected. Three leaders in the movement were expelled from the vatican. Four others left and twelve have requested leave to depart for their homes in October.

Archibold C. Hart, Democrat, was elected to the house from the sixth congressional district of New Jersey to succeed the late James Martin. Hart had the support of President Wilson. The Republican candidate, S. Woods McClave, who was mentioned in the Mulhall testimony before the senate lobby investigators, ran second.

At Binghampton, N. Y., fiifty persons were killed, and as many injured, a dozen or more fatally, in a fire which swept the four-story factory building of the Binghampton Clothing company.

Half a million dollars as a penalty and the transfer of 21,596 of the 24,500 shares of stock in the Magnolia Petroleum company of Texas state from the individual control of H. C. Folger, Jr., and John D. Archbold to a trustee mutually agreed upon was accepted by the state of Texas in settlement of the $102,000,000 penalty and ouster suit instituted recently by the state attorney general against the Magnolia and Corsicana Petroleum companies of Texas, the Standard Oil companies of New Jersey and New York and 28 invividuals. Judge Austin was annointed trustee.

Attended by thousands of mourners, many of them relatives or close friends of the victims, the funeral of the twenty-one unidentified dead, who lost their lives in the Binghampton Clothing company fire, was held at Binghampton, N. Y. Services were held in the opera house, clergymen of all religious denominations taking part in the exercises. A special trolley funeral car bore the twenty-one caskets to Spring Forest cemetery. Firemen and policemen bore the coffins to the graves.

In Chicago true bills, charging complicity in incendiary fires, were voted by the grand jury against Joseph Fish, wealthy clubman, public fire insurance adjuster, and nine others, two of whom are reported to be women. The action followed the tsetimony of Mrs. Fannie Korshak, whose husband is a fugitive from justice in connection with indictments previously returned by the grand jury as a result of its investigation of the alleged "arson trust."

The London Pekin correspondent of The Daily Telegraph sends the following dispatch: "The declaration of martial law here shows that the northern government admits its desperate position. This synchronizes with the creation of a complete confederate government at Nanking. Parliament has not yet been dissolved, but it is unlikely that it will survive. The war news is baffling, but foreign military experts now believe the southerners are in far greater strength than has been supposed.

The European concert is faced by a most delicate and difficult suitation, requiring the exercise of the utmost diplomatic tact, if Europe is not to be plunged into a general war by the Turkish reoccupation of Adrianople and Kirk Killisseh. Burgaria, helpless, sees the fruits of her dearly won victories snatched from her hand, and, while negotiation for an armistice are proceeding in a leisurely manner at Nish, the Greeks and Servians continue to push their advantage.

Washington

After six weeks spent in investigating agricultural conditions in Europe, with particular reference to farm credits and farm co-operation, the commission appointed by President Taft, with another from the Southern Commercial congress, returned to the the city of Washington.

Strong representations, the most drastic in phraseology that have been made since the present administration came into power, were made to the Huerta government in Mexico. The United States government demanded not only the prompt arrest, courtmartial and punishmnet of the Mexican federal soldiers who shot Charles B. Dixon, an American immigration official at Juarez, Mexico, but the immediate release of Charles Bissell and Bernard McDonald, mining managers, imprisoned by federal soldiers at Chihuahua City, and said to be threatened with execution. So serious were these incidents regarded in official circles that they overshadowed largely the theoretical considerations of policy which the visit of Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson has brought to a climax.

President Wilson has received further assurances from leaders in congress that his program of currency reform will receive favorable action at this session of congress. These assurances have been made in the face of the sharp split amongst the Democrats of the house banking and currency committee, and in spite, also, of the desire of many Democrats in the senate to delay currency action until the December session.

Representative Clark of Florida introduced a concurrent resolution reaffirming the Monroe doctrine. It was directed particularly against "people with whom the Caucasian cannot and will not assimilate." Ther esolution was referred to the foreign affairs committee.

Postmaster General Burleson appeared before the senate committee on postoffice and post roads to explain new regulations in the parcel post service to become effective August 15. He indicated that the service will ultimately be extended to handle 100-pound packages as demanded by various parcel post experts in congress.

The first payment of $250,000 to Panama for the annual rental of the canal zone has been made. The installment was actually duel ast February, though it was deferred for determination whether it should go to Panama or the parent state, Colombia. The money was paid to a representative of William Nelson Cromwell of New York, agent for the Panama government.

Secretary Houston announced that hereafter the department of agriculture would send a weekly letter to its 35,000 townships and 2,800 county correspondents of the department, giving the latest agricultural information of value to the farmer. The letters will treat of crop conditions and prices, the discovery of new plant or animal pests, pure food decisions and those which affect users of irrigated lands and the national forests and any other work of the department which can benefit the farmer.

Federal experts estimate that a loss of almost $108,000,000 a year to cotton growers in Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee and Florida would result from the adoption of the plan proposed recently by Senator Smith of South Carolina, which contemplated the establishment of a belt in which the growth of cotton should be prohibited by law, in an effort to keep the cotton boll weevil from spreading eastward into the Atlantic coast states. This conclusion has been reached by the department of agriculture, based on provision for the elimination of a strip about 100 miles.

Taking It Out of Clients.

A well-known Milwaukee attorney had just returned from a northern Wisconsin city where he tried a case. His partner was just closing a minor legal affair as the attorney entered the office.

There had been a long night ride to Milwaukee and the attorney was greatly exercised over the poor railroad accommodations on the train.

"Well, I just cleaned this little matter up today," said the partner.

"How long did it take you?"

"About two hours. What shall we charge our client?"

"—— these railroads, anyway. Charge him $1,000."

WOE BROUGHT MOTHER FOX

Tragic Moments for Vixen After She Had Carried Poisoned Food to Her Litter.

On one of the large estates in Hingham, a few weeks ago, a fox was found to be destroying poultry. The time of the raids, and their boldness, were proof enough that the fox must be a female with young. Poisoned meat was prepared for her, and at once the raids ceased. A few days later one of the workmen of the estate came upon the den of a fox, at the mouth of which lay dead a whole litter of young ones. They had been poisoned. The mother had not eaten the doctored food herself, but had carried it home to her family. They must have died in the burrow, for it was evident from the signs that she had dragged them out into the fresh air to revive them, and deposited them gently on the sand by the hole. Then in her perplexity she had brought various tidbits of mouse and bird and rabbit and placed at their noses to tempt them to wake up out of their strange sleep and eat as hungry children ought to eat. Who knows how long she watched beside the still forms, and what her emotions were? She must have left the neighborhood soon after, however, for no one has seen her since about the estate.—Dallas Lore Sharp, in the Atlantic.

HOW TO TREAT PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS

For pimples and blackheads the following is a most effective and economical treatment: Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment, on the end of the finger, but do not rub. Wash off the Cuticura Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. This treatment is best on rising and retiring. At other times use Cuticura Soap freely for the toilet and bath, to assist in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

Why She Was Timid.

They stood upon the crest of the mountain, and gazed off through the purple distances.

"Honey plum," he whispered, bending closer, "give me a kiss—just one?"

"No, Harold," she answered timidly, "some one will hear me. There may be other ears around."

"Other ears? Why should you think so, fairest flower?"

"Oh, because I have so often heard of mountain ears I thought perhaps there might be some around and—"

But just then there was a mighty crash.

A mountain goat had heard the awful pun and jumped over the cliff.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and a FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Cotton Prospects; Weeks Summary

The crop did well over much of the cotton area. There was deterioration in certain sections of Texas and in parts of Oklahoma, but the loss is in its incipiency and can readily be regained with rains. Most Texas reports say that rain by August 10 will insure a good crop.

In all other states there was enough rainfall to supply abundant moisture, save over northern Mississippi and Tennessee, where rain is not yet a necessity. It is thus true that the crop made normal progress over 75 to 80 per cent of the area, and a small or moderate deterioration over the remaining 20 to 25 per cent.

Very excellent conditions as to cultivation are well maintained and the crop is being laid by or given the final cultivation over large areas. The soil is in fine tilth add the fields free of grass.

The plant ia taking on fruit well in all sections and many note this function as being exceptionally well performed. There is no shedding except in Texas.

Open bolls are reported in middle Alabama, and picking has become general in southwestern Texas. Weevils appear to be doing rather less damage than heretofore.

In Memoriam.

On Saturday, July 12 at 2 o'clock the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Bookholdt, and took from their midst their little girl, Pearlie, aged 6 years. She was sick 20 days and bore her suffering without a murmur. Weep not dear parents; little Pearlie is at rest. Do not grieve for her, but prepare to meet her at the golden gate, where she will meet you to enjoy the angelic and glorious happiness of eternity. You will miss her sweet and cheerful face but remember the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, and we have but to submit to His will. All was done for her that loving hands could do, but to no avail. She was laid to rest in Bethany cemetery. The funeral was conducted by Rev. I. Bice.

Thou art gone, our precious darling,
Never more we'll see thy face,
Till we meet thee over yonder
In that happy dwelling place.

What We Believe

The officials of the L. & N. do not, can not believe, that any considerable number of the good people of Alabama share the feeling of bitterness expressed against the L. & N. by certain individuals and newspapers.

The L. & N. supplies unexcelled service at reasonable rates.

The L. & N. has contributed, and continues to contribute, to the development and upbuilding of every enterprise in the State.

From the resorts along the gulf coast, through the fertile fields and farms, to the mountains rich in coal and iron, men of expert ability in the employ of the L. & N. have left the imprint of their constructive efforts.

The L. & N. is more dependent upon the territory through which its lines operate than that territory is dependent upon the L. & N. Consequently the L. & N. exerts its best efforts to conserve and promote the welfare of its territory.

The very life blood of the L. & N. comes from the farms, the mines and the manufacturing enterprises. The L. & N. is anxious to replenish as generously as lies in its power the resources it requires, to the end that a healthy circulation may be maintained to nourish growing industry.

We call upon the thoughtful citizens of Alabama to give careful consideration to the issues involved.

Insofar as the L. & N. injures the territory through which it operates, to the same extent will the L. & N. be injured.

Insofar as the territory through which it operates inflicts injury on the L. & N., to the same extent will the territory be injured.

This is a law of business.

The L. & N. seeks to be regarded as a co-worker for the general good. It will go to any reasonable, even generous ends, to promote the welfare of all the people.

But we submit that we know far better than can any individual or newspaper to what extent we can go in our work of development and sound rate making, and yet remain within the domain of good business. The operation of a railroad is our life work.

Serious Runaway On 2nd Avenue.

Frightened Horse Cuts A Lively Caper; Does Severe Damage.

Tuesday evening the town of Clanton was thrown into considerable excitement by a runaway horse which did quite a deal of damage before his career ended.

The steed, a spirited animal belonging to Dr. Hopkins, broke loose from a hitching post at the home of Dr. Matthews and ran east along Second Avenue. When he reached the railroad a southbound passenger train just arriving from Birmingham frightened him again and he turned back up the side walk and flayed things as he went.

Several awnings in front of the stores on West Side were torn down and quite a number of people made narrow escapes. A wagon coming along the street loaded with cross ties was upset and torn to pieces. Fortunately the horse was not hurt with the exception of a few bruises and no person was hurt at all; but that end os town looked like a cyclone had struck it.

Brakeman Killed At The Dam

Meager information has been received in Clanton of the death of Mr. Ed Carter, a brakeman out at the dam which occured Saturday. We have been unable to ascertain just how the accident happened but it seems that when the engine turned over he was caught between two cars and mashed to death.

First Cotton of the Season Open

J. W. Henley of Fairview Settlement Sent Union-Banner First Open Boll

Mr. J. W. Henley, of near Clanton, one of the progressive farmers of Chilton county, sent us last Friday a full opened and well matured boll of 1913 cotton. This is perhaps the first boll of the season in this section of the State. Mr. Henley is among the many up-to-date farmers of Chilton county, and not only has a large field of this fine cotton but has other crops in proportion. This shows you what Chilton connty farmers are doing. Other farmers should pattern after Mr. Henley.

The woman who did the killing was lodged in jail at Clanton.

APPLICATION FOR PARDON.

Application will be made to the Board of Pardon of Alabama for the pardon or parole of Thos. Mims, who was sentenced by the Circuit Court of Chilton county, spring term 1913, to the penitentiary for four years, upon a conviction for larceny.

The Facts in the Case

YOU send your children to the school room to be instructed by the teachers, because the teachers know more than your children. If they are sick, you call a physician, because he knows how to give medicine to relieve the suffering. When you want a box of pills, you go or send to a drug store for them, not to a grocery store, and if you desire the latest style lady's hat, you call at a first-class millinery establishment instead of the meat market.

In these things you are wise, then why have them call at a dry goods store, or go yourself for Hardware, when a regular Hardware man learns more about Hardware in a year than a dry goods fellow can know in a life time.

At a Furniture store is certainly the place to buy Furniture. Our Furniture department is separate and apart, and occupies the entire second floor.

If you need Hardware, Furniture, Furnishings, Farm Implements, Mill Supplies, Brick, Lime, Cement, Paints, Sash and Doors, you cannot do better than come to us. This is our life, our trade, our business. In buying, we consider quality, price and appearance. Trade with us and you get the benefit of our efforts, experience and price.

HUERTA DETERMINED TO FIGHT TO FINISH

HIS REFUSAL TO RESIGN HAS BECLOUDED THE ISSUE.

BROOKS NO INTERFERENCE

Gen. Hay, Representative of Rebels, Will Appear Before Senate Foreign Relations Committee and Argue Their Cause.

Washington. — Official Washington read with keen interest the declaration of Aureliano Urrutia, Mexican minister of the interior, that Provisional President Huerta would not resign and, moreover, would brook no interference by foreigners in his administration.

While no plan that the American government has had under serious consideration involved any direct interference in Mexican affairs, the adimtted attitude of the administration here is one of unalterable opposition to the recognition of the Huerta regime.

Without the recognition of the United States, leading Mexicans hitherto have claimed Mexico would not be able to extricate itself from its financial difficulties. On this account it had been believed here that pressure would be brought to bear to persuade Provisional President Huerta to resign.

The announcement that he has determined not to do so has beclouded the situation and has spurred the constitutionalists to further activity to obtain the repeal of the embargo on arms. They claim that if they do not get arms the revolution will be a protracted struggle. With munitions of war they say they can quickly bring matters to a crisis.

Gen. Eduardo Hay, who has been selected by the constitutionalists as their spokesman, now is in Washington and will present this view to the senate foreign relations committee this week. Having taken part in many battles, Hay is familiar with the military situation in Mexico and is prepared to answer al questions as to the aims and aspirations of the revolutionists.

DEATH LIST NOW NINETEEN

Of Dead Seven Were Mine Officials Making Inspection.

Tower City, Pa.—The number of dead as a result of the double explosion at the East Brookside colliery of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company was increased to 19 Sunday by the death at Pottsville of John Lorenz, mine superintendent.

Daniel Farley and John Fessier, fire bosses, are still in the workings in spite of the unusual efforts which have been made to rescue them. It is now almost certain that they are buried under a big fall of rock near the tunnel, where the first explosion occurred. A large force of men has been working in this mass of rock in an effort to recover the bodies.

Harry Schoffstall, night inspector, who was the only one of the first rescuing party to escape with his life, is still living, and chances are good for his recovery.

"MULE BALK" THE LATEST

Washington Society Has Satire on Modern Dances.

Washington.—The "mule balk," a satire on the modern dance, is Washington's latest contribution to modern dances. It originated in the army set, and Miss Janet Allen, the society Wild West rider, has been hailed as its inventor. Miss Allen laughingly denies the impeachment, however.

The first movement of the mule balk is that of the turkey trot, with a swift reversal into the horse trot and tango steps. Suddenly an alluring dreamy waltz is begun by the band. The dancers stop short and refuse to dance a step. In vain the music wooes them; they will have none of the time-honored waltz. With a loud crash the music then breaks into a turkey trot, the floor wakes again to life and "everybody's doin it."

AUTOPSY WORTH $25,000.

Fort Smith, Ark.—To determine whether or not Bert Hoffman, president of the Arkansas Mutual Insurance Company of this city, who met death while swimming in a creek near Dora, Ark., two weeks ago, died from drowning or from heart disease, his body was exhumed, the heart removed and examined by a corps of physicians employed by insurance companies who hold large policies on Hoffman.

29 ARE INJURED.

Bus, Avoiding Child, Turns Over on Occupants.

Hammond, Ind.—Twenty-nine persons, all of Chicago, were inured when Martin Roy, a chauffeur of the autobus in which they were riding, drove into a culvert to avoid running down four-year-old Mary Bankowhowas here Sunday.

The bus turned over on the occupants but with one exception none of the injuries were serious.

FOUR KILLED AS HOP PICKERS RIOT

AUTO LOAD OF OFFICERS FIRED UPON BY STRIKERS.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY IS SLAIN

Officers Worsted in First Attempt to Arrest I. W. W. Leaders, Return With Reinforcements and Are Met by Angry Men.

Sacramento, Cal.—A special train, carrying five companies of militia, has been ordered to leave here for Wheatland, Cal., where four men, including District Attorney Manwell of Yuba county, were killed Sunday in a revolver battle between 100 striking hop pickers and a sheriff's posse. The militiamen are equipped with 200 rounds of ammunition to the man and three days' rations.

According to reports reaching here from Wheatland, the hop pickers held a meeting and formulated demands for increased wages. All were employes of the Durst ranch, which lies partly within Wheatland township.

When Durst refused their demands the men became abusive. Anderson sought to arrest a leader, but was disarmed and beaten.

Voss gathered a posse and hastened to Wheatland by automobile from Marysville, the county seat. District Attorney Manwell accompanied him. When the machines reached Wheatland, Voss and four deputies approached the rioters, who had gathered near the Dusrt ranch house.

Voss seized one man and started toward the motor cars. The priosner's friends then leaped at the sheriff and beat him into unconsciousness.

The deputies charged and a volley of shots was exchanged. Manwell, standing by the automobiles, and Reardon, a deputy sheriff, were almost instantly killed, as were two negro hop pickers. Nels Nelson, a wealthy farmer; Constable Anderson, two women and three men bystanders were wounded. Several shots, it is reported, were fired into Voss' body as he lay unconscious on the ground.

Mosquitoes Carry Disease.

Washington.—Mosquitoes were branded the "king disease carriers" of the insect world by Dr. Nelson Du Val Brecht, formerly of the public health service. Beside their implements of torture, these insects carry about with them germs of leprosy, yellow fever, malaria, breakbone fever, typhoid and five other brands of malady. Dr. Brecht awarded the gnat second honors of a disease carrier.

$100,000 for Irish Party.

Boston.—Pledges that the balance of the fund of $100,000 promised last year toward the support of the Irish Nationalist party by the United Irish League of America would be sent as soon as possible were cabled to John Redmond at the close of a meeting of the national executive committee of the league, held here.

TEN POLICEWOMEN NAMED.

They Will Be Assigned to Parks and Beaches at Chicago.

Chicago.—Ten policewomen were added to Chief McWeeney's staff by Mayor Harrison just before leaving for his summer home at Hutton Mountain, Michigan. The women "officers" will be assigned to the bathing beaches, the small parks, playgrounds and the juvenile court. The women will receive a salary of $75 a month.

Suffragettes Stop Service.

23 Miners Entombed.

Glasgow.—The Mavis Valley pit of the Cadder colliery, 12 miles from this city, caught fire Sunday, and 23 miners are hopelessly entombed in it.

CURRENCY BILL IS READY FOR REPORT

THREE DEMOCRATS OF THE HOUSE COMMITTEE OPPOSED TO IT.

FEW CHANGES WERE MADE

Federal Reserve Board Will Remain Under Government Control, but a Board of Bankers Will Be Named.

Washington.—Consideration of the administration currency bill was practically concluded Friday by the Democrats of the house banking currency committee, after more than five weeks of constant and stormy discussion. The bill will go to the caucus with the disapproval of at least three members of the committee, it was virtually certain.

As closed the bill differs little in its essentials from the administration measure framed by Representative Glass, Chairman Owen of the senate committee and Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, and approved by President Wilson.

Complete government control of the federal reserve board, which will direct the new banking and currency system, deemed by the president the all-important factor of the bill, was retained At the eleventh hour Democratic members of the committee incorporated an amendment providing for an advisory board of bankers to "advise" the federal reserve board. This amendment was in the nature of a compromise with the banking interests, which protested vigorously against the exclusively governmental feature of the control of the board.

Another important amendment incorporated in the bill altered the rediscount section conferring the power to require federal reserve banks mutually to rediscount paper. A change was made in the division of the earnings of the federal reserve banks created by the law. Originally the banks were allowed a yearly cumulative dividend of five per cent and a surplus equal to 20 per cent of the paid-in capital stock. All earnings above these amounts reverted to the government.

As amended the balance of earnings after the five per cent dividend and the 20 per cent surplus will be paid 60 per cent to the government to be used as a sinking fund to reduce the national debt and 40 per cent to be divided among the members banks in proportion to their balances in the federal reserve bank concerned.

As finally passed, the reserve section requires that after a period of gradual changes, the country banks must keep their 15 per cent reserves either in their own vaults or in the federal reserve bank of the district in which they are located.

Five Fatally Burned.

Hymera, Ind.—Five men were probably fatally burned and 18 others dangerously hurt in a dust explosion at Jackson Hill No. 2 mine, three miles east of here, late Friday. It is believed the dust was fired by a "windy" shot.

WILL GO TO PENSIONS.

Legislature Could Not Decide What to Do With Standard Fine.

Austin, Tex.—Dispute in the legislature over whether the $500,000 recently paid the state of Texas as a fine by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey should be used for schools or other purposes consumed so much time that the legislature's time limit for disposing of the money expired. The state treasurer Wednesday deposited the money to the credit of the state's general fund.

Nine Ways to Cheat.

Chicago—Nine ways in which a voting machine might be tampered with and so controlled that the intentions of the voter would not register as he desired were demonstrated Friday by Prof. C. E. DePuy of Lewis Institute before a legislative investigation committee. By means of a series of wire clips, bent wires, pieces of "angle steel" or ordinary rubber bands, used on the front of the machine, the witness said, he could defeat the will of the voters of the entire city.

146 HURT IN WRECK ON PENNSYLVANIA

ONLY ONE KILLED AND BUT ONE DANGEROUSLY INJURED.

EXPRESS HITS PASSENGER

Both Trains Were of Steel Construction and This Probably Accounts for the Small Number of Fatalities. Disregarded Signals.

Altoona, Pa.—One man was killed and 146 passengers and trainmen were injured, only one dangerously, Wednesday, when a fast express crashed into the rear end of a passenger train on the Pennsylvania railroad at Tyrone, 15 miles east of this city. All of the injured excepting eleven, who are being cared for in the Altoona hospital, were able to continue their journey. Both trains were of steel construction and this is believed to explain the fact that there were not more casualties.

George K. Funk, engineer, of Harrisburg, Pa., was the only person killed.

West-bound passenger train No. 15, known as the Pittsburg Express, which arrived at Tyrone four minutes late, had already started out of the station when No. 13, a fast express from Philadelphia for the west, traveling about 30 miles an hour, came around a curve and plunged into the parlor car on the rear of No. 15.

The locomotive and three cars of No. 13, and the front mail car of the Pittsburg express were derailed. When his locomotive lurched over Funk was crushed against the railroad track and instantly killed. Most of the passengers were in the last two cars of train No. 15, which received the brunt of the shock.

PARDONED AFTER 34 YEARS

Haynes Regrets to Leave the Maine Prison.

Thomaston, Me.—Samuel B. Haynes of Detroit walked out of the prison gates Wednesday after serving 34 years for the murder of James L. Robbins, a policeman, at Rockland in 1879. At midnight his sister, Mrs. F. H. Rogers of Detroit, telephoned the prisoner that Gov. Haines had pardoned him.

"The battle is won," Haynes told Warden Ham, "but I hate to leave."

Outside the prison he held a reception for a big crowd who knew him as a model prisoner.

"I am willing to forgive and forget," he said. "The prison has been a good thing for me, but I feel that I have paid my bill to society. I have been in prison since I was 17 years old, but I have spent the better part of my life trying to be useful. There is no failure in such a life as that."

WOMEN AFTER RICH YOUTH

Has to Lock Himself in Room to Keep Them Away.

New York.—Sudden news that $10,000,000 had been left him by a forgotten uncle made I. Maxwell Rooten, not yet 21, so popular in his East Side neighborhood Friday that young women of his acquaintance fought among themselves and with a policeman who vainly tried to keep them from entering Rooten's house.

The boy shrank from his congratulators and locking himself in a room with a telephone sent a request for more policemen. He timidly begged a reporter not to let out the secret of his good fortune for fear the girl whom he wants to marry might not like it and might decide to refuse him.

"Under the terms of the will," he said, "I cannot get the money unless I am married by my twenty-first birthday and that comes in five months."

STALLED BY GRASSHOPPERS.

Rock Island Train Delayed 40 Minutes Near Dodge City, Kas.

Dodge City, Kas.—"Train No. 564, delayed 40 minutes; stalled by grasshoppers."

This was the report received at the Rock Island depot here Wednesday. The train was coming out of Ford when it struck a deep cut where "hoppers" covered the rails. As the engine wheels crushed the insects, the rails became so slippery that the drivers spun round and the train stopped.

ELEPHANTS ON RAMPAGE.

Break Loose During an Electrical Storm at Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man.—During a severe electrical storm early Wednesday a herd of elephants, with a circus showing here, broke loose, wrecked half of the circus tents and thousands of seats, damaged a number of small buildings and caused a panic in the neighborhood. The elephants were captured several times, only to break their bonds again.

Women Convict Woman.

St. Louis, Mo.—The first women's jury to be impaneled in Illinois since the recent enfranchisement of the sex in that state convicted a woman in a justice court in East St. Louis, Ill. Mrs. Blanche Thomas, charged with disturbing the peace, asked for a jury of women. A fine of $5 and costs was fixed by the jury. Five of the jury were stenographers, one was married and four were under the legal age. The trial lasted three hours, and it took the jury less than 10 minutes to agree upon a verdict.

LEADING MARKETS CONTINUE QUIET

Encouraging Reports of Business Conditions Predominate. Crop Outlook Good.

New York.—Dun's review of trade says:

Encouraging reports of business conditions predominate, and the growth of confidence is evidenced by increased preparations for fall and winter trade. All the leading markets continue quiet, yet in some instances the mid-summer recession has been of shorter duration than customary.

The prevailing optimistic feeling was apparently not impaired by the reported damage to corn, and the agricultural situation is still promising. Gradual recovery in spring wheat is accompanied by splendid harvesting returns from the southwest.

The possibility of a strike on the Eastern railroads is now more remote, but financial sentiment was somewhat disturbed by the reduction in the dividend of a prominent system, although such action was not entirely unexpected. The revenues of a few roads show a falling off, but in the aggregate railway earnings continue to exceed the total of a year ago.

Failures this week numbered 256 in the United States, against 291 last year and 130 in Canada compared with 24 a year ago.

New York.—Bradstreet's review of trade says:

Trade reports still present mixed aspects, with perhaps a sharper tendency to temporarily reflect quiet. In the East high rates for money and tariff uncertainties continue to act as repressive influences, while in the West adverse news of the corn crop has induced some hesitancy.

On the other hand, Southwestern advices indicate that house trade has expanded, and feeling as to the future is decidedly optimistic, buoyancy being imparted by the tendency to increase estimates of wheat yields. At the same time trade in the South appears to be improveing, and sentiment is certainly better.

As regards the leading crops, it seems certain that the wheat yields will be of record proportions, that cotton will furnish a large crop, but that oats, hay and corn will be shorter than last year, when all three were, however, record breaking.

Business failures for the week were 248, which compares with 224 in 1912.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week aggregate 6,775,173 bushels this week last year.

Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America

Matters of Especial Moment to the Progressive Agriculturist

The surest thing to kill joy is to find fault.

Cultivate patience. Fretting never brought rain or stopped it.

Some women would be unhappy if they had nothing to complain of.

There are many good intentions that cannot be put into execution for lack of funds.

What profiteth a man if he raise the best crop in the county and lose money in the selling?

Maybe it is because most of us are fond of crowds that there is so much room at the top.

Institutions of industry, creative and co-operative, is what makes greatness everywhere.

If you say sour things, say them in such a sweet way as to make a sort of verbal lemonade.

Talking back is not impudence when the land replies to seeding and cultivating with a bumper crop.

The man who has no use for the opinions of others never has any of his own that other people want.

Some farmers act as though they could give nature cards and spades and then beat her in the game of regulating the weather.

There is no use trying to run away from trouble. The merchant, the banker and every other business man has his "trials and tribulations."

We have found that one of the best ways to get along with work is to never let it hurry you. This means keep well ahead of the hounds.

It is easy to be thankful when we are prosperous, but it takes real optimism to be thankful things are no worse when we suffer heavy losses.

Too many of us are like the man on the jury who complained that "the eleven other fellows were the most stubborn fellows he ever saw."

The man who keeps his children out of school in order to save a few dollars is a thief, robbing his own flesh and blood of its opportunity to make a success in life.

If we would keep the boys at home, we must meet the demands for them that come from the cities. We must give them a chance to make money for themselves and broaden their opportunities for enjoying everything good in life within their reach.

MORE CO-OPERATION NEEDED

Strict Conformity to Business Principles and Loyal Support of Officers Are Essential.

Never before has there been a greater demand for the right kind of co-operation among farm communities. It is indeed a broad subject and so many factors enter into it that it is impossible to lay down any definite rules that can be followed which will bring about immediate success, but there are many plans of co-operation that will bring immediate results. The farming community that is doing the largest amount of things in farm development, are the sections where co-operation among farmers is being followed.

We believe that the basis of commercial co-operation in any line is confidence in the organization, says the Western Farmer. Any organization to succeed must be run strictly on business lines. Where Farmers' Co-operative societies have been successful in the United States through strict conformity to business principles with the organization handled by competent men and given loyal support by the members. It is true that often these organizations meet with failure, but where one organization fails many more succeed and each year sees a greater success. During the past ten years the work of co-operation has been felt not only in the marketing of crops, but in the securing of legislation which directly affects the farmer and his needs. Through this co-operation have come co-operative grain warehouses, co-operative creameries, mutual fire insurance companies, fruit shipping associations, and farmers' telephone companies. The reason that the work of co-operation is progressing is due to the fact that greater attention is being paid to the business side of the organization. A thorough understanding should first of all be understood regarding the basis upon which the organization is formed.

A co-operative start has been made in this work of co-operation throughout the country, and this work is being felt. Western Farmer again urges the farmers to get together on issues that concern their business. They need to do this for protection and to promote their profits in the sale of farm products. They need to pull together. Co-operation among the farmers means better business methods, applied just like the other fellows, who are succeeding, apply them. Did you ever stop to think that the farmers pay about one-half of all the taxes collected and if any class of people need co-operation the farmers are the ones. The heads of the farm home should be thinking about the co-operative movement and get in touch with everything that tends toward the unification of the interests in which the farmer and his family is connected

FARMERS LACK IN CAUTION

Ordinary, Every-Day Word, but One Fraught With Deep and Far-Reaching Importance.

To Officials and Members of the Union:

Caution. Just an ordinary, every day word, but one fraught with deep and far-reaching importance.

It is the one thing farmers lack above all other qualities. Caution they have in plenty in certain directions, but usually not in the direction it should be applied.

They are over-cautious about honestly accepting plans and organizations within their own ranks, calling for co-operation, mutual aid and self-sacrifices. I know, of course, it is due in a measure to the fact that his bump of caution has become abnormally developed.

But, on the other hand, the wordy, windy, promising politician seems able to wipe out this bump of caution every election day. Fooled time and time again by broad promises before the election, only to be forgotten and ignored after the election, yet the farmer's caution bump fails to show when the same deceiving, selfish politician comes forward again and with the same old empty promises arouses his enthusiasm to high pitch, to such a high pitch that he throws caution, the absolute knowledge that he is dealing with a rascal, to the winds and votes once more for the idle promiser.

Now, as I stated, farmers are slow to accept and take hold of movements within their own ranks for self-advancement, because they have been fooled in the past. Why the same theory don't work with them as regards this scheming politician is something too profound for my unraveling. But the truth of it is too well known for argument.

That old designing, crafty politician is mighty humble, mighty cordial, eager to promise anything asked when before you seeking your vote. But just see him in Washington, as I have. There he laughs at your gullibility; sneers at your confidence in his promises; openly flaunts you and your cause.

You are waking up a bit along that line, I'll confess, but only after constant hammering on you. Some men who have stood in places of power for years and sneered at you and your needs have felt your righteous wrath and gone into the oblivion they have long merited.

But others remain. Many of them are going to come as humble supplicants for your suffrage next year. They wear the outward garb and semblance of real and true friends to you and your cause. They are oily, shrewd, plausible. Every artifice of the designing self-seeker will be used on you again.

Will you stand for him? Will you let that sort fool you yet again? Oh, my credulous brother, wake up, wake up! Put on your thinking cap, read, study the public career of the man seeking your franchise. Know, don't guess, that he is your real friend and that he will do all in his power honestly to make good on his promises to you.

Do this and you will get true friends in the high places. You will get legislation long denied you, because you haven't had some one to press your cause like the trusts and corporations have had.

Come out of your sleep, brother. Quit letting them fool you.

C. S. BARRETT.

Union City, Ga.

Tent Caterpillar.

The tent caterpillar is one of the most annoying of tree fruit pests. Much of the annoyance may be avoided by collecting the eggs during the winter. These are laid in masses on twigs. They can be easily seen. Never burn them. Place them where the young worms cannot escape, but where the parasites that are nearly always present can fly away. These parasites will take care of the caterpillars that are missed when the eggs were collected.

Selecting Good Layers.

At the Maine Experiment station they select the good layers by picking up the pullets which soonest show red combs and begin to sing, as pullets do when getting ready to lay, and putting them in a flock by themselves. By picking out these early layers they got a flock which averaged 180 eggs during their first laying year and a flock of that kind is good enough for anyone.

Air Blisters in Chicks.

Air blisters often show themselves in young chicks. The skin puffs out and seems like a bladder of wind. It comes on the abdomen, sides and under the wings and neck. Prick the blisters with a needle to let out the air. Add carbonate of iron, alternating with granulated charcoal daily in the food. The ration should be oatmeal principally with plenty of sharp grit within reach.

Proper Selection.

Select cows of the breed and type that best meets your needs and never attempt to mix the breeds. Size accompanied by a certain degree of refinement is desirable in the dairy cow and it can be obtained more surely and easily by sticking to one breed and using sire from similar lines of breeding until prepotency is established in the herd.

Federal Judge Grubb at Birmingham, Ala., fined the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association $2,500 for contempt of court in violating a decree issued in 1911, commanding the organization to abide by federal autitrust laws. President J. H. McLaurin of Jacksonville, Fla., was fined $1,000. H. Lacey Hunt of Wilmington, N. C., and L. A. Melchers of Charleston, S. C., were fined $1,000 each and the costs were assessed against the corporation and the three individual defendants according to costs of their respective witnesses.

Various freaks were played by lightning during a thunder storm in Phoenix City, Ala. A horse was standing hitched in the street and lightning struck the cross bar of the shafts and reduced it to splinters, the animal not being injured in the slightest. Mrs. G. H. Clardy was lifting the lid from a rice boiler when lightning came along and rendered assistance, by knocking it from her hand. Her arm was numb for some time, but her injury was not serious. Various people were shocked, but no seriously injured.

The situation in Canton remains serious. The electric lights are cut off, and the people are fearful of mutiny. Trains, junks and other vessels leaving the city are packed with refugees. A siege of Canton is expected with the arrival there of General Chi-Kuang, commander of the government forces in the province of Kwang-Si, who is moving toward Canton with his army.

Eighteen men were killed and two seriously injured in a double explosion in the East Brookside mine of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company, near Tower City, Pa., by a double explosion of what is believed to have been dynamite and gas. Thirteen men died in the first explosion and five met death in the second blast after a heroic attempt to rescue the first victims. One of the rescuers escaped.

District Attorney Manwell and three other men of Yuba county were shot and killed and six others wounded, including two women, when a sheriff's posse endeavored to quell a hop pickers' riot at Durst's hop field in Wheatland, Cal. A special train carrying five companies of militia has left Sacramento for Wheatland. The militiamen are equipped with 100 rounds of ammunition to the man, and three days' rations.

Stroudsburg, Pa., and the Delaware Gap were the center of a storm which is said to be unprecedented in this section of the state. Seven and one-half inches of rain fell. No lives have been reported lost.

During a severe electrical storm at Winnipeg, Manitoba, a herd of eighty elephants with a circus showing there, broke loose, wrecked half of the circus tents and thousands of seats, damaged a number of small buildings and caused a panic in the neighborhood. The elephants were captured several times, only to break their bonds again. Trainers with iron bars and pitchforks at length subdued them. No other animals escaped.

One man was killed and 146 passengers and trainmen were injured, only one dangerously, when a fast express crashed into the rear-end of a passenger train on the Pennsylvania railroad at Tyrone, 15 miles east of the city. All of the injured, excepting eleven, who were being cared for in the Altoona hospitals, were able to continue their journey. Both trains were of steel construction, and this is believed to explain the fact that there were not more casualties.

Two are dead, six will die, according to attending physicians, one other is prorbably fatally burned and eleven others are seriously injured, as the result of a motorcycle accident at the Lagoon motordrome, across the river from Cincinnati. Odin Johnson of Salt Lake City, captain of the Cincinnati team, who was contesting at the motordrome, for some reason that will probably remain unknown, drove his cycle to the extreme top of the circular track, crashed into an electric light pole, broke it off and the contact of the live wire with his machine exploded the gasoline tank, throwing the burning fluid over a score of spectators.

The first bale of cotton from the crop of the year 1913 was taken to Albany, Georgia, by Frank Thomas, one of the negro farmers in Dougherty county of that state. The cotton had not been ginned, but was hurried to one of the Albany public ginneries, which immediately made ready to gin and press it. The bale was carried to A. W. Muse & Co's warehouse, where a score or more of cotton men and many merchants went to see it sampled. It will be sold and shipped. Dougherty county is the home of Deal Jackson, another negro, who has a first-bale reputation nation-wide.

Mid-summer heat, bringing to many cities temperatures as high as 106 and making the 100 degree mark common over wide areas, extended throughout the central states. General described the heat wave extended from the Rocky mountains to the Atlantic coast, but the mxaimum temperatures were reported from points between Kansas and Ohio.

Twenty-nine persons, all of Chicago, were injured when Martin Roy, a chauffeur of the autobus in which they were riding, drove into a culvert to avoid running down four-year-old Mary Banko. The bus turned over on the occupants, but with one exception none of the injuries was serious. Martin Roy was cut about the eyes and at a hospital at Hammond, Ill., it was said he may lose his sight. The party was returning from a night's outing at a Lake county summer resort.

The demolition of a portion of a mosque at Cawnpore, India, for street improvements which had caused indignation meetings to be held in many parts of India and Burma, led to serious rioting at Cawnpore. A procession of natives carrying black flags visited the mosque and began replacing theb ricks of the partly demolished edifice. An attempt to disperse the gathering resulted in a conflict with the police, who fired a volley into the crowd killing 13 per sons and wounding 30. One policeman was shot and forty others were injured.

The allies in demands presented to the Bucharest peace conference proposing the establishment of frontier, standing east from the Struma river, running midway through Roumania and reaching the Aegean sea 15 miles west of Dedeagatch. This would leave Bulgaria a coast line on the Aegean sea of less than thirty miles. Bulgaria will issue from the two wars in a little larger than when she entered into them, but she will have to abandon a large amount of terirtory to Roumania.

Washington

Keen interest has been aroused in Washington official circles by the report to the state department that Great Britain is contemplating a naval base in the Bermuda islands. It is authoritatively stated that the British government has made inquiry concerning the plans of the United States for protection of the Panama canal routes, and it has been suggested that this indicates an intention to safeguard British shipping through the isthmus as is done in the Mediterranean. Officials realize that the problem raised is a tremendous one.

News of the apearance in Venezuela of ex-President Cipriano Castro, after his five years' exile, caused something of a sensation at the state department at Washington. For the past five years the department has been keeping Castro under surveillance to prevent his returning to Venezuela, which country has been enjoying a period of unwonted prosperity and quiet since his retirement. The United States government is only represented in Venezuela at present by a legation clerk.

Secretary McAdoo prepared to distribute twenty-five to fifty millions of dollar of government funds in the agricultural regions of the South and West. The secretary is collecting information as to the relative needs of each section where harvesting is now under way or soon to begin, and expects to have the money in the banks in ample time for the movement of the crops. Treasury officials were confident that the secretarys' plan would be a powerful factor in averting or relieving the prospective tightness of money.

Consideration of the American currency bill was practically concluded by the Democrats of the house banking and currency committee after more than five weeks of constant and stormy discussion. The bill has been ordered closed and reported. It will go to the caucus with only the disapproval of three members of the committee.

Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson's conference with members of the senate committee on foreign relations resulted in stronger support for his plan to recognize the Huerta government in Mexico than he has received at any time since he reached Washington. After three hours' questioning of the ambassador, many members of the senate committee expressed the opinion that serious consideration should be given to his recommendations.

Like a giant flail, a cyclonic storm of wind, rain and hail whipped back and forth across the nation's capital, leaving death and ruin in its wake. Three dead, scores injured and hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of property destroyed, was the toll recorded in the hurried canvass made when the city aroused itself from half an hour of helplessness in the grasp of the elements. Out of a blazing sky, under which the city was sweltering with the temperature at 100 degrees, came the storm, roaring from the north, driving a mass of clouds that cast a mantle of darkness over the city.

Secretary McAdoo issued a statement flatly charging that the decline of government 2 per cent. bonds to 95 1-2—a new low record—was due "almost wholly to what appears to be a campaign waged with every indication of concerted action on the part of a number of influential New York City banks to cause apprehension and uneasiness about these bonds in order to help them in their efforts to defeat the currency bill." Banks throughout the country own almost entirely $730,882,130 of the 2 per cents. Their market value was less than when the banks bought them.

LIVE STOCK

PROFITABLE WEIGHT OF PIGS

Experiments Prove Conclusively That Animal Should Never Be Fed After Nine Months Old.

Experiments made for the purpose of determining the economic weight of a pig show conclusively that he never should be fed beyond eight or nine months old, and the largest profit is found, as a rule, in a eight not exceeding 200 pounds. What is known as the food of support, says a writer in the Farm and Home, plays a very important part in the profit and loss of large weights.

Suppose, as many farmers say, that a pig is not to be killed until he reaches 300 pounds. He must take from his food an increasing amount each day to support or maintain the weight already gained, or else he drops back. The experiments indicate that two per cent. of the live weight in food must be taken each day to support that live weight.

If the animal weighs 300 pounds this amounts to six pounds of food daily, or over 40 pounds per week, and as the only profit is the food that is applied to make new weight, it results that over 40 pounds of food are consumed per week from which no profit whatever is reaped. It follows that the more money can be made from young hogs killed at a medium weight.

OVERFEED HORSES WITH HAY

If Stomach Is Kept Full of Bulky Food Extra Work Is Imposed on Respiratory System.

Too much hay fed to the farm horse is an injury and often lessens his working efficiency, according to the Oregon experiment station. Every time a horse inflates his lungs the stomach is displaced, and if this organ is kept full of bulky food extra work is imposed on the respiratory system. Heaves, colic and other forms of indigestion are often due to this cause. There is also a waste that should be conserved.

A horse weighing 1,000 pounds will do more work and keep in better health on 15 pounds of hay daily than on 20 pounds. Feed him ten pounds at night and five pounds in the morning and he will perform more labor with greater ease than he would if hay were kept before him all the time.

A horse weighing 1,500 to 1,800 pounds does not need more than 20 pounds of hay a day, and the rest of his nutriment should be grain.

USEFUL FOR RINGING SWINE

Device Constructed on Plan of Dehorning Chute Will Hold Hogs of Different Sizes.

My hog holder is made on the plan of a dehorning chute and is the best I have yet seen. It will hold a 30-pound pig or a 400-pound hog equally well, at ringing time, writes W. C. Bufflington of Guedo Springs, Kan., in the Farmers Mail and Breeze. The frame is made of 2 by 4's bolted together at top and bottom. The lever may be shifted at the bottom to fit large or small hogs' heads. The opening in the lever and frame, which is closed over the hog's neck, is eight inches from the base. The handle is notched at its upper end into which a short piece of 2 by 4 catches to hold the lever in place when an animal is caught. This piece is hinged to the frame.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Pigs should be changed to fresh pasture frequently.

Now is the time to get cheap gains on the spring pigs.

Be sure there is plenty of fresh water in every pasture.

Look out for the ewes. Good ewes are good property, always.

Live stock on the farm will turn unmarketable feeds into money.

Every care should be taken to get the lambs to start eating grain.

If you want to have peace of mind, fix up the fence around the sheep pasture.

There is nothing like a cement hog wallow to keep the hogs contented and comfortable in hot weather.

If young pigs become blistered by the hot sun, grease their backs and put them in a shady pasture.

Inbreeding is dangerous with all types of farm stock. It always pays to get new and vigorous blood.

If you are buying a horse, get him on a slow trot. Then, if ever, he will show any lameness he may have.

A close watch should be kept upon all ewes with young lambs, to avoid loss by setbacks in lamb growth.

METHODS OF SPRAYING TREES

Maine Experimental Station Finds Combination Which May Be Used With Perfect Safety.

In response to numerous requests for information on the subject of preparing and use of lime-sulphur in orchard spraying, the Maine agricultural experiment station has issued a bulletin which goes into the matter quite fully. It says in part:

During the past few years there has been a marked change in the methods of spraying apple trees, the most important being a quite general substitution of lime-sulphur for bordeaux mixture as a fungicide. There is probably no better material than bordeaux mixture in use today for the control of apple scab, but unfortunately it is frequently the cause of serious damage to both foliage and fruit if the weather conditions are right. The circular gives a list of a large number of varieties of apples with the relative resistance of each to this spray. It is not recommended that orchardists who have been using bordeaux mixture successfully on resistant varieties change to lime-sulphur. On the other hand, those who have experienced any difficulty with it, or who are growing varieties known to be susceptible to this spray, or who are uncertain whether or not bordeaux mixture may be safely used on the varieties they have, are strongly advised to use lime sulphur. This station has found that this latter in combination with arsenate of lead may be used with perfect safety on the Ben Davis and Baldwin apple trees, while bordeaux mixture applied at the same time and in the same manner resulted in injury to foliage or fruit or both.

For the small grower or the man with but few trees it is doubtless more satisfactory to purchase one of the standard brands of commercial lime sulphur concentrates, but for one with an orchard of any size it is entirely another matter. He should purchase the raw materials and prepare the concentrate at home. The circular in question gives detailed instructions how to prepare home-cooked lime-sulphur, how to test this with the hydrometer to determine its density and gives tables for dilution of different densities for dormant sprays and for summer spraying. This latter information is also valuable to the man who purchases one of the commercial brands of lime-sulphur. The density of this also should be determined in the same manner and diluted according to the tables.

Strawberries.

The growing of the strawberry is important on the farm because it is one of the earliest fruits and it is one of the best fruits that can be grown, coming in at a time of the year when it will supply the place that nothing else will supply on the table, and we, as farmers, ought to have the best we can grow upon the farm, and a liberal supply of strawberries every year, a good, liberal planting every year, will do much toward making farm life more pleasant, more congenial, and give us something that is valuable on the table for three or four weeks.

Yield Depends on Care.

The strawberry is a plant that can be made to produce anything from one hundred to one thousand dollar's worth of fruit per acre, according to the kind of work you put on it. If you choose a good rich soil, say plowing under a crop of clover, then heavily fertilizing with well composted manure and giving it careful cultivation through the entire season, you will have your ground in a condition to produce any amount of fruit.

Don't forget the road working. Evesybody should be there.

President Wilson does not seem inclined to recognize the Huerta government in Mexico.

Huerta is determined to fight to a finish. He has refused to resign.

August 14, 15, 16, are the days for all candidates aud all prospective candidates to get in good work.

President Wilson has sent a representative to the city of Mexico, and the resignation of Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson has been accepted to take effect Oct. 14?

In 1911 Alabama raised 1,756,000 bales of cotton. It is estimated that if tne month of August is favorable the number of bales will exceed that amount this year.

A company has been organized for a large cotton oil mill at Guntersville. The paid in capital stock it is said is $20,000 and the mill will be in operation in the early fall.

The advertisement of the Chilton County Fair appears in this issue. The Fair depends largely upon what the people make it. It is a laudable enterprise and the people of the county should make the Fair for 1913 the BEST YET.

The testimony in the famous Frank trial in Atlanta for the murder of Mary Phagan, the factory girl, has been creating quite an interest thrhout the entire country. It seems that the negro sweeper is the most damaging witness against the defendant.

The analysis made of Chilton county by the bureau of soil surveys, says that about onc third of the area of the of the county is in cultivation, and that 90 per cent of the remaindar is suitable. That is a good showing for Chilton, and according to the crop situation this year if the whole county was in cultivation the yield would be immense.

There is sonsiderable talk over the country among newspaper men, state and county officials, and last but not least, candidates, about working the roads on good roads days. Some are presumably purchasing their overalls, picks, etc., getting ready for the fray. Now the thing for this class of men who are talking so much about it is for them to get down to the real thing and when those days come be there and work. If everybody will do that then some real good will be accompliched, but talk alane won't build good roads. We want to see how many officials and professional men really work on these days.

The Alabama State Exposition to be held in Montgomery from September 29 to October 4 will in many respects surpass all former fairs.

The additional exhibit of beef and dairy cattle will, in itself, be worth a trip to the fair, but this is only one of the many educational features of the 1913 exposition.

The irrigation demonstration put in by Mr. T. B. Woods, representing the United States Department of Agriculture will be something worth going hundreds of miles to see, as with this exhibit he will show how to raise full perfect crops the year round with only initial expense of installing the irrigation apparatus, which amounts to a very small figure.

The department of Domestic Science, will be of invaluable aid to both parents and children, while the pure food department will show the difference between pure and impure food products.

A great deal of money has been spent to make the educational exhibits the best that have ever been shown in the south, and no money has been spared to make the amusement features intensely interesting to young and old. The free shows, such as band concerts, fire works, horse races, motorcycle races, will be of the highest order obtainable. The shows on the Pike, for which a nominal admission fee is charged, will excel any ever put on at this exposition in the past, both in point of amusement and character.

Work at the exposition grounds is progressing rapidly, and preparations are being made to handle larger crowds than have attended previons fairs.

All the railroads and their branch lines running into Montgomery have made special rates for the Fair. Altogether this exposition promises better results than have ever been attained in former years.

Misses Celia and Margaret Mc Millan, of Columbiana, will arrive in Clanton Friday and will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Q. Wade at their pleasant home on 5th street.

Lucifer Matches Date From 1834.

Lucifer matches—that is, matches tipped with an explosive substance that bursts into flame on being struck—were first used about 1834. Many improvements have been made in matches since then, the most important of which was the invention of the safety match, striking on the box only.

CHILTON COUNTY SOIL SURVEY.

Below we are printing a part of the analysis made of Chilton county by the bureau of soil reports at Washington. This will be of interest to citizens of Chilton and we are going to print later the remainder of the report. Many advantages in our county are going unnoticed and unused. The county ranks among the best in the state.

Washington, D. C.—The report of the soil survey of Chilton county, Alabama, recently made by the bureau of soils in connection with the state department of Agriculture, will soon be issued by the United States department of agriculture. The survey was made for the purpose of showing what crops the different types of soil of the county are best adapted to, and how they should be treated and what agricultural methods should be followed in order that the maximum crop yield per acre may be obtained.

The county comprises an area of 722 square miles, or 462,080 acres. The surface features of the county vary from gently rolling and rolling in the coastal plain portion to decidedly heavy and broken in the Piedmont section. The drainage of the uplands is ample to excessive, many of the steeper slopes, particularly of the piedmont section being badly eroded, but there are large areas over which erosion has not done much damage, the slopes being smooth and well suited to cultivation. The first bottoms of the streams are subject to overflow, and much of the land remains in a soggy condition between overflows. Here artificial drainage must be resorted to if good results from crops are obtained.

The stream terraces stand above overflow. They are flat to undulating, and have good drainage in the main. The Coosa river which forms nearly the entire eastern boundary of the county, with its tributaries, drains the eastern part of the county. Six large creek streams carry off the drainage of the remainder of the county. At present considerable interest is being manifested in the opportunities offered by the Coosa River for the development of electric power plants.

Accompanying the report is a soil and typography map showing not only the location nnd extent of the various sotl types found in the county, but also the location of all farm houses, churches, schools, public roads, streams and railroads in the county.

Good Roads Days In Alabama.

The Alabama Good Roads Association which named and established August 14, 15, and 16 as Good Roads Days is making every effort possible to see that these three days are observed. A strong effort is being made to have these days declared by Governor Emmet O'Neal as public holidays. Secretary J. A. Rountree of the Alabama Good Roads Association has sent out a ringing appeal to the road organizations, Probate Judges, Boards of Revenue, and Courts of County Commissioners and Mayors, asking them to supplement the proclamations of Gov. O'Neal with proclamations of their own, asking the people to participate in the movement. Also calls upon the women of the State to assist during these days by serving dinners to the road builders. It is believed that the work done by the people of Alabama during these days will be worth $1,500,000 and that the observing of these days will make an epoch in the history of good roads in Alabama. Already the officials in over thirty counties in the state have agreed to recommend the observing of these days. Enthusiasm is growing and it is believed that by August 14th every county in the state will be in line, and the people will turn out in great numbers and put the roads of Alabama in splendid shape.

EASY RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

The Remedy That Replaces Calomel—Causes no Restriction of Habit or Diet.

It is a mistake to take calomel when your liver is lazy and needs toning up. Hundreds of people in this section have discovered that Dodson's Liver tone is a thousand times better and safer and its action is just as sure. There are none of the bad aftereffects of calomel to Dodson's Liver Tone and no danger of salivation.

For attacks of constipation or biliousness one or two spoonfuls of this mild, pleasant tasting vegetable liquid are enough and Alred Drug Company gives a personal guarantee that every bottle will do all that is claimed for it. Money back in any case where it fails.

Dodson's Liver Tone costs only 50 cents for a large bottle. Remember the name because there are any number of remedies sold in imitation of Dodson's claims. Some of them have names very similar to Dodson's Liver Tone—and are in same color package. These imitations are not guaranteed and may be very harmful. Go to Alred Drug Company and you will surely get the genuine.

To Keep Silver Bright.

Silver will keep bright, and much laborious cleaning and polishing saved, if once a week it is immersed in sour milk and left there for twenty minutes or longer. Wash it in very hot water and polish as quickly as possible. Soft pieces of old flannelette are excellent to use in wiping and polishing silver.

Really Not Up to Her.

A girl forced by her parents into a disagreeable match with an old man, whom she detested, when the clergyman came to that part of the service where the bride is asked if she consents to take the bridegroom for her husband, said, with great simplicity: "Oh, dear, no, sir! But you are the first person who has asked my opinion about the matter."

Rule for Candles.

An old rule calls for as many candles on the table as there are guests about it, and it is a rule that might be followed with interesting results. There is so much variety shown nowadays in the way in which candles are placed on a table that the candles could be put one in front of each guest, in a circle or oval or oblong about the floral centerpiece.

East Chilton.

Some of the Things I Saw and Some I Saw Not.

The health of this community is good.

The farmers seem to have finished their crops. Corn has been damaged some by wind.

How about the good roads? How many have we? If any I fail to find them. Now we have three days in August fixed for the improvement of our roads, and I will venture to say if each individual will come out and give the time asked for to the roads we will improve them 75 per cent. At the same time we are putting dollars in our pockets. Good roads mean that the one horse farmer would carry his cotton to the gin with one mule and wouldn't have to hire his neighbor's team. First, let the land owner grant such right of way as will make the road good. We will take for illustration one J. L. Jones, one whom the people can call generous hearted. Some years ago the road bed became bad on one portion of his land; he opened up his heart and requested the road crew to open up a new road. Last spring he did a similar act with instructions to cover such limit as to justify a good road bed. How many Jones have we along the road? Now boys we have only prepared a small number of back seats to be occupied. on Aug 14, 15 and 16. Let's each of us try to leave them vacant. Some who are hunting an excuse will say, "O well, that is the big man's plan; I am not going to work the road for him." This is what I call cutting off your nose to spite your face. How many of this class do you see hauling produce? The poor man is the one who gets the profit and the rich the pleasure, and this, as I see it is one of the ways by which the laboring man will be advanced to prosperity. I could tell of the increased service of teams in other states I have witnessed, but will wait until another time; however, will ask that you make inquiry of Madison, Jefferson, and Montgomery counties, this state. Now boys get busy; let's solve the road question. Then we will pick up the candidates, and decide which is the proper man.

The LADY of the MOUNT

by FREDERIC S. ISHAM

AUTHOR OF "THE STROLLERS," "UNDER THE ROSE" ETC.

ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

COPYRIGHT 1908 BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Comtesse Elise, daughter of the governor of the Mount, has chance encounter with a peasant boy. The "Mount," a small rock-bound island, stood in vast bay on the northwestern coast of France, and during the time of Louis XVI. was a government stronghold. Develops that the peasant boy was the son of Seigneur Desaurac, nobleman. Young Desaurac determines to secure an education and become a gentleman; sees the governor's daughter depart for Paris. Lady Elise returns after seven years' schooling, and entertains many nobles. Her Ladyship dances with strange fisherman, and a call to arms is made in an effort to capture a mysterious Le Seigneur Noir. He escapes. Lady Elise is caught in the "Grand" tide. The Black Seigneur rescues and takes her to his retreat. Elise discovers that her savior was the boy with the fish. Sanchez, the Seigneur's servant, is arrested and brought before the governor. Lady Elise has Sanchez set free. Seigneur and a priest at the "Cockles." Sanchez tells Desaurac that Lady Elise betrayed him, but is not believed. The Seigneur plans to release prisoners at the Mount. Lady Elise pleads with her father to spare the lives of condemned prisoners. Disguised as a peasant Lady Elise mingles with the people and hears some startling facts. A mysterious Mountebank starts a riot. He is arrested and locked up after making close observations of the citadel, and is afterwards summoned before the governor's daughter.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Mountebank and My Lady.

"The Governor's daughter!" Had the light been stronger they must have seen the start the mountebank gave. "Impossible!"

"Eh? What?" Surprised in turn, the officer gazed at him. "You dare—out with him!" To the soldiers.

But in a moment had the mountebank recovered his old demeanor, and, without waiting for the troopers to obey the commandant's order, walked voluntarily toward the door and into the passage.

"Our supper! Our supper!" A number of the prisoners, crowding forward, began once more to call lustily, when again was the disk-studded woodwork swung unceremoniously to, cutting short the sound of their lamentations.

"Dogs!" Malevolently the dwarf gazed back. "To want to gorge themselves on a holy day!"

"Pious Jacques!" murmured the commandant. "But I always said you made a model landlord!"

"When not interfered with!" grumbled the other.

"At any rate he doesn't seem to appreciate his good fortune," with a glance at the mountebank.

"No," jeering. "A gallant cavalier to step blithely at a great lady's command! 'your Ladyship overwhelms me!'" bowing grotesquely. "'Your Ladyship's condescension'—"

"Why, then, need you take me?" interposed the mountebank quickly. "Can you not tell her ladyship I am not fit to appear in her presence—an uncouth clown—"

"Bah! I've already done that," answered the commandant.

"But how came her ladyship to know of me—here—?"

"How indeed?"

"And what does she want of me?"

"That," roughly, "you will find out!" and stepped down the hall, followed by the soldiers, mountebank and dwarf, the last of whom took leave of them at the door.

Clear was the night; the stars, like liquid drops about to fall, caressed with silvery rays the granite piles. In contrast to the noisome atmosphere of the prison, faint perfumes, borne from some flowery slope of the distant shore, swept languorously in and out the open aisles and passages of the Mount. In such an hour that upper region seemed to belong entirely to the sky; to partake of its wondrous stillness; to share its mysteries and its secrets. Like intruders, penetrating an enchanted spot, now they trod soft shadows; then, clangorous, beat beneath foot delicate laceworks of light.

"Here we are!" The officer stopped. At the same time upon a nearby balcony a nightingale began to sing, tentatively, as if trying the scope and quality of its voice. "You are to go in!" he announced abruptly.

"Such a fine palace! I—I would rather not!" muttered the fellow, as they crossed an outer threshold and proceeded to mount some polished stairs.

"Stubborn dolt. Now in you march," pausing before a door. "But, hark you! I and my men remain without. So, mind your behavior, or—" A look from the commandant completed the sentence.

Alone, in an apartment of the palace, some moments later, the mountebank's demeanor underwent a quick change; he glanced hastily toward the door the commandant had closed in leaving, and then, with sudden brightening gaze, around him, as if making note of every detail of his surroundings. Set with columns of warm-hued marble, relieved with ornate carvings and designs, the spacious chamber presented an appearance at once graceful and charming. Nor were its furnishings at variance with its architectural elegance; on every hand soft colors met the eye, in rugs of ancient pattern; in tapestries, subdued; in the upholstering of Breton oak. A culminating note was in the center of the room, where a great bunch of roses opened wide their petals.

But briefly, however, the clown permitted himself to survey, or study, these details of refinement and luxury; the swift eager interest that had shone from the dark eyes gave way to an expression, lack-luster and stupid; his countenance once more resumed its blank, stolid aspect. As if unconscious of the anomalous figure he presented, mechanically had he seated himself; was gazing down, when through a doorway, opposite the one by which the commandant had left, a slender form appeared. Under the heavy, whitened lids a slight movement of the clown's eyes alone betrayed he was aware of that new presence. A moment the girl stood there, her glance resting on the grotesque, bent figure before her; then with a quizzical lift of the delicate brows she entered.

"You believe, no doubt, in making yourself at home?"

Crossing to the table, once more she stopped; her figure, sheathed in a gown of brocade of rose, glowed bright and distinct in contrast to the faint, vari-colored tints of ancient embroideries on the wall. Above, the light threw a shimmer on the deep-burnished gold of her hair; the sweeping lashes veiled the half-disdainful, half-amused look in her brown eyes. "Or, perhaps, you are one of those who think the peasants will some day sit, while the lords and ladies stand?"

"I don't know," he managed to answer, but got up, only to appear more awkward.

"You do not seem to know very much, indeed!" she returned, her tone changing to one of cold severity. "Not enough, perhaps, to perceive the mischief you may cause! That play of yours, which I witnessed today—"

"You! Today? Your Ladyship was—"

"Yes," imperiously, "I was there! And heard and saw the effect it had on the people; how it stirred all their baser passions! But you, of course, could not know—or care, thinking only of the sous!—that, instead of teaching a lesson, the piece would only move them to anger, or resentment."

"I—your Ladyship—great lords have commended the play—"

"Great lords!" she began, but stopped; regarded her listener and shrugged her shoulders.

A few moments silence lasted, the fellow apparently not knowing what to say, or if he was expected to say anything, while, for her part, the girl no longer looked at him, but at the flowers, taking one, which she turned in her fingers.

"Your Ladyship would command me—"

"To give the play no more!"

"But—" Expostulation shone from his look.

"In which event you shall be suffered to go free tomorrow."

"But my livelihood! What shall I do, if I am forbidden to earn—"

She gave him a colder look. "I have spoken to the commandant; told him what I had seen, and that I did not think you intended to make trouble. Your case will, therefore, not be reported to his Excellency. Only," with a warning flash, "if you are again caught giving the play, you must expect to receive your deserts."

"Of course! If your Ladyship commands!" dejectedly.

"I do! But, as an offset to the coppers you might otherwise receive, I will give you a sum of money sufficient to compensate you."

"Your Ladyship is so generous!" He made an uncouth gesture of gratitude and covetousness. "May I ask your Ladyship how much—"

"How much?" scornfully. "But I suppose—"

The words died away; her glance fell; lingered on the hand he had extended. Muscular, shapely, it seemed not adapted to the servile gesture; was most unlike the hand of clod or clown. Moreover, it was marked with a number of wounds, half-healed, which caught and held her look.

"Of course, I am so poor, your Ladyship—" he began, in yet more abject tone, but stopped, attracted in turn by the direction of her gaze; then, meeting it, quickly withdrew the hand and thrust it into his pocket. Not in time, however, to prevent a startled light, a swift gleam of recollection from springing into her eyes! The very movement itself—ironically enough!—was not without precedent.

"You!" She recoiled from him. "The Black—"

As a man who realizes he has betrayed himself, he bit his lips; but attempted no further subterfuge. The shambling figure straightened; the dull eyes grew steady; the bold self-possession she remembered well on another occasion again marked his bearing.

"Your Ladyship has discerning eyes," he remarked quietly, but as he spoke glanced and moved a little toward the window.

My lady stood as if dazed. He, the Black Seigneur, there, in the palace! Mechanically she raised her hand to her breast; she was very pale. On the balcony the nightingale, grown confident, burst into a flood of variations; a thousand trills and full-throated notes filled the room.

"I understand now," at length she found voice, "why that fancy came to me below, when I was listening to the play on the platform. But why have you come—to the very Mount itself?" Her voice trembled a little. "You! On the beach the people tried to stop you—"

"You saw that, too?"

"And you knew the play would make trouble! You wanted it to," quickly. "For what purpose? To get into the upper part of the Mount? To have them arrest—bring you here?" She looked at him with sudden terror. "My father! Was it to—"

A low, distinct rapping at the door she had entered, interrupted them. She started and looked fearfully around. At the same time the mountebank stepped back to the side of a great bronze in front of the balcony, where, standing in the shadow, he was screened.

"But My Livelihood!"

"Elise!" a voice called out.

The flower the girl had been holding fell to the floor.

"My—" she began, when the door opened and the Governor stood on the threshold.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Mountebank and the Governor.

In his hand the Governor held a paper; his usually austere face wore a slightly propitiatory expression, while the eyes he turned upon her, as slowly he entered the room, suggested a respite of differences. Pausing, he toyed with the missive, turning it around and around in his fingers, as if something in his thoughts were revolving with it. Had he been more watchful of her, less bent on some matter uppermost in his mind, he could not have failed to mark the pallor of his face, or the agitation written there. As it was, his glance swept without studying.

"He Had Intended No Mischief."

"I hoped to find you here," he began complacently; "hoped that you had not yet retired."

She made some faint response, but her voice, despite herself, wavered.

"Yes," he continued, "I have here to consider," indicating a paper he held, "a rather important matter." He waited a moment before adding: "A matter that concerns—you!"

"That concerns me?" Her hands tightened.

"Yes."

"Since it is important," she said hastily, "would it not—shall we not leave it until tomorrow? I—I am rather tired tonight, and—"

"What?" he returned in the same unruffled tone. "Would you postpone considering the command of the King!"

"Command!" she repeately nervously. "Of the King?"

"Or request," which is the same."

"But—" she began, and stopped; held by a sound, as of some one moving, near the window.

"Shall I read it, or—"

She had started to look behind her; but abruptly caught herself, and seemed about to frame some irrelevant response, when his voice went on: "The King desires to change the date set for your marriage with his kinsman, the Marquis de Beauvilliers."

"Change?" she echoed.

"Yes; to hasten it." If the Governor had expected from her hostility, or perverseness, he was agreeably disappointed; the girl evinced neither pleasure nor disapproval; only stood in the same attitude of expectancy, with head half turned.

"His Majesty's reasons for this step—"

"Can't we—can't we, at least, postpone considering them?"

Again he regarded her more closely. "What better time than the present?"

"But I don't want—"

"Elise!" A slight frown appeared on his brow. "His Majesty," once more looking at the paper, "hints at an important political appointment he desires to confer on the Marquis de Beauvilliers which would take him abroad; but whether as ambassador, or as governor in the colonies, his Majesty does not disclose. Obviously, however, the bestowing of the honor—a high one, no doubt!—depends on his early marriage, and a wife to grace the position. The letter," weighing it, "is a tentative one; the courteous precursor of a fuller communication when he has learned our—your—pleasure."

She did not at once express it; indeed, at the moment, seemed scarcely to have comprehended; her glance, which had swept furtively behind when he was studying the document, returned more uneasily to his, but not before he had caught the backward look.

"Well?" he said with a touch of asperity. "Well?" he repeated, when his gaze, following the direction hers had taken, paused.

Although well lighted in the center by a great Venetian candelabrum, the far ends of the spacious hall lay somewhat in obscurity; notably the space adorned with tropical plants and a life-size bronze before the entrance to the balcony. It was on this dim recess the Governor permitted his eye to rest; at first casually; then with a sudden appearance of interest.

"Eh?" he muttered, and before my lady could prevent him, if she had been mindful so to do, walked quickly forward; but as he advanced, a white figure stepped boldly out from behind that partial screen. With a sharp exclamation, which found a startled echo from the girl, the Governor stopped; stepped back as far as the table.

"What mummery is this?" His lips shaped the words uncertainly; his hand, reaching out with that first startled instinct of danger, touched the bell.

"Your Ladyship rang?" On the opposite side of the room was the door thrown suddenly open. The look of expectancy on the face of the commandant, who had so promptly appeared, gave way to one of surprise; consternation. "His Excellency!" he muttered, and mechanically saluted.

Over the Governor's visage a faint trace of relief flitted; dryly he looked from the mountebank, now erect and motionless, to the girl; but the face was averted and his Excellency could not see the sudden whiteness of her cheek; again he regarded the officer.

"You answer our summons with alacrity," he observed to this last subject of his scrutiny.

The commandant reddened. "I—your Excellency—the truth is, I was waiting without, at the door."

"What you have just stated," returned the Governor, "is patent; what I should like to know, however," with subtle change of tone, "is why you were stationed there."

"To take this mountebank player away, when it pleased her Ladyship to—"

"Yes; to take him away!" interrupted the lady in hurried tones, the agitation of which she strove to conceal. "And I was about to call him, when—"

The Governor continued to address the commandant. "You brought him here?" incisively.

"Yes; your Excellency; a stupid fellow we arrested for making trouble with his dolls, and—but with her Ladyship's permission—" awkwardly turning to the Governor's daughter, "I will explain."

To this the girl, however, made no answer; as if fascinated, watched them, the commandant, her father, the still, white figure at one side—not far away!

"I think," the Governor spoke softly, "you will do that, anyway!"

"Exactly, your Excellency! It happened in this wise," and not without evidence of constraint and hesitation, the officer slowly related the story of the disturbance on the platform; the taking into custody of the rogues and knaves, and my lady's interest in the vagabond clown whose play had occasioned the riot.

"Because it was seditious, designed to set authority at naught?" interrupted the listener, grimly eyeing for an instant the motionless form of the mountebank.

"On the contrary, your Excellency!" quickly. "Her Ladyship assured me it was the loyal and faithful sentiments of the play that caused the unruly rascallions to make trouble, and that the clown deserved no punishment because he had intended no mischief."

"Her Ladyship?" The Governor's brows went suddenly up. "How," he asked at length in a voice yet softer, "should her Ladyship have known about the 'loyal and faithful sentiments' of a piece given in the town, before a crowd of brawlers?"

"Because I was a spectator!" said his daughter, a red spot now on her cheek; changing lights in her eyes.

"A spectator," repeated, in mild surprise, the Governor.

"I will explain—after!" she added in tones, low, constrained.

"Hum!" His Excellency's glance swept to the commandant.

Small Boy (crouched up over a big book)—Mother, what are the "Wages of Sin?"

Suffragist Mother—Anything under $8 a week, my son.—Life.

She Had Such a Dreadful Accident.

An Emporia girl met a friend the other day and said, "Why weren't you at the party last night?" The friend replied, "Oh, I had a dreadful accident. I sat on the lawn and a mosquito bit me, and I could not get my new skirt on over the bite."—Kansas Ctiy Star.

Thoughtful Papa.

"I don't think your father feels very kindly toward me," said Mr. Staylate.

"You misjudge him. The morning after you called on me he seemed quite worried for fear I had not proper courtesy."

"Indeed! What did he say?"

"He asked me how I could be so rude as to let you go away without your breakfast."

Made Daddy Gasp.

A certain small Chicago laddie is quick-witted as imitative, and so given to considering himself as quite an adult in comparison with his baby brother, that he now and then talks and acts in a manner that might by the uncomprehending be judged impertinent. Not long since at the family table the boy attempted to relate a recent experience. His father, who was talking, paid no attention, and the child's anger got the better of his politeness. Raising his voice shrilly and speaking with an absurdly unconscious resemblance to his father's tone and manner under similar circumstances, he demanded.

"Papa, will you kindly close your little trap for just one moment while I get in a word!"

PANTRY CLEANED
A Way Some People Have.

A doctor said:

"Before marriage my wife observed in summer and country homes, coming in touch with families of varied means, culture, tastes and discriminating tendencies, that the families using Postum seemed to average better than those using coffee.

"When we were married two years ago, Postum was among our first order of groceries. We also put in some tea and coffee for guests, but after both had stood around the pantry about a year untouched, they were thrown away, and Postum used only.

"Up to the age of 28 I had been accustomed to drink coffee as a routine habit and suffered constantly from indigestion and all its relative disorders. Since using Postum all the old complaints have completely left me and I sometimes wonder if I ever had them."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Write for booklet, "The Road to Wellville."

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular (must be boiled).

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in an ordinary cup of hot water, which makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

WILSON RESIGNS AS AMBASSADOR

PRESIDENT SENDS JOHN LIND TO MEXICO TO ACT AS ADVISOR TO AMERICAN EMBASSY.

WILL NOT RECOGNIZE HUERTA

Understanding Is That Lind Will Be Made Ambassador When Stable Government Is Established.

WILSON'S ACTION IS CONSIDERED DENIAL OF HUERTA RECOGNITION

Washington.—Former Gov. John Lind of Minnesota has been sent to Mexico as the personal representative of President Wilson to act as advisor to the American embassy in the present situation. Announcement was made by Secretary Bryan, who said that when the President was ready to communicate with the Mexican authorities as to the restoration of peace, he would make public his views.

Secretary Bryan said Mr. Lind went without any sort of credentials and purely in an unofficial way. This was regarded in official circles as tantamount to a formal denial of recognition to the Huerta government.

Washington. — President Wilson took the first steps in the policy through which he proposes to deal with the Mexican situation. He formally accepted the resignation of Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson, to take effect on October 14, and sent to Mexico City as his personal representative—but not accredited to the Huerta government—Former Governor John Lind of Minnesota, a life long friend of Secretary Bryan. The understanding is that when a stable government is established in Mexico Mr. Lind will be formally named as ambassador.

President Wilson and Secretary Bryan had frequent conferences during the day; Ambassador Wilson had a long talk with Mr. Bryan and Chairman Bacon of the Senate foreign relations committee discussed the situation with the President at the White House. But except for the announcement of Mr. Lind's mission, no explanation of the policy to be pursued by the American government was forthcoming. The statement from Secretary Bryan read:

"Ex-Gov. John Lind of Minnesota has been sent to Mexico as the personal representative of the President to act as advisor to the embassy in the present situation. When the President is ready to communicate with the Mexican authorities as to the restoration of peace he will make public his views.

"Governor and Mrs. Lind departed for Mexico by rail to proceed via New Orleans or Galveston."

It became known that a further announcement would be made by President Wilson in a few days, possibly on the arrival of Mr. Lind in Mexico City.

It is said the President is observing with keen interest the efforts of leading Mexicans to bring about peace and will offer no suggestions until these apparently prove futile. That Mr. Lind will be empowered to explain to all inquirers the unalterable opposition of the American government to the recognition of the Huerta administration is expected to be a factor which may assist the situation.

Prominent Mexicans have taken it upon themselves to try to persuade General Huerta to retire in favor of another provisional executive acceptable to all factions.

Meanwhile arms and munitions of war from the United States will continue to be denied to the two warring forces and unless it is apparent that internal efforts to bring about peace have failed the United States will not offer its services as a mediator. Mr. Lind undoubtedly will act in that capacity when the time comes.

Twenty-Two Coal Miners Perish.

Glasgow, Scotland. — Twenty-two coal miners perished in a fire which broke out in the Mavis valley pit of the Caddoo colliery near this place. Only one man of the shaft in the pit at the time of the fire escaped with his life. A widow lost three of her sons.

Car Strike Spreads.

Philadelphia.—The strike of the car workers on the Philadelphia and Reading railroad, which has been in effect at other points on the system since June 16, spread to this city today when 250 members of the International Association of Car Workers walked out at the shops at Wayne Junction. Officers of the association claim that 1,600 men are involved at the various shops. The strikers include carpenters, air brake men and general repairmen. They object to the present piece system.

Story About the Homeliest Man.

"It is only once in a long while," Tom McNeal quotes Abe Peters as saying, "that you find a plain, homely man who is really aware of the way he looks. I knew one exception, Jed Perkins, who used to live down in southeast Kansas, was certainly the homeliest human critter I ever laid my eyes on, and what was more, Jed knew it. One winter down there Jed attended a revival meeting and the preacher, aided by the sisters and deacons, decided to make a combined effort to bring him into the fold. 'Think, brother,' said the preacher, 'of the delight of meeting your loved ones in the better land?' 'Is it your idee?' asked Jed of the parson, 'that if I do the right thing I will show up in the better land a-lookin' as natural as life?' 'Certainly, Brother Perkins,' said the preacher. 'Well,' said Jed, with a gloomy sigh, 'if that's the case, I believe I would ruther be lost. Of course, if I'm among a lot of goats it won't make so much difference, but if I have to try to work my way into good society in the New Jerusalem wearin' this face of mine and havin' to wear it always, it will be a leetle more than I kin stand.'"—Kansas City Star.

IT'S HARD TO WORK

It's torture to work with a lame, aching back. Get rid of it. Attack the cause. Probably it's weak kidneys.

Heavy or confining work is hard on the kidneys, anyway, and once the kidneys become inflamed and congested, the trouble keeps getting worse.

The danger of running into gravel, dropsy or Bright's disease is serious. Use Doan's Kidney Pills, a fine remedy for backache or bad kidneys.

A New Jersey Case

Louis Henry, 626 Grove St., Jersey City, N. J., says: "I suffered almost everything from broken down kidneys. My back was stiff and pained terribly. I was all run down. Doan's Kidney Pills gave my kidneys new life and a few boxes cured me completely."

BIRD'S TROUBLES AT AN END

Fancier's Pet, Anticipated Winner of Many Prizes, Most Effectually "Isolated."

Here is a poultry story which comes from the country. While away on a holiday a fancier who owns some valuable specimens instructed a servant—a rather new country girl—in the feeding of the birds, and gave strict directions that she was to communicate with him immediately in the event of any of them showing signs of ailment.

One day he received a letter stating that a bird of which he had had great expectations as a prize winner was unwell, and from the symptoms described the fancier concluded that it was a case of roup—a very infectious trouble. Accordingly he wired to the girl:

"Isolate bird at once. Important. Home this evening."

"Where did you put the bird, Mary?" he asked as soon as he arrived.

"It's in the coal 'ole," said she.

"You isolated it at once, of course?" he added.

"Well, I didn't," replied the girl, simply. "I got Jim to do it. 'E just gie it one whack wi' the broomstock, an' it was all over in a twinkling!"—London Tit-Bits.

IN PAIN WITH HEMORRHOIDS

Bissell, Ala.—"I was troubled for several years with protruding hemorrhoids. They caused pain of the most severe kind and some loss of blood. They were so inflamed that the touch of anything against them was most intense agony. I got no rest nights and had to have my legs and feet propped up in the bed.

"I tried all kinds of advertised cures, and I was told that an operation was the only relief. I suffered untold agony. I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample. I tried it and then procured a box of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I was cured sound and well in three weeks' time. A cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment accomplished what all else failed to do." (Signed) L. R. Cook, Nov. 12, 1912.

Trouble Easily Got Over.

Zeuxis, the celebrated artist, of ancient Greece, had painted the cherries so true to life that the birds came and pecked at them.

Of course, the rich pork packer who had paid $500,000 for the canvas couldn't stand for that.

"Paint in a scarecrow!" he commanded, with apair of one accustomed to meet emergencies.—Puck.

Love may make the world go round, but sometimes it takes marriages to square it.

When a guests boasts of his honesty, keep an eye on your spoons.

COULD POINT TO ONE VIRTUE

Husband's Comparison of Wife's Cigarette With Himself Gave Her Opportunity for "Shot."

President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard said at a dinner in his honor in Chicago:

"Early marriages are the best. It is neither good for the man nor for the community that he should wait until he is twenty-eight years old before marrying."

President Lowell paused a moment and then, smiling, he continued:

"Another trouble about late marriages is that the man's habits—his bad habits—are formed, and it's hard to break him of them. You know, perhaps, the story of the cigarette?

"A man of the old-fashioned 'manly man' type—the soft, full-stomached type that drinks too much, belongs to too many lodges, and must be superior to woman in everything—this man took umbrage over his wife's cigarette, the one modest cigarette that she took after dinner, though he, of course, smoked like a chimney all day long. And so he said one evening:

"'I believe you think more of that nasty, poisonous cigarette than you do of me, your husband.'

"'Well, dear,' his wife replied, smiling and blowing a cloud, 'I can keep my cigarette, you know, from going out.'"

Slightly Adulterated.

Mandre de Fouquieres, the celebrated Parisian cotillon leader, talked to a group of reporters, before his departure for France, about the American woman.

"It is a mistake to suppose that the question of money plays an important part in American marriages," said M. de Fouquieres. "The love match is not rare. Indeed, it is much more common here than with us." Smiling, the Frenchman added:

"I believe there are few American girls who would answer as the candid New York debutante did when asked if she was marrying for pure love.

"'Pure love?' said the debutante, with a roquish smile. "Well, not altogether. Pure love, adulterated with a little money.'"

Special Hospitals Needed.

The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis estimates that there are over a million consumptives in the United States, of whom probably at least one-third are unable to provide for themselves the necessary treatment at home. Most of these cases are a menace to the health of their families and associates, and should be in special hospitals. At the present time, however, even if every case were known, it would not be possible to provide accommodations for more than one in eight or ten. The removal of these foci of infection demands more and better hospital and sanatorium provision.

Alas, That Poor Egg!

"Waiter!" From the table by the window the voice of an elderly gentleman rose in accents wrathful. "Waiter!"

"Yes, sir," replied the much harassed one, hastening forward.

The elderly gentleman, overcome by his emotions, made several vain efforts at articulate utterances. Then:

"Take this egg away!" he roared. "Take it away!"

"Yes, sir," said the waiter obligingly, as he glanced wistfully at the offending article. "And—and what shall I do with it, sir?"

"Do with it?" The outraged customer rose menacingly from his chair. "Do with it?" he bellowed fiercely. "Why, wring its neck!"

Mandy's Gentle Little Hint.

"Mandy," said her mistress, "that beau of yours shouldn't wear white clothes. He is so black it makes him appear all the blacker. Why don't you give him a hint?"

"Lord, Miss Sally, you know somethin'!," said Mandy, with animation. "I dont give him er hint, but he jes natterly ain't got sense ernuff ter take it."

"Perhaps you didn't make it strong enough.

"No'm, thet's right, maybe I didn't. I jes looks at him right hard, an' I says: 'Nigger, you sho do look like a black snake crawlin' out o' cream, you do!'—thet's what I says ter him, Miss Sally."

"To make the engine tender," politely replied the resourceful guide.—Pennsylvania Punch Bowl.

Foundation of Prosperity

It should be a source of pride and gratification to the farmer to reflect that his endeavors constitute the very basis of national and international prosperity. Industrial, financial and commercial discontent may produce discord in the business organization; but let serious affliction beset the agricultural interests of the country, and downright calamity results.

Agriculture is the very fountain head of life. We do not mean to confine life to a bare existence—the air we breathe, the water we drink, the food we eat, the clothes we wear. We mean life in its broadest aspect. Education, that makes for progress; culture, that makes for enjoyment; ambition, that stimulates effort; success, that makes for happiness.

It is therefore the part of wisdom for the thoughtful individual to co-operate with those engaged in agricultural pursuits. And by agricultural pursuits we mean the growing of things to eat and wear; the various branches of poultry and dairying. We go a step beyond agriculture and include mining—in fact include everything that comes out of the ground.

That is why our Agricultural Bureau was organized. We want to contribute to the successful development of the territory through which our lines operate and from which we draw our revenue. With increased prosperity for that territory comes increased prosperity for us.

Our Immigration and Industrial Bureau has been in operation for a number of years. Its efforts to locate desirable citizens throughout the territory of the Southeast have been successful. The Agricultural Bureau will now endeavor to be of assistance, not only to these new and comparatively new arrivals, but to all who will avail themselves of the service, which is offered free.

Communications addressed to Mr. G. A. Park, General Immigration and Industrial Agent, Louisville, Ky., will receive prompt and cordial attention.

Young Girl Dies In Birmingham

Daughter of Mr. W. F. Littlejohn Succumbs To Operation for Appendicitis.

Miss Ella Littlejohn, the seventeen year old daughter of Mr. W. F. Littlejohn, who lives about four miles west of Clanton, died in an infirmary in Birmingham at a late hour Saturday night, following an operation for appendicitis.

The young lady was carried to the Infirmary Saturday evening by Dr. Gragg, but at the time he left the physician expressed little hope of success with the case as treatment had been delayed too long. The operation was performed about nine o'clock, and she died about one.

The remains were placed in charge of an undertaker and prepared for interment, which took place at Liberty Hill Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Fletcher O. Baxley is spending his vacation in St. Louis, Chicago and other cities of interest. He will return to Memphis next week where he will attend the annual convention of the Southern Amateur Journalist Association.

Mt. Pleasant.

Since last I wrote this community has been made to feel sad on account of the death of Mr. Lee Duncan, a youth only fifteen years of age. He was operated on for appendicitis the last of May and never seemed to gain much strength and eight weeks later was operated on for an abscess of the liver, and lived only one week after that. He was down sick ten weeks in all and suffered a great deal, but bore his suffering so patiently. He leaves a father, two brothers and two sisters and a host of friends and relatives to mourn his loss. Lee was good kind and sober boy and liked by all who knew him. He died July 30th in an Infirmry in Birmingham and his remains were brought home and enterred at New Salem cemetery the following day, Rev. W. P. Lowery conducting the funeral services in the presence of a lage number of friends and relatives.

Mrs. F. A. LeCroy and children and mother Mrs. Moore, of Sylacauga. have returned home after a legthy visit to friends and relatives here.

BABY SHOW.

On the 28th of August, in the afternoon, there will be a baby show at the courthouse under the auspices of the Methodist Ladies Aid Socity. All the babies in and around Clanton are invited to take a part in this grand affair. There will be a prize for the most popular baby under two years of age, and also for the most popular baby under five years of age. There will be four little girls to solicit votes for these babies at ten cents for each vote, and the little girl who gets the most votes will receive a prize. Everybody wishing to enter a baby for this show will please report to Mrs. E. A. Matthews or Mrs. J. H. Middleton, right a way.

Gun Discharged, Woman Killed

Wife of a Chilton County Farmer is Victim of a Sad Accident.

Mountain Creek, Ala., Aug. 11—(special)—Joseph Dismux, a worthy farmer, after a day of bird hunting, returned home and on placing his gun away the piece was discharged. The entire load of shot entered his wife's neck and she died instantly.

A number of little children and a bereaved husband are left from this sad accident.

Married Twice; 25 Engagements

Girl of 17 Calls Herself a Matrimonial Expert.

LaGrange Ga., Aug. 3.—Engaged to twenty five men, foiled in five elopements and twice married, is a record which Mrs. Gussie Mashburn aged 17 declares her as an expert.

As such she says a marriage is not legal if the bride answers "no" when the justice ask her if she will love, cheersh and obey."

"Love is the only test of marriage," she says,

Mrs. Mashburn admits she was married to C. W. Smith,aged 47, a farmer January 23, last, and that she has not been divorced. But she declares that marriage was not legal because her grandfather forced her to marry Smith and because of her contrary answers. The charge against her is bigamy.

"I've got the dope in winning men," she declared in jail; bnt Jack Mashburn really is the first to get me going.

I thought it all a game until I got in love with him. No girl should marry a man that she can not love and wash his dishes at the same time. I've been engaged to more than twenty five have got a cartload of diamond rings and I ought to know.

Thorsby Items

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Butler came down from Birmingham and spent Sunday.

Dr. Frank E. Jenkins spent Saturday with friends in town.

The post office has been fitted up with the city lights.

Mrs. W. H. Williams returned from her visit south quite sick. we are glad to learn she is improving.

Prof. Herbert is attending the Teachers Institute at Clanton this week.

Miss Hoopes, the matron for the Girls Dormitory, also Miss Knight, the assistant principal of Thorsby Institute, both arrived last Saturday night.

Mrs. Ira Sarber is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Snider.

Mr. Lonie Howard is suffering intensely with his eyes. He consulted an eye specialist in Birmingham last week and we are glad to know he is improving.

Mrs. and Miss Goodwyn of Chicago have been the guests of their sister, Mrs. S. E. Norton, the past week.

Orville Mastin, the young son of Dr. O. C. Mastin, was badly bitten by a snake last week. He has suffered greatly, but we are glad to learn that he is on the mend.

Mr. Lawrence Gerald spent Sunday in Birmingham.

A short Sunday school conference was held at the Congregational church last Sunday morning. Several subjects pertaining to the Sunday school work were discussed. Mrs. S. E. Norton, the teacher of the primary cepartment, gave a very nice talk on the beauty of the graded lessons, and talked especially on God's little helpers. Miss Anna Gilbert, county superintendent for the home department, gave a very interesting talk and resolved herself to do great work in that department through the county and asked the co-operation of Christian people. Mr. S. E. Norton made a very impressive talk on disorganized classes. Any one who heard the talk would understand the meaning thoroughly. Mr. Moran made a fifteen minutes talk on the Sunday school as a business organization, and showed that it should be our first business as it was the King's business. Mr. J. A. Hunter talked on the organized class work. Prof. S. H. Herbert made a talk on the teacher training, and he expects to have a teachers training course throughout the county. Mr. A. K. Horn spoke on the need of co-operation with the superintendent to make a successful Sunday school. The service throughout was very instructive and pleasant.

The Twins.

Miss Hattie Goodwyn of Montgomery is visiting her sister, Mrs. R. E. Luckie, this week. Miss Goodwyn is one of the most charming young ladies who has visited in Clanton this summer, and she has made a large number of friends while here.

If your child is pale and sickly picks at the nose, starts in the sleep and grinds the teeth while sleeping, it is a sure sign of worms. Chilton County School Teachers

Institute in Session at Clanton Courthouse This Week.

The annual Teachers Institute of Chilton County is now in session at the Courthouse and will continue throughout the week. The conductors are Prof. E. E. Smith, of Birmingham, and Miss Maud Kimbal, of Mobile. Under the supervision of these efficient directors, the work for the week has been going on very nicely.

The visitors of note present are N. R. Baker, State Rural School Supervisor, J. Sterling Moran, of Thorsby, Mrs. Birdie I. Robinson, of Auburn. Each of those distinguished visitors made excellent talks to the teachers.

A very interesting feature of the session Tuesday was the address by Mrs. Birdie Robinson.

It is very plain that the teachers of Chilton county are making progress in their profession as well as the teachers over the state.

Mountain Creek

Veteran G. W. Franklin, Co. D. 34th Georgia Regiment, died at Soldiers Home on Wednesday and was buried the next day. Mrs. Franklin, widow, became an inmate of the Home when the deceased was admitted, and, now, owing to the construction of the law the widow cannot remain in the Home. An effort will be made when the next legislature meets to remedy this legislation.

WHEN YOUR LIVER GOES WRONG

Nearly Everybody Needs a Liver Stimulant at One Time or Another.

Nearly everybody now and then is annoyed with a sluggish, lazy liver or by constipation or by biliousness.

It is for this reason that Dodson's Liver Tone is such a good medicine to keep always in the house.

Either children or grown-ups can take Dodson's Liver Tone without bad after-effects and without restriction of habit or diet. It is a vegetable liquid with a pleasant taste, but a reliever of constipation and liver troubles, and entirely takes the place of calomel.

Alred Drug Co. guarantees every bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone they sell. It costs 50 cents per bottle and if you are not satisfied that it is worth the money they will hand your half dollar back to you with a smile.

Don't be fooled by preparations limitating the claims of Dodson's Liver Tone. Just remember Alred Drug Company will give you back your money if Dodson's Liver Tone fails you. That is a guarantee that guarantees.

MORE MONEY FOR BANKS

McADOO DETERMINED TO GIVE AID IN MOVING CROPS.

WOULD AMEND THE CURRENCY

Thirty-One Bankers Suggest Curtailing Powers of Reserve Board—Increased Power for Advisory Council Advocated.

Washington.—The $50,000,000 of federal funds about to be distributed in the national banks of the west and south to assist in moving the crops will be increased to $150,000,000 if necessary. The desire of the government to mobilize all the needed cash of the public treasury in the agricultural belts of the country to avert the money stringency, characteristic of the crop moving period, was communicated to bankers of the Central West at a conference with Secretary McAdoo and Assistant Secretary John Skelton Williams, called by the treasury department to make arrangements for the distribution of the big sum.

While these representative financiers, fresh from the crop marketing centers of the middle states, welcomed the prospect of the proposed deposits the consensus of opinion, it was stated, seemed to be that $50,000,000 would be ample to meet the situation. The dominant tone of the bankers expressed convictions was, was the treasury department announced that business conditions were good, but that the promised deposits would relieve the usual strain.

The 31 bankers gathered at the meeting seized the opportunity to present their views on currency legislation to the government.

They urged two material amendments to the pending Glass-Owen bill—one curtailing the powers of the federal reserve board, proposed to control the reserve banks and the other essentially modifying the reserve requirements of the measure so as to minimize the decentralization of credits. With these changes, it was stated, all the 31 bankers favored immediate banking and currency legislation.

ANOTHER RECORD BROKEN

John H. Mears Circles Globe in Thirty-five Days.

New York.—John Henry Mears, the Evening Sun's representative, is the holder of the new record of 35 days, 21 hours, 35 minutes and four-fifths second for fast time around the world. In the final flight from the Grand Central station, through Forty-second street and Broadway Wednesday night, Mears' automobile, hugging the police pilot car, that shot ahead, carrying Inspector John O'Brien, rushed across the finish line in front of the Evening Sun office just as the official timekeeper plugged the stop watch at 18 minutes and four-fifths second past 10 o'clock, taking a tuck in the previous record of Andre Jaeger-Schmidt to the extent of three days, 22 hours, 7 minutes and 37 seconds. "I'm glad I'm alive," said Mears, as the cheers went up.

SENATOR JOHNSTON DEAD

Will Reduce Democratic Majority in the Senate to One.

Washington.—Senator Joseph Forney Johnston of Alabama died at 9 o'clock of pneumonia. He had been in poor health for several weeks. Mrs. Johnston was with her husband when he died, as well as Forney Johnston, his son. Senator Johnston was 70 years of age. The death of Senator Johnston leaves the Democrats in the senate a margin of but one vote with which to pass the tariff bill. Under the new constitutional amendment, providing for the direct election of senators, no successor to Senator Johnston's seat can be named by the governor until the legislature of Alabama shall have met and passed a law authorizng him to do so.

MANUFACTURERS POLITICAL FACTORS

FOUGHT OR AIDED CONGRESSMEN, ACCORDING TO VOTE.

EMERY ON WITNESS STAND

Celebrates Sixty-First Birthday and Is Excused by Senate Investigators for Four Days—Bartholdt Prodded From St. Louis.

Washington.—How the National Association of Manufacturers "prodded" members of congress to support legislation the association favored, and opposed those who threatened its interests, was explained to the house lobby committee by James A. Emery, general counsel for the association. Emery was the principal witness of the day before the lobby investigators on both sides of the capitol. He began a preliminary statement to the senate committee of the objects and aims of the association and on the house side he concluded the identification of the 200 letters culled from the organization's files by the committee.

Discussing the political activities of the association, Emery said that the body itself did not engineer congressional campaigns. The association kept track of the records of congressmen, he added, and when the time for their re-election came, notified its members in the individual districts and the campaign work was done by the local members.

A letter written by Emery to E. C. Schwedtmann, secretary of the president of the National Association of Manufacturers in 1910, commented on the fact that "Congressman Bartholdt was very effectually prodded from St. Louis" in connection with a vote on a proposition to exempt labor unions from prosecution under the Sherman law. Members of the committee conducted a rather lengthy examination to determine just what the method of "prodding" was employed by the association. The witness explained that letters and telegrams were started from the constituents of the congressman sought to be influenced by communicating with the members of the association in the congressman's district.

As an instance of this sort of activity, there was introduced a telegram sent by Emery during the fight against this same labor union proposition in 1910, to A. V. Williams of the Minnesota Employers' Association in St. Paul, which urged him to "please get as vigorous a protest by wire as possible to Congressmen Davis, Nelson, Steeneran, Miller, of your state. All are supporting Hughes' amendment preventing enforcement of the Sherman law against labor organizations."

CHINESE NOT TO EXHIBIT

Country Has Not Money Enough to Be Represented at Frisco.

Perking, China.—The Chinese government will be unable, owing to its financial diiffculties, to furnish the funds necessary to support a Chinese exhibit at the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco in the manner originally planned.

The finance minister hopes to obtain an appropriation of $500,000, although many members of the Chinese parliament oppose it. Several chambers of commerce also are reluctant in the matter owing to the losses to merchants in the recent rebellion.

Launch New Destroyer.

Bath, Me.—The United States torpedo boat destroyer Cummings, built at a cost of $761,500, was successfully launched. The vessel was christened with champagne by Mrs. Henry Beates, Jr., of Philadelphia, a niece of the late Lieutenant-Commander A. B. Cummings, for whom the warship was named.

NOTED WHITE SLAVE TRIAL HAS STARTED

DESPITE EXPECTED SENSATION, CROWD WAS SMALL ONE.

TESTIMONY IS BEING TAKEN

Trial of Drunken Escapade Which Came Near Causing Cabinet Split Is Expected to Attract Interest of the Entire Country.

San Francisco.—The trial of Maury I. Diggs of Sacramento under the Mann white slave act began in Judge Van Fleet's court Tuesday, and, with all the publicity it has received and all the problem agitations and publications of recent years, only two women who may not be taken as connected with the case appeared upon the scene. Only five women attended, and three of these were witnesses.

As for the case itself, it proceeded as matters usually do in the United States court, without wrangling or unnecessary delay.

It is to be demonstrated that last winter F. Drew Caminetti and Maury I. Diggs, both young married men of Sacramento, went on a debauch with Martha Warrington and Lola Norris, girls of good families of the capital city. The escapade resulted in an elopement to Reno, where the four were arrested and white slave act prosecutions resulted.

Caminetti, a son of Andrew Caminetti, assemblyman and senator and congressman from the old Second district and now commissioner-general of immigration of the United States, was a clerk in a capitol office. Diggs, whose family also is influential, was an architect who had designed some of the best buildings in Sacramento and who seemed to have a career before him.

The effort to have the cases postponed, the bringing of political pressure to that end—the resignation of United States Attorney McNab, the president's sustaining of Attorney-General McReynolds by word and slapping him in the face by deed, the debates in congress on the subject—all these went to make a drunken escapade a case of national importance and interest.

After McNab had resigned the president named Matt I. Sullivan and Theodore Roche to conduct a special prosecution.

Tuesday Sullivan and Roche conducted the case, and though Deputy United States Attorney Salvage sat at their table, he took no part in the case nor did the district attorney.

The defendants evidently expect a hard trial, for they are defended by a battery of lawyers, headed by former United States Attorneys Robert T. Devlin and Marshall Woodworth, with Nate Coghlan as a senior wrangler and Lawyers Harris and Howe of Sacramento thrown in for good measure.

Gov. Johnson's son, Archie, was conspicuous in aiding Sullivan with papers and books.

The girls were kept out of view, nor did the wives of either Caminetti or Diggs appear in the court room. So, interest centered in the two young men.

Castro Has Army of 12,000.

Birmingham, Ala.—The Standard Steel Company purchased the properties of the Self-Fluxing Ore and Iron Company, including 1,600 acres of ore lands, paying more than $1,000,000 for the same.

A BIG CUT IN EXPRESS RATES

EXPRESS COMPANIES WILL TEST THE ORDER IN COURTS.

SIMPLIFY PRESENT RATES

Question of Applying Block Rates May Be Taken Up at Any Time—Parcel Post Not Justification for Higher Rates.

Washington.—Reductions in express rates which will cost the companies fully $26,000,000 a year, approximately 16 per cent of their gross revenues, were ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission, to become effective on or before October 16, 1913. Notable reforms in practices were also ordered.

The most important change prescribed by the order is by way of modification of the present graduated scale of parcel rates. One hundred pound rates for short distances either have been left unchanged or slightly reduced; for longer distances they have been lowered. For 50 pounds or less all rates have been practically reduced. For packages of more than four pounds going more than 200 miles and less than 2,000, the new express rates are generally lower than the parcel post rates; for more than 3,000 miles the rates are practically the same.

The report and order of the commission, prepared by Commissioner John H. Marble, are a virtual affirmation of the findings of former Commissioner Franklin K. Lane, now secretary of the interior.

By prescribing a so-called block system, dividing the United States into 950 blocks averaging 2,500 square miles, as originally proposed by Mr. Lane, 900,000,000 different rates now published by the express companies will be reduced to less than 650,000 and the Interstate Commerce Commission believes that the system points the way to a solution of the existing maze of freight rates.

The general impression in official quarters is that the express companies will attempt to test by legal means the constitutionality of the commission's order.

Commissioner Marble holds the contention of the companies that the government parcel post service justifies higher rates is untenable.

MORE LIGHT ON LOBBYING

Counsel for National Association of Manufacturers Submits Letters.

Washington.—From the files of the National Association of Manufacturers came the details of legislative activities of the widest range, extending from the home districts of members of congress throughout the country to the White House and the capitol. While the senate lobby investigators pursued their probe by an examination of former Senator Joseph B. Foraker of Ohio, the house committee got under way and placed in the record a hundred letters from the files of James A. Emery, chief counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers. From attempts to influence the selection of the labor and judiciary committees of the house, the discussions of the possibility of coupling currency legislation with the tariff bill at the present session of congress; from conversations with Majority Leader Underwood of the house to letters and telegrams to Presidents Wilson and Taft, the correspondence covered every field of public policy and legislative practice.

JOHN LIND NOT ACCEPTABLE

Must Bring Credentials, Says Mexican Government.

Mexico City.—John Lind, special representative of President Wilson of the United States, now on his way to Mexico, will be persona non grata to this government unless he brings credentials in due form, "together with recognition of the government of Mexico," according to an official statement issued late Wednesday night.

Manuel Garza Aldape, minister of public instruction, who is acting as minister of foreign affairs, issued the statement and had it transmitted to the United States embassy. It was also dispatched by the Mexican government to the United States and to Europe. The statement follows:

"By order of the president of the republic, I declare, as minister of foreign affairs ad interim, that if Mr. Lind does not bring credentials in due form, together with recognition of the government of Mexico, his presence in this country will not be desirable."

DEATH CLAIMS VETERAN EDITOR

MAJOR W. W. SCREWS SUCCUMBS TO ATTACK OF ACUTE INDIGESTION.

NESTOR ALABAMA PRESS

Death Marks Passing of One of State's Best Known Citizens—Served in Confederate Army.

Montgomery.—Major William Wallace Screws, editor of The Advertiser, died suddenly August 7 at his country home at Coosada, 14 miles from here, of an attack of acute indigestion.

With him at the time of his death were his wife and two of his sons, Benjamin Screws and Holt Screws.

Major Screws had long been a prominent figure in Southern journalism. Born in Barbour county, February 25, 1839, he was in his 75th year at the time of his death. He was a son of Benjamin and Moning J. Screws. He was educated in private schools in Glennville, then in Barbour, but now in Russell county. Going to Montgomery as a youth he began to study law in the office of Watts, Judge & Jackson and was admitted to the bar in 1859 at the age of 20.

He practiced law until 1861 and although he was opposed to secession he went with his state at the outbreak of hostilities and served through the entire war. He went with the first troops to Pensacola and took part in the capture of the navy yard and Fort Barancas. He was later lieutenant in Company G, Fifty-ninth Alabama, and saw hard service with Bragg's army in Kentucky, at Chickamauga, Knoxville and during the last 12 months of the war was with Lee in Virginia.

Major Screws wrote letters to the Montgomery Advertiser from the army and became identified with that paper immediately after the war. Since that time Major Screws has been continuously connected with the editorial department of the paper.

At the time of his death he was president of the Advertiser company and editor in chief. The only public elective office ever held by Major Screws was secretary of state of Alabama, which position he filled from 1878 to 1882. He was one of President Cleveland's staunchest friends in the South and was appointed by him postmaster at Montgomery, which position he held from 1893 to 1897.

Major Screws was a former president of the National Educational Association, and was a member of the standing committee of the Protestant Episcopal Church, diocese of Alabama. He went as a lay delegate from the Alabama diocese to the Episcopal general convention in Boston in 1904, in Richmond in 1907 and in Cincinnati in 1910.

SMITH'S PLAN IS OPPOSED

Moss Reports on Attitude Assumed at Washington Boll Weevil Conference.

Montgomer.—"Senator Smith's proposed cottonless zone for the extermination of the boll weevil was overwhelmingly voted down by State demonstration agents and a score of Representatives and Senators from the cotton belt at Washington," said B. L. Moss, State Farm Demonstration Agent, after returning from the national capital, where he attended the semi-annual conference of State agents.

Mr. Moss was one of the several boll weevil experts from the South who attended the special conference held for discussion of Senator Smith's plan, and spoke before the conference in regard to the matter.

Mr. Moss stated that the agents and other experts showed Senator Smith where it was almost impossible to establish the zone and that it was not practicable in any way. He stated that the zone would necessarily be 200 miles wide to be effective and that if it was established this fall it would reach into South Carolina. The cost, he said, would be $108,000,000.

"Other farmers would be taxed to pay this cost, and they would never stand for it," he said.

Senator Smith's plan was to establish a zone in which no cotton would be planted for one season, in an effort to check the progress of the boll weevil. The zone would cover the territory nearly 200 miles east of the line already reached by the weevil and the farmers in that section would be paid for their losses sustained during the cotton year.

Confederate veterans of St. Clair held a reunion at Odenville.

Jelks Not a Candidate.

Birmingham.—Two interesting political reports come from Montgomery. The first is that Gov. William D. Jelks, Democratic national committeeman, will not be a candidate for Governor. Governor Jelks himself declared to a reporter that he was too busy to consider politics and that he had no intention of entering the race for Governor. It is reported that Leon McCord, associate railroad commissioner, will enter the race for Congress against John L. Burnett, present incumbent.

PLACID LAKE McDERMOTT

M-o-n-t-a-n-a,
That's a pretty good place to stay,
We'll always think when we're far away,
Of M-o-n-t-a-n-a.

—Song of the Glacials.

THE particular part of Montana about which this song was sung lies in the far northwest corner of the state, where the Rocky mountains, their summits covered with eternal snow, their bases clothed in pine forests of perpetual green, swung over the Canadian border, down through the heart of the continent to the year-long summer lands of Mexico.

Eighty lakes, sapphire and opal and diamond clear, in the varying lights, reflect the blue western sky. Threescore living glaciers, green with the depths of ice that endures season after season, lies the the hollows of the giant peaks. Crystal streams descend in countless waterfalls over the brown rocks and break the silence of the forest trails.

In these mountains, left save for a few trails as they were before the first white men pushed their way across the plains to the further ocean, the wild things of that early wilderness still find a refuge.

Acustomed to think of Montana as a state of cattle ranges, big wheat crops, and the home of copper, we know nothing of this part of it—this land of delight. Yet we, in common with some 40,000,000 of other Americans, are its owners. Congress, in one of its moments of wisdom two years ago, set it aside as a national possession to be, as Chief Two Guns said, "a playground for all the people, rich and poor, white and Indian, forever."

It is now Glacier National park, and there are some 1,400 square miles within its borders. You may roam through it for a month and never tread the same ground twice.

It was by pony travel that a party of eastern tenderfeet, fresh from occupations in which exercise is at a discount and locomotion is mostly by street car, explored the park a few weeks ago. They emerged from a two weeks' exile, after some tribulation, hard as nails and healthy as savages. This dairy is a brief record of their experiences:

Two Medicine, Mont., Thursday.

It is eight miles from the park gateway at Midvale to the first chalet at Two Medicine. But these are Montana miles, and as Old Philadelphia said, if they would only sell you land on the Montana measurement and let you resell it on the eastern scale it would be a mighty satisfactory transaction. The trail led over several small streams, and on through forests of pine and scrub oak. But always it led upward, a little nearer the snow-capped mountains inclosing the green ahead. The pace dropped to an easy walk, the horses' feet fell noiselessly upon the thick pine needles, and scarcely a sound disturbed the forest peace. Late afternoon came all too soon. A sudden turn in the trail brought into view a pretty log chalet beside a deep blue lake, the mountains coming down to its very edge. Smoke curled from the cook house chimney, suggesting good things to eat. The ponies broke into a trot, and for the moment saddle soreness was forgotten. This was Two Medicine, the end of the first stage of our journey.

Cutbank Camp, Friday.

Leaving Two Medicine, we rode away in a golden morning. A light hoar frost sprinkled the grass. The sun was rolling a curtain of white mist upward from the violet sides of Rising Wolf mountain.

Upward the trail wound, the horses picking their way over fallen trees, now dipping into yeasty hollows, now climbing a slippery bank. One rode at an angle of 45 degrees forward and backward, alternately. The trees grew thinner and scrubbier—"Nature's stunted step-children," the official tenderfoot poet called them—and the trail steeper until we emerged aloft, almost at the timber line. Presently we were riding in a flurry of snowflakes that hid mountain and valley. A cloud rift letting through a gleam of sunlight revealed our snow falling as rain in the valley below.

Noon came and luncheon. It was hardly more than four hours since breakfast, yet hungry eyes watched the preparations until at length was heard a call which for music grateful to the ear will never be equaled in the Metropolitan Opera House.

That call consists of four syllables—grace notes they might be called if this were any subject for mere frivolity. It runs like this:

"Co-ome an' git it!"

It is the park summons to meals. The rush follows.

We "got it," and proceeded on our way newheartened, though the weather had still a new variation for us. The last section of the eighteen miles from Two Medicine was traversed through a heavy drizzle, and the going was heavy.

Lake St. Mary's, Saturday.

We had started from Cutbank in better trim than on the day before, and were riding more at east. Around the bend in the trail ahead swept a band of painted Indians, drums beating and eagle feathers streaming in the breeze. A few paces from our leading file they reined in their ponies, formed line, and made guttural sounds of uncertain import. George Star, Blackfoot interpreter, trotted to the front.

"Chief Two Guns," announced Mr. Starr, indicating a stalwart Indian in beaded buckskin and a chief's war bonnet. "Chief Jim White Calf," indicating another handsome Indian, "both sons of old man White Calf, dead now—great chief. They come to welcome you to park. Big Moon, medicine man." Mr. Big Moon nodded pleasantly. "For three days he makes medicine to have fine weather while you're in park."

The Narrows, Upper St. Mary's Lake, Monday.

Leaving the horses to be picked up later, we journeyed today by motor launch up St. Mary's lake to this point, where still a new phase of this western scenery presents itself. The lake narrows as you ascend, and the mountains come closer, becoming as it were on more intimate terms with humanity. Very near seemed their brown sides, banded with gray and black, and snow-covered summits, in the clear air. A tiny glacier in a narrow gulch loked so close that you would expect to throw a stone upon its surface with ease. The guide said it was a full three miles away.

Lake McDermott, Wednesday.

We have seen many beautiful sights, but the unanimous verdict on reaching camp tonight was that the day's ride had been the most beautiful ride of all; at which Tom Dawson, the veteran chief guide, only smiled. He is used to these tenderfoot raptures. "Why," he said, "you haven't seen anything to speak of yet. This is only the beginning."

Beautiful Lake Sherbourne was passed at a canter, for the tenderfeet by this time have become hardened to the saddle, and each rider's pany is his best friend. Toward evening we came upon a new and strange sight. By the remnants of a grass-grown stage road we reached a group of log houses, larger and more pretentious than most. The guide explained:

"This is Altyn, a dead town. It was built up by a copper mining prospect, but the prospect was only a pocket, and the pocket soon gave out. Then everybody went away. It has been deserted ten years."

We left Altyn behind and in a few minutes were in quite a different spot. The Lake McDermott chalets are grouped about a waterfall, around which the mountains stand sentinel. Their summits as we saw them first were flushed with pink in the evening light, and inspired new adjectives of admiration, all too weak.

Lake McDermott, Friday.

Yesterday we rode to Iceberg lake and saw our park in still another guise. We passed through a forest of giant Christmas trees with the snow thick upon their branches and the whole world green beneath, then skirted the steepest mountains encountered in all our travel hitherto, climbed the famous Golden Stairs, and at last reached a valley where on three sides huge cliffs looked down upon a sapphire lake set in a sea of white. On one side a glacier centuries old moves an inch or so a year down the steep rocks, its waters feding the lake, whose surface is dotted with huge cakes of ice. The hottest day in August is cool at Iceberg lake, and finds the glacial fragments floating there as though it were early spring.

Today we traveled to still another beauty spot, Cracker lake, haunt of the big horn sheep, whose tracks here and there were seen upon the snow's smooth surface. Tomorrow we move onward to Lake McDonald and homeward.

Lake McDonald, Monday.

Here on the park's western border, and by the side of the largest—many say the most beautiful of all its many lakes—we have spent our last day. Our exploration is at an end, for here the outside world makes itself felt again. Hobnailed boots and khaki, short skirt and sweater here meet the habiliments of civilization upon a common footing.

We said good-bye to our trusty ponies yesterday and today we tramped it to the Royal Gorge and waterfall, which are McDonald's chief beauties.

Most of the folk who have been to the park are going back there. Our own west also has its spell.

SENATOR JOHNSTON IS LAID TO REST

Distinguished Body of Citizens Witness Simple, But Impressive Ceremonies—Many Were Present.

Birmingham, Ala.—At rest, under the sod of this city, which he loved so well, and for which he did so much, are the remains of Joseph Forney Johnston, United States Senator, Confederate soldier, Governor and banker.

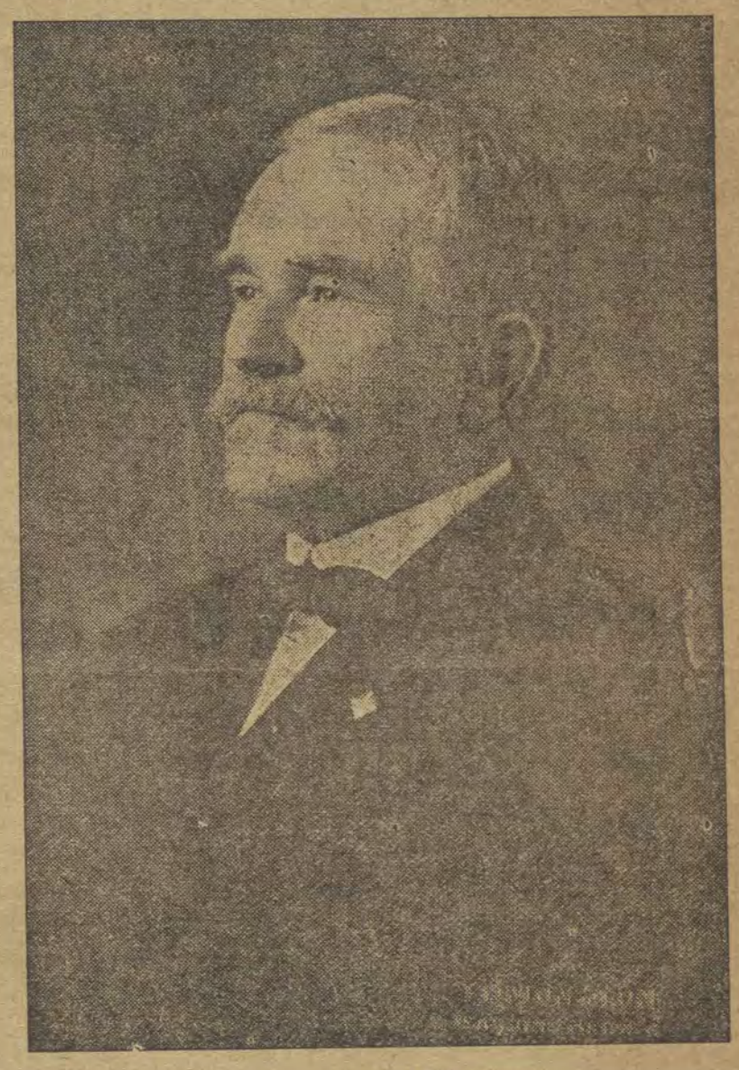
With the simple but beautiful Episcopal burial ritual, the services were held at St. Mary's-on-the-Highlands.

With the Rev. Willoughby Newton Claybrook officiating, the services were read in the presence of perhaps the most distinguished body of public men ever before under one roof of this city. With that simplicity which was a striking characteristic of the departed lawmaker's life, the services were concluded at Oak Hill cemetery.

Under a blazing August sun which poured its rays with merciless consistency, there stood with bared heads a multitude of persons to do honor to the late Senator Johnston. Unmindful of the scorching sun, but determined to drop a last tear upon the bier of the former Confederate soldier, stood a score of those veterans who faced ball and shell with him during the '60s.

Beside them were colleagues from the United States Senate who journeyed to this, his home, to represent that august body at the funeral of their respected and honored fellow worker.

Immediately facing Mr. Claybrook as he read the service stood his excellency, Hon. Emmet O'Neal, Governor of Alabama, and at his left stood members of the House of Representatives that came here to pay a tribute to the Senator.



JOSEPH FORNEY JOHNSTON

Veteran Senator From Alabama, Who Died in Washingon.

Washington. — After an illness of eight days, Senator Joseph F. Johnston, of Alabama, died in his apartment in the Brighton. Death was due to pneumonia. The senator had been in failing health and had not attended sessions of the senate for a week.

He had been confined to his apartment most of the time, but his ailment was not diagnosed as pneumonia until within a few days.

Birmingham, Ala.—Captain Joseph Forney Johnston, for many years was prominent in financial and political circles of Alabama. He was honored by the highest gift of the people of the state.

Born in North Carolina, Lincoln County, in 1843, he was the son of Dr. William and Nancy (Forney) Johnston. He was attending high school when the war broke out. He served in the Confederate army four years, going in a sa private, and came out as captain, being promoted rapidly. He saw much service, being wounded four times.

After the war he moved to Dallas county and practiced law in Selma, remaining there from 1866 to 1884. He came to Birmingham during the latter year and made rapid progress here.

He was president of the Alabama National Bank, finally acquired by the American Trust and Savings Bank. He was with the bank ten years and became prominent in financial circles.

He was first president of the Sloss Iron and Steel Company, which finally became the Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron Company. He was Governor of Alabama from 1896 to 1900 and was elected United States Senator August 1, 1907, for the unexpired term of Edmund W. Pettus, deceased. His term expired in 1909 and he was re-elected. He was a candidate for re-election at the time of his death, his term expiring March 3, 1915.

He was for years at the head of the Democratic State Executive Committee and was prominent in the politics of the state.

The seventeenth amendment to the federal constitution, which will play so conspicuous a part in the selection of a successor to Senator Johnston, is as follows:

'The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two senators from each state, elected by the people thereof for six years, and each senator shall have one vote. The qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the state legislatures. When vacancies happen in the representation of any state in the Senate the executive authority of such state shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies; provided, that the legislature of the state may empower the executive thereof to make temporary appointments until the people fill the vacancies by election as the legislature may direct.

"This amendment shall not be so construed as to affect the election or term of any senator chosen before it becomes valid as part of the constitution."

SENATORIAL SITUATION

Birmingham, Ala. — According to the opinion which prevailed among political students, Governor O'Neal will appoint a successor to the late Senator Johnston, and that his choice will fall upon Congressman Henry D. Clayton or John B. Knox.

The governor has not committed himself in this regard. While here he was in earnest consultation with his advisers, and with members of the National Congress. It is understood generally that the preponderance of legal opinion put before him was to the effect that he had the right to make an appointment, and that in view of the death of Senator Johston and the serious illness of Senator Culberson, he should not further imperil the passage of tariff legislation by postponing that appointment.

Do the people of what is termed the Birmingham distrist realize the great importance of this great district. In many countries where people have one advantage they perhaps have two disadvantages. In our own distsict we have only advantages, and it only takes the opening of your eyes to see them.

The Unity-Chilton Baptist High School at Thorsby we are informed will be open for business early in September. This is another one of Thorsby's good institutions. The town of Thorsby and its citizens are doing a good work along educational and religious lines and the people of that town are to be commended for their enterprising spirit. It is a noticeable thing when you look around up there that you see something to be shipped. It is a thriving industrious little town.

This week good road building in Alabama will be given an impetus never felt before. Good many people will show their loyalty to the cause of good roads by taking their picks and shovels and working the entire three days. Good many more people will not heed the many suggestions.

Quite a number of counties have been heard to give expression to this laudable purpose in the last few weeks, and every man should not only give encouragement but also a helping hand.

KEEP YOUR BUSINESS PUBLIC.

Dadeville Spot Cash.

No business man in any town should allow a newspaper published in his town to go without his name mentioned somewhere in its columns. This applies to all kinds of business; general stores, groceries, professional men. and in fact all classes of men that do business. This does not mean that you should have a whole or even a quarter page ad in every issue of the paper, but your name and business should be mentioned if you do not use more than a two-line space. A stranger picking up a newspaper should be able to tell just what business is represented in a town by looking at the business mentioned in the paper. This is the best possible town advertising.

THE COUNTRY TEACHER.

Educational Exchange.

The editor of the Mankato Free Press thus expatiates upon the virtues of a country teacher:

The country school teachers, God bless them. They are among the bravest, truest and best people that walk the earth. They are engaged in as noble a work as is in man to do. They are an honor to their calling. There is many a country boy and girl that never gets any other schooling than what he gets in the district school. His future life and character is largely influenced and shaped by the example of his country school teacher. The teacher is the center of influence in the neighborhood. She must attend all the social gatherings. She very largely directs the games and sports at these gatherings. It is the country teacher that furnishes the inspiration to organize the country literary society or debating club. She plans the program and directs the activities of the club. She puts new life into the community. She trains the children for the Christmas program and should the hand of affliction rest upon any home in her district she is there to comfort and help.

That tell-tale "cotton face," the pale, gaunt complegion of malaria's victims, the scrofulous skin eruptions, the chills and fever, enlarged spleen, the malarial dysentery that seems to defy all other treatment; those chronic malarial sores and ulcers that resist all medical skill until S. S. S. drives out the malaria; the malarial leg in which the legs swell as in elephantiasis; the enlarged liver; and the pernicious, persistent anemia where the blood turns to water and the system wastes away to a skeleton; these are the conditions that S. S. S. so wonderfully and so completely overcome and restore the blood to strong, virile health.

You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores at $1.00 a bottle. Take nothing else. Do not make the great mistake of your life by trifling with malaria. There is no other remedy like Swift's Sure Specific, for it is made of those things which nature, in her all-wise creation, has caused to grow and thrive as a healthful antidote in the highland region of the lowlands where is developed the death-dealing malaria germs. For special advice on how to overcome chronic malaria, quicly heal those terrible eruptions, get red blood into your circulation, energy into your muscles and vigor from head to foot, write the medical department of The Swift Specific Co., 130 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Do not allow any one to tell you they have something "just as good" as S. S. S. There are minds so small and mean that for the sake of a few extra pennies of profit they will actually endanger lives by trying to sell substitutes for the famous antidote S. S. S.

END OF SEASON SALE

J. Damsky Announces Tremendous Price Cutting Sale to Begin Saturday, Aug. 16th, 1913

One week is being spent in elaborate preparations for this long to be remembered Saving Event. A systematic reduction will be in vogue all over the house, in both Dry Goods, Notions, Etc., and Groceries. Our reputation in this County as a Bargain Giver and for Fair and Square Advertising should relieve any doubt in your minds as to the genuineness of this Sale.

Our logical way of thinking should appeal to your good judgment. Realizing as we do, that the present seasons merchandise, carried over until next season, would deteriorate in value, be less attractive and also, we would lose amount invested and use of money, etc. For this reason and only this we are throwing this entire stock on the mercy of ye buying public. In these reductions (a sample only of which we quote below) the cost price has simply been ignored. We are blind to all thoughts save one: This stock MUST be sold!! We can't afford the expense to carry it over.

Let us tell you in plain and emphatic terms that no man, woman or child can afford to miss this opportunity.

Plenty of crisp new merchandise, such as Skirts, Waists, Muslinwear, Gents' Furnishings, Clothing, Shoes, Hats, etc., will be conveniently arranged for easy choosing.

Remember we expect you to be on hand SATURDAY, AUGUST 16th, and as many days thereafter as you can during the seven days.

The LADY of the MOUNT

SYNOPSIS.

Comtesse Elise, daughter of the governor of the Mount, has chance encounter with a peasant boy. The "Mount," a small rock-bound island, stood in vast bay on the northwestern coast of France, and during the time of Louis XVI. was a government stronghold. Develops that the peasant boy was the son of Seigneur Desaurac, nobleman. Young Desaurac determines to secure an education and become a gentleman; sees the governor's daughter depart for Paris. Lady Elise returns after seven years' schooling, and entertains many nobles. Her Ladyship dances with strange fisherman, and a call to arms is made in an effort to capture a mysterious Le Seigneur Noir. He escapes. Lady Elise is caught in the "Grand" tide. The Black Seigneur rescues and takes her to his retreat. Elise discovers that her savior was the boy with the fish. Sanchez, the Seigneur's servant, is arrested and brought before the governor. Lady Elise has Sanchez set free. Seigneur and a priest at the "Cockles." Sanchez tells Desaurac that Lady Elise betrayed him, but is not believed. The Seigneur plans to release prisoners at the Mount. Lady Elise pleads with her father to spare the lives of condemned prisoners. Disguised as a peasant Lady Elise mingles with the people and hears some startling facts. A mysterious Mountebank starts a riot. He is arrested and locked up after making close observations of the citadel, and is afterwards summoned before the governor's daughter. The governor enters the room during the interview with the Mountebank. As a miserable buffoon, the Mountebank is released by order of the governor. Desaurac overpowers guard and dons soldier's uniform.

CHAPTER XIX—(Continued).

"Her Ladyship was so good," murmured the latter in some embarrassment and yet feeling obliged to speak, with that bright insistent gaze of the high official of the Mount fastened upon him, "as to inform me that, desiring to mingle with the people, and, knowing it might not be expedient to do so—in her own proper character—her Ladyship saw fit to assume a humbler costume—that of a Norman peasant maid—"

From the Governor's lips fell an ejaculation; he seemed about to speak sternly, but the words failed on his lips; instead, 'Continue!" he said curtly.

"That, I believe, is all, your Excellency, except that her ladyship expressed the desire the stupid fellow be set at liberty on the morrow, as not worth the keeping—and—"

The mountebank started, as expecting now the Lady Elise to speak; to denounce him, perhaps; but it was his Excellency who interrupted.

"You were going to do so? To set him at liberty?"

"I, your Excellency? The auberge des voleurs is so full of the scum of the sands, there is hardly room for them to squirm; but if your Excellency wishes all these paltry ragamuffins and beggars brought before you—"

"Well, well!" The Governor looked down; his hand crushed impatiently the paper he held. "Here is much ado about nothing! Have you," to his daughter, "aught to add?"

She lifted her head. Standing in a careless pose, apparently regardless of what was taking place, the mountebank, at the Governor's question, shot a quick glance from him to her. Although but an instant his look met my lady's, in that brief interval she read all that was lost on the other two; the sudden, desperate purpose, the indubitable intention, his warning glance conveyed. At the same time she noticed, or fancied she did, the hand thrust into his breast, as if grasping some weapon concealed there, drew out a little, while simultaneously, lending emphasis to the fact, he moved a shade nearer the Governor, her father!

"Nothing," said the girl hastily; "nothing!"

"Then," his Excellency waved a thin, aristocratic hand, "take him away!"

"And your—her ladyship's instructions?" murmured the commandant.

"Are to be obeyed, of course!" answered the Governor, complacently you pick up on the beach? To the devil with the fellow!"

When the door had closed on the mountebank and the commandant, he turned to his daughter. "A madcap trick!" Frowningly his Excellency regarded her. "To have gone into the town and mingled with the rabble! But," shaking his head and then suffering that expression of disapproval to relax into severity, "say no more about it! Here," indicating the letter, "is something of greater moment, to be attended to and answered!"

CHAPTER XX.

The Mountebank and the Soldier.

As the mountebank walked out of the apartment of the Governor's daughter, he drew himself up with an air of expectancy, like a man preparing for some sudden climax. Once beyond the threshold, his eyes glanced furtively back at the closed door, and, descending the stairs to the floor below, he carried his head a little forward, as if intent to catch unwonted sound or outcry. But no raised voice or unusual noise reached his ear, and his footsteps, as the party issued forth into the street, responded briskly to the soldiers' pace. Still with the same air of strained attention, now mingled with a trace of perplexity, he followed his guard until called upon to stop.

"You are to sleep here!" As he spoke, the commandant opened the door of what seemed a low out-building, not very far from the general barracks, and motioned the mountebank to enter. The latter, after glancing quickly at the speaker and the soldiers behind, bent to step across the dark threshold, and, still stooping, on account of the low roof, looked around him. By the faint glimmer of light from a lantern one of the soldiers held, the few details of that squalid place were indistinctly revealed: A single stall whose long-eared occupant turned its head inquiringly at the abrupt appearance of a companion lodger; bits of harness and a number of traps hanging from pegs on the wall, and, near the door, on the ground, a bundle of grass, rough fodder from the marshes close by the shore. This last salt-smelling heap, the officer, peering in with a fastidious sniff, indicated.

"That's your bed! A softer one than you would have had but for the Lady Elise!"

The prisoner returned no answer, and in the voice of a man whose humor was not of the best, the commandant uttered a brief command. A moment or two the light continued to pass fitfully about the stable; then it and the moving shadows vanished; a key grated in the door, and the sound of the officer's receding footsteps was followed by the diminishing clatter of men's heels on the flagging stone. Not until both had fairly died away in the distance and the silence was broken only by certain indications of restiveness from the stall, did the prisoner move.

First, to the door, which he tried and shook; then, avoiding the pile of fodder, to the wall, where, feeling about the rough masonry with the energy of one who knew he had no time to spare, his hands, ere long, encountered the frame of a small window. Any gratification, however, he might have experienced thereat found its offset in the subsequent discovery that the window had heavy iron blinds, closed and fastened, and was further guarded by a single strong bar set in the middle, dividing the one inconsiderable aperture into two spaces of impassable dimensions. But as if spurred by obstacles to greater exertions, fiercely the man grasped the metallic barrier, braced himself, and put forth his strength. In its setting of old masonry [illegible] slightly.

Baffled, he desisted, and, with a muttered imprecation, began a search of the floor, his hands encountering only the damp earth and stones, when, suddenly, they touched a bolt. Instantly he was on his knees, his fingers feeling for the fastening. Then, with a sharp exclamation, he drew back. Through the crack of the door a ray of light had penetrated, and, as he looked, it widened, and a head was thrust in.

"Are you there, Monsieur Mountebank?" The door swung open; an uncertain light cast sickly rays once more within, and beneath the lantern, raised above his head, innocent of the danger he had just escaped, the round visage of the good-natured soldier who had escorted the mountebank to the auberge des voleurs looked amicably and inquiringly into the darksome hovel.

"Yes; what do you want?" the answer came more curt than courteous.

"What do I want?" the fellow repeated with a broad smile. "Now that's good! Perhaps it would be more to the point to ask what do you want? And here," indicating a loaf and jug in his hand, "I've got them, though why the commandant should have cared, and ordered them brought—"

"He did?" said the prisoner, with a flash of quick surprise. "Well, I'm not hungry, but you can leave them."

"Not hungry?" And the soldier, who seemed a little the worse for liquor, but more friendly in consequence, walked in. "I don't wonder, though," he went on, closing the door, hanging his lantern above and placing the jug on the ground; "in such a foul hole? What you need, comrade, is company, and," touching significantly his breast, "something warmer than flows from the spring of St. Aubert."

"I tell you," began the mountebank, when the soldier, staring, got a fair look at the other for the first time and started back.

"Eh? What's this?"

"Oh, I took them off! You don't suppose I'd sleep in my white clothes in such a dirty—"

"Right you are, comrade!" returned the other, seating himself before the door on a three-legged stool he found in a corner. "But for the moment you gave me a start. I thought you some other person."

"What—person?"

"No one in particular. You might," unbuttoning his coat to draw forth a bottle, "have been any one! But I dare say you have had them off in worse places than this—which, after all, is not bad, compared to some of the rooms for guests at the Mount!"

"You mean?" The mountebank looked first at the closed blinds; then tience shone ominously from the prisoner's glance; his attention, that of a man straining to catch some expected sound without, focused itself on the speaker. "This Jacques—what sort of quarters has he?"

"Oh, he lives anywhere; everywhere! Sometimes at the thieves' inn; again in one of the storehouses near the wheel. They say, though, he is not a great hand to sleep, but passes most of his time like a cat, prowling in and out the black passages and tunnels of the Mount. But," abruptly breaking off, "the play—that's what I want to know about! The end! How did it end?"

"I'm in no mood for talking."

"Take the bottle, an' it'll loosen your tongue!"

"No."

"What! you refuse?"

"Yes."

"Then," philosophically, "must I drink alone?"

"Not here!"

"Eh?"

"Will you get out, or—" and the mountebank stepped toward the other with apparently undisguised intention.

"So that's your game?" Quickly the soldier sprang to his feet. "I must teach you a little politeness, my friend—how we deal with uncivil people in the army!" And throwing off his coat, as ready for a bout at fisticuffs as for an encounter of words, the soldier confronted the clown. "When I'm done, you'll sing that song of the stick out of the other side of the mouth, and think your wicked peasant received a coddling from his master in comparison!"

But the mountebank did not answer—with words—and the soldier was still threatening, and painting dire prophetic pictures of what he intended doing, when a strong arm closed about him; fingers like iron gripped his throat, and, for some moments thereafter, although of unusual size and vigor, the man was more concerned in keeping his feet than in searching his vocabulary for picturesque imagery. Then, in spite of his struggles and best endeavors to free himself, he felt his head forced backwards; the grasp on his neck tightened. Still he could not shake off that deadly hold, and, aware that consciousness was gradually leaving him, his efforts relaxed. After that, for an interval, he remembered nothing; but with returning realization and a vague sense of stiffness in his throat, in a rough sort of way was prepared to accept defeat; acknowledge the other's supremacy, and seal that acknowledgment over the bottle.

Only the mountebank afforded him no opportunity thus to toast the "best man;" with a long strap of leather snatched from one of the pegs, he had already bound the hands and feet of his bulky antagonist, and was just rising to survey his handiwork, when the other opened his eyes.

"Here! What do you mean?" exclaimed the soldier, when even the power vocally to express further surprise or indignation was denied him, in consequence of something soft being thrust between his teeth; and mute, helpless, he could but express in looks the disgusted inquiry his lips refused to frame.

best—" About to blow out the flame, he stopped, attracted by something his foot had thrust aside; a garment; the soldier's! A moment he surveyed it; stooped; picked it up. "Unless I am mistaken," casting aside his own coat, slipping on that of the soldier, and then donning the latter's cap, which had fallen in the struggle, "we are about of a size. And this sword," unfastening the belt from the prostrate jailer, "should go with the coat." A moment his words, tense, reckless, continued to vibrate in the soldier's ears, then: "I'll leave you the lantern!" And darkness fell over the place.

Boldly, a little uncertainly, as the soldier had walked, the mountebank, now, to all appearance, a man of the ranks in the service of his Excellency, the Governor, strode down the wide, stone-paved way separating the outhouses from the officers' quarters, hard against the ramparts. In the sky's dome the stars still shone, although a small mottled patch of cloud obscured the moon; on either side no lights appeared in windows, and friendly shadows favored him, until he approached at the end of the way the broad, open entrance between the soldiers' barracks and the officers' row. There, set in stone above the key of the time-worn arch, flared a smoky lamp, dimly revealing the surrounding details; but the young man did not stop; had drawn quite close to the medieval structure, when unexpectedly another tread, on the soldiers' side of the entrance, mingled with his own; rang for a moment in unison; then jingled out of time. He who approached came to a sudden standstill; cast a quick glance over his shoulder, only to be brought to an abrupt realization that it was now too late to retreat. A black silhouette, suddenly precipitated across the pavement, preceded a dark figure that stepped quickly out and barred the way, while at the same time, a voice, loud and incisive, challenged.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

HOW THE NAME AMERICA?

Authorities Differ as to Its Derivation, Many Claiming It to Be of Celtic Origin.

We are told that the name of this continent was derived from that of a gentleman who wrote about it—Americus Vespucius. His real name, however, was Vespucci, and Vespucius is the Latinized form of it, just as Americus is supposed to be Latin for Amerigo. If the continent had been named for Columbus it would not, in all probability, have been named Christopheria, but Columbia. Why, then, if Columbus was to be robbed of the honor, is the land not called Vespucia?

The question, too, has been raised whether Vespucci's name was Amerigo. One authority claims that it was not. It is said that in a volume published at Milan only nine years after the death of Vespucci his name is given as Albertatio. It is, of course, possible that this was a misprint, though such an error would be unlikely to occur on title page, even in those days.

One unique theory is the name America was not derived from Vespucci's name at all, but that it came from a Celtic word, imrich, which means to emigrate. However, the name may have been derived, it is certain to stand. The whole world, except France, calls this country America, and spells the name one way. This uniformity is true of no other great country. Deutschland is Germany to the English and Allemagne to the French. England is Angleterre to the French and Inghilterra to the Italians. France is Frankreich to the Germans and Francia to the Spaniards. Espagna is Espagna to the Italians and Spain to the English, and so on. But America is America, with practically the same pronunciation to all the world except France, where it becomes Amerique.

The Winchester Measure.

The Winchester Measure, a term seldom, if ever used in this country, though common in England, refers to the fact that away back in the reign of Edgar that King established a legal standard measure for the prosecution of fraud. The standard vessels were by royal order kept in the City of Winchester. Hence the "Winchester Measure" of the time of Henry VII. The standard of measure in the United States is based on that of the mother country. The last Standard Weights and Measures act of England was passed in 1855. Many of the old rules are still in force in

WILSON OUTLINES MEXICAN POLICY

GENERAL PURPOSES OF ENVOY LIND'S MISSION IS CLEARLY EXPLAINED.

HIS ATTITUDE IS APPROVED

Takes Republicans as Well as Democrats Into His Confidence Relative to His Policy.

Washington. — President Wilson took into his confidence the entire senate foreign relations committee, republicans as well as democrats and outlined frankly the policy he believes the United States ought to pursue toward Mexico.

President Wilson took the senators into his confidence far enough to outline the following:

That John Lind, his special envoy to Mexico City, does not bear any solution of the present situation, but goes to continue this government's efforts to induce Provisional President Huerta to redeem his promises for free and constitutional elections.

That under no circumstances does the administration propose to recognize the Huerta government.

That Mr. Lind has gone to Mexico City to be the "eyes and ears" of the Washington administration on the ground, and to explain the attitude of this government when he has fully familiarized himself with the situation.

That by withdrawing Ambassador Wilson and sending Mr. Lind the President planned to have a man on the ground who was in sympathy with the administration here and was in no sense a factor in the situation in Mexico City.

These policies and suggestions of the President and Secretary Bryan came out in general discussion. It was made clear that the purpose of the conefrence was to establish more frank and intimate relatitons between the senate and the administration in the development of the Mexican policy, and in the furtherance of this idea the president talked freely and answered many pointed questions.

While the president disclosed no definite plan for the pacification of Mexico, the implication remained that upon Lind's reports would depend to a large extent the future policy of this country.

There was practically no talk of lifting the embargo on the importation of arms into Mexico, which some members of the committee believe would put a speedy end to the difficulties.

The meeting was entirely friendly. The president did most of the talking and Secretary Bryan and members of thee committee added a word here and there. Of the 12 men present only two senators, Smith of Arizona and Stone, are out-and-out believers in a policy of ultimate intervention.

President Wilson was firmly of the belief that interventiton will not be necessary and some members of the committee which went to the White House disturbed in mind came away with the belief that perhaps much of the recent talk in the senate had been unwarranted.

POWTRS AFTER TURKEY.

Will Demand Evacuation of City of Adrianople.

Sofia. — Assurances were given to the Bulgarian government by the powers that they would serve Turkey with an ultimatum calling for the evacuation of Thrace, which includes Adrianople. Doubt is growing here whether peace in the Balkans will be lasting, Bulgaria and Montenegro are dissatisfied with the result of the war, while Turkey will probably seize any pretext to resume hostilities.

FARM ANIMALS

STOCK CHUTE QUITE USEFUL

Built on Wheels and Axle of Old Mower Useful Device May Be Hauled to All Parts of Farm.

Perhaps every farmer has occasion to load some animal into a wagon and many of them prepare for this by building a stock chute. Frequently these chutes are built as permanent fixtures in connection with the feed lots, but they are often made so that they can be transported from one part of the farm to another. When a chute of this kind is built heavy and strong enough to support the weight of a mature hog or a large calf it becomes a clumsy thing to move. Mr. R. J. Linscott, Holton, Kas., has solved this problem of inconvenience in a very easy way.

The wheels and axle used in making his stock chute are parts of old machinery found on the farm, the wheels being taken from an old mower. The upper end of the chute is provided with two strong iron hooks, which are sharpened so as to engage the bottom the wagon bed and prevent slipping after the animal starts upward. With such as arrangement there is no difficulty in building a chute of ample strength, because the question of weight has relatively little importance. The chute can be hooked on behind the wagon and hauled to any part of the farm.

CULLINC OUT THE OLD EWES

Good Shepherds Do Not Hesitate to Get Rid of Grandmothers Before They Go Down Hill.

Usually by the time that a ewe has reached the age of seven years she has spent most of her usefulness as a breeder and mother. Good shepherds do not hesitate to cull out these old grandmothers before they go down hill. They usually pick up in flesh shortly after weaning time, and can be best marketed just as they come from pasture—without fattening.

Old ewes "break in the mouth," so to speak, and cannot eat. Naturally they keep going down in flesh, waste much of their food, and frequently their mouths get so sore they will not take sufficient food to fatten them. The wool becomes shorter and shorter with advancing age, says the Farm Press, and lacks several pounds of the weights they shore in their prime. Lambs from old ewes are never as satisfactory. The milk supply falls short, and the lamb is dwarfed and stunted so that it never makes a thrifty feeder.

Their presence in the flock detracts from its appearance and value. One or two old ewes in a flock of prime breeders will often hurt the sale value as much as a dollar a head. For these reasons, then, cull closely and keep only the best prime breeding ewes. With the price of mutton and wool so low as it is, he cannot afford to keep other than those from which the best returns can be expected.

FEW CAUSES FOR INFECTIONS

Estimated That 85 Per Cent. of All Losses From Hog Diseases Arises From Dreaded Cholera.

One cause of infection in hogs is improper feeding, which includes unbalanced rations, overfeeding, underfeeding, irritating food (such as garbage, soured slops, etc.), insanitary feed troughs and impure drinking water. Also may be mentioned insufficient housing, especially during the heat of summer and the cold of winter, dampness, insanitary condition of the pens or houses, overcrowding of sleeping quarters, etc.

It has been estimated that 85 per cent. of all losses from hog diseases arise from cholera. The need of all precautions against infection and spread is therefore apparent. It is within the power of all hog raisers to guard against the contributory cause enumerated above; and the simple statement of the causes also points the way for prevention.

Use Your Own Corn.

If a farmer can feed his 60-cent corn to good hogs which will pay him 80 cents for it, does he not make an advance on the price of his corn and profit in the fertility returned to the soil, as well as saving the expense in hauling?

Shed for Sheep.

Don't keep sheep in a damp basement. They want a dry floor to stand on. If you have not a good shed build one with a floor two feet from the ground.

Practical Fashions

LADY'S MATERNITY GOWN.

In this gown there is no attempt at making even the semblance of a dress. The inner body lining can be laced at the darts and down the front and the outer portion, with its short empire bodice and skirt with double box plaits in front and back will give as much as is needed for comfort and looks. Challie, sateen, outing flannel, lawn, gingham, ratine, and other soft, thin fabrics are suitable for this gown.

The gown pattern (6289) is cut in sizes 34 to 42 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 6⅜ yards of 36 inch material, ⅝ yard of 22 inch all-over and 1⅛ yards of 36 inch lining.

To procure this pattern send 10 cents to "Pattern Department," of this paper. Write name and address plainly, and be sure to give size and number of pattern.

Accounting for the Balkan Hatred.

"I can't figger it out any other way," mused Stanley Livingston Mutshaw, the amateur philosopher, "that the Serbs, Bulgars, Roumanians and the rest of those feverish folks in the Balkan states are all related to each other by marriage—brothers-in-law, mostly, I should judge. Otherwise there seems no way of accounting for the hearty, whole-souled manner in which they hate each other."—Kansas City Star.

Largest of All Barometers.

The big barometer at Faenza, Italy, set up some years ago as a memorial to Torricelli, is thought to be the hugest of all such instruments. The oil column in this barometer stands normally at about thirty-seven feet, and its fluctuations are read in feet instead of inches, as in the case of ordinary thermometers.

WOMAN TOOK FRIEND'S ADVICE

And Found Health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Windom, Kansas.—"I had a displacement which caused bladder trouble and I was so miserable I didn't know what to do. I suffered from bearing down pains, my eyes hurt me, I was nervous, dizzy and irregular and had female weakness. I spent money on doctors but got worse all the time.

"A friend told me about the Pinkham remedies and I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was cured. I cannot praise your remedies enough for I know I never would have been well if I had not taken it."—Miss MARY A. HORNER, Route No. 2, Box 41, Windom, Kansas.

Consider Well This Advice.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for nearly forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Exact Statement.

Some one has said that the man who laughs is the man who is secure in superior information, wisdom, wit or sophistry. The naivete of the Sudani supplies plenty of food for this kind of laughter.

There is the story of a telegraph clerk in an outlying district of the White Nile who, finding the desolation upon his nerves, telegraphed to headquarters: "Cannot stay here; am in danger of life; and surrounded by lions, elephants and wolves."

The hard-hearted operator at the other end wired back: "There are no wolves in the Suran."

He received a second wire: "Referring my wire 16th, cancel wolves."—Youth's Companion.

IN MISERY WITH ECZEMA

Franklinton, La.—"About four years ago my face broke out in little red pimples. At first the eczema did not bother, but finally the pimples began itching and burning and then there came little raised places. I suffered untold misery. I scratched them until they bled and I could not sleep at night. I was ashamed of my face and I could not bear to touch it.

"I tried different remedies without result until I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in six weeks they completely cured my face. That was nine months ago, and no sign has appeared since." (Signed) Mrs. Leola Stennett, Dec. 14, 1912.

HIRED MAN KNEW THE GAME

His Dexterity on First Base Surprised the Youngsters Until They Learned More of His Career.

In the American Magazine Hugh S. Fullerton writes an article entitled "The Making of a Big Leaguer." It is the story of one of the greatest ball players in the United States as told by himself to Mr. Fullerton. This player was a country boy and, of course began to play the game early. He tells the following story about an incident of his boyhood:

"Father had a hired man named Ned, a tall, quiet fellow with a pair of blue eyes that seemed always about to laugh, but seldom did. He had been with us a year. He got drunk periodically, and after each spree father hunted him up and brought him back to work. We asked him to play with us, and he laughed and said he reckoned he would try to play first base if 'paw' would let him off. I fixed it with father, and Ned played first barehanded making catches and stops that filled us with astonishment. Also he made five home runs, two into the railroad pond and three into the barn lot back of left field. Walking home that evening he told me he had played ball professionally, yet it was not until two years later that I learned he once had been a famous outfielder with a great team."

Changes Her Mind.

"I used to think Gus Simpson was a nice young man, but I just hate him now."

"Why, what has he done?"

"He treated me shamefully."

"In what way?"

"Why, the other evening at a party I said to him: 'Let's play the old game of "Questions." If I say "Yes" or "No" to your questions, I owe you a box of gloves; and if you say "Yes" or "No," you'll give me a box.'"

"Then what?"

"Well, after the party he took me home and all the way there he talked as sweetly as could be about love, and that man should not live alone and all that, and when we got to the front gate he said, 'Fannie, will you marry me?' I, of course, answered, 'Yes,' in a suppressed voice."

"And what did he do then?" inquired her listener, eagerly.

"He just chuckled and said, 'You've lost, Fannie. I take No, 9s. Then laughed with all his might—that's what he did."

No wonder she hated him!

New Name for Bungalow.

A carpenter contractor had been figuring on a small house for a prosperous European-American workman in an outlying district. "Come up to my office," he said to the prospective patron, "and we will look over some plans in a book I have." The young man came to the office and spent some time looking over the plans with the contractor, who finally inquired: "Have you thought anything about the kind of a place you wish to build? What do you think of a nice cottage?"

"I do' know," replied the young man, "but I think maybe we lika have nice bunghole."—Youngstown Telegram.

E. E. UPCHURCH TO GO TO REXALL CONVENTION

Leading Druggists of the Entire World to Meet in Boston to Gather New Ideas

Mr. E. E. Upchurch, proprietor of the Rexall Store at Clanton, and one of the most progressive business men of this section, will leave Clanton for Boston on Friday, August 15, where he will attend the Eleventh Annual Rexall Convention of the United Drug Company, an international manufacturing and importing organization in which he is a heavy stockholder. Interviewed by Union Banner reporter at the busy Rexall Store Mr. Upchurch outlined his plans and vivid description of a new form of practical co-operation which he calls "The Rexall idea."

Why Rexall Stores Win.

"Numbers of people frequently ask me he said, how I can offer high grade goods at such low prices; where I get such a lot of new merchandise; and why it is that I have the newest novelties and latest wrinkles in store service before any one else. I would be glad to take the credit for these things to myself, but frankly I owe much of my good fortune to the fact that I am a member of the United Drug Company. This Company was started in Boston eleven years ago, by Louis K. Liggett. At that time there was no such thing as co-operation in the retail Drug business. It was every man for himself and the 'devil take hindmost.' Individual druggists manufactured their own remedies, good, bad and indifferent; bought their goods in small lots at high prices, and fought each other tooth and nail. Mr. Liggett saw that if the buying and manufacturing power of the leading druggists could be combined, and a standard policy adopted for all their stores, the result would be increased business and better service for the public.

Rexall Remedies Guaranteed.

Beginning with forty of biggest retailers in this country, he formed the United Drug Company and began to manufacture a line of honest household remedies, based on tested formulas, the sale of which was limited to one locality. These remedies were made by skilled chemists from the best materials; and to further protect the public, each remedy was sold under a positive guarantee of satisfaction or money back. Futhermore, Rexall Remedies were not patent medicines; their formulas were published in book form so that before buying a remedy, a customer could see just what it contained.

"If you will remember that up to that time the buyer of household remedies never knew what he was getting or what he would be asked to pay for it, you can understand how the public appreciated the Rexall Store plan of doing business. From the beginning Rexalls Remedies had enormous sale. New Rexall Stores were opened, one each locality, as fast as possible, considering the fact that before any druggist is allowed to sell the United Drug Company products, his financial and personal character are rigidly investigated; and that unless he is univerially recognized as the leadingdruggistin the community, he cannot secure the Rexall sales privilege.

"As soon as the public realized what Rexall Remedies were, they began to ask for other goods made by the same that make Rexall.' To meet this demand the United Drug Company entered other fields.

United Drug Co. Covers 25 Acrrss

"In 1903, the Company's business was confined to one building with 30,000 square feet of floor space. Today it is operating laboratories, factories, mills, warehouses and branches, thruout the United States, Canada and Great Britain, and requires a total of over 1, 00 , 000 square feet floor space or more than 25 acres—for the manufacture of such exclusively Rexall Store products as Rexall Remedies, Harmony Perfumes; Liggett's Fenway and Saturday Candies; Symphony Lawn, Ustaco and Bokhara Stationery; Maximum Monogram and American Beauty Rubber products; Clenzo and Marguerite Tooth Brushes; Liggett's Orangeade, Grape Juice and Fruit Syrups, etc..

Rexall Means Low Prices.

"The people welcomed these new goods; just as they had welcomed the first Rexall Remedies, and today the Rexall Store sign is displayed by over 7, 000 druggists in the United States, Canada and Great Britain, and everywhere it is accepted as positive evidence that the owners of those stores can be trusted to give a square deal, and that anything they sell will be of higher grade, cost less and last longer, than would similar goods, bought elsewhere. This public confidence embraces not the goods actually manufactured by the United Drug Company, the sale which Rexall Druggists control, but extends to all the merchandise sold by the Rexall Store. This is due to the fact that instead of buying in individual small lots, Rexall Druggists bunch their orders, thus securing from manufacturers and jobbers big price concessions of which they give their customers the benefit. The average druggist who, for instance, buys half a dozen hot water bottles from one manufacturer, cannot hope to secure so low a price as the manufacturer can afford to quote when the United Drug Company places an order to supply hot water bottles to over 7,000 druggists. It is the same with all other merchandise. Everything sold in The Rexall Store is bought at a rock bottom price, and can, therefore, be sold at a rock bottom price and still yield the druggist a fair profit.

Rexall Druggists are Importers

"Another advantage enjoyed by Rexall druggists is the fact that the United Drug Company has agents in all European countries, who are constantly on the watch for new goods and new ideas. when a customer goes into a Rexall Store to buy anything in drug store merchandise—I don't care what it is—he has his pick of the best goods from all quarters of the earth. If he wants to buy, say, the finest tooth brush made, he can get it in only two ways: by going to France himself, or by going to The Rexall Druggist, who controls the output of the finest tooth brush factories in France. If the purchase is a bottle of violet perfume, made from real Parma violets, a box of breakfast cocoa, made in Holland, a Christmas greeting card, created by an artist in London, the same is true. The customer can get it by going abroad or by trading at The Rexall Store.

Annual Meetings Held

"Of course, with all these advantages, The Rexall Store is bound to succeed, provided only that the Rexall Druggist himself keeps up-to-date, and makes the most of his opportunities. To insure this, we hold an Annual Convention, in some prominent city, at which we exchange ideas, show each other new goods, tell our experiences and plan new ways of giving the public better service and lower prices. Last year's meeting was held in St. Louis, Missouri, and the meeting I am now going to attend is to be in Boston. It will last four days, Monday, August 18, to Thursday, August 21. There will be six business sessions, during which I shall gather new ideas and buy new goods for next season; and in addition to practical matters, I expect to have a mighty good time.

Rexallit s from Everywhere

"You see, the United Drug Company is purely co-operative. Since there is only one Rexall Druggist in each locality, we are partners and not competitors. When I get to Boston I will meet and be on friendly terms with druggists whom I have met at other Rexall Conventions, and who are coming to this meeting from every State in the Union, from all the provinces of Canada, and from England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales. During the meetings, and in informal talkes between whiles, we will criticize each other's methods, and offer suggestions that will be welcomed, just as you would welcome a hint from a friend of yours.

Good Times in Boston

"To realize what mighty good fellows these druggists are, you ought to see us when we 'Get Together,' as we say, for a good time. This year we will have theatre parties, motor trips, luncheons, smokers, banquets and a big field day at Nantasket Beach. I'll come back home—I know, because I always do—feeling like a new man. And if I don't give the public additional reasons for confidence in The Rexall Store, by Gad, I'll cancel my membership in the United Drug Company in favor of a better man."

DARBYS FLUID

PREVENTS AND CURES

HOG CHOLERA

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

Pen up your hogs when cholera is in the neighborhood. For each ten hogs put one quarter of a bottle of Darbys Fluid in the daily supply of water. Clean out troughs every day before watering. Do not feed slop or any liquid food. Feed moderately on chops or other light stuff. Continue this treatment for two weeks, you can then turn your hogs out;—they are insured against cholera.

READ THE PROOF.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

This is to certify that we have used Darbys Fluid for the prevention and cure of Hog Cholera. Last summer we used it on fifty head of hogs and we lost only nine. These nine consisted of a brood sow and litter of eight pigs. We believe we could have saved the entire herd had we started using Darbys Fluid earlier.

GANTT BROS. STORE CO., Little River, Ala.

GENTLEMEN:—

Hogs were dying of Cholera by the thousand in my neighborhood They had it all around me but I saved all mine by putting Darbys Fluid in their drinking water and not letting them have any water without Darbys Fluid in it. Its a great preventive. I keep it on hand all the time. Its good for a hundred purposes.

J. A. STANALAND, Pidcock, Ga.

DARBYS FLUID has many uses about the household. It destroys germs or bad odors about the house and the air of living or sleeping rooms. It heals wounds, sores, cuts or galls on human or animal flesh. It is a addition to the bath for cleansing the body or feet of disagreeable odors. If used in the water for brushing it sweetens the breath. As a disinfectant for the sick-room in contagious diseases and for safe-guarding of the family when such diseases are prevalent in the neighborhood it is worth it weight in gold.

Sold in Large Bottles. Price 50 Cents.

Singing at Union Grove

A nice crowd gathered on the Second Sunday night at Union Grove for singing and preaching. Several directors were there. One feature of the day was the directing of several sacred compositions by four little girls, pupils of Prof. Jackson. They were only ten and twelve years of age and are daughters of our new Tax Assessor, Mr. Dennis, and Mr. Brown and Mr. McSwain. Their fine leading spoke volumes for their teacher. The preaching by Rev. Lowery on the trials of the righteous was good. His discourse brought to mind the fact that the righteous are being tried here and tested for their great work of judging the world and angels in the world's judgment day, the present being the trial or judgment day of the righteous. Then what a prize is before them! Hence their trial and testing here must be severe. The dinner was all that could be desired. It was a pleasant time.

George W. Long Dead

Young Man of Mt. Creek Dies of Typhoid at Pratt City.

Mountain Creek.—On Aug 8 we were all shocked to hear of the death of one of our noble and kind hearted boys, George W. Long, son of R. H. Long. He had gone tn Pratt City where he was working when taken sick with typhoid fever. He was sick only three weeks before he died. He was a young man about 19 years of age, and a member of the Pratt City Baptist church. His remains were brought to Mountain Creek and buried at Canaan church cemetery on Sunday morning, Aug. 10, Rev. Joe Raines conducting the funeral services.

Thorsby Item.

Last Tuesday night several of the Indians of Thorsby went to visit the Clanton Tribe, and report a pleasant evening at their wigwam.

Mrs. P, K. Villadsen is spending a few days in Birmingham with her son.

The fruit growers held their annual picnic in Thorson's Park last Wednesday. The most noticeable feature of the picnic was the great number of fine looking bachelors. In order to show how many there were, they spread a bachelor's table, and it was laden with delicious eatables.

Mrs. Butler and mother returned home Friday night from their northern trip.

Mr. Calvin Pugh is the guest of Mayor Bice for a few days.

The first play given by the D. C. Dramatic Club Saturday night was a grand success. The house was full to overflowing. We are glad the dramattc club is preparing for another play in the near future.

Mount Pleasant

Health here is not very good. Mrs. R. P. Robinson and Mrs. W. R. Martin are on the sick list.

Our singing school is progressing nicely under the direction of Prof. T. T. Taylor.

Miss Lonie Winkler leaves next Monday for Boaz College.

Mrs. Bob Caffer was guest at W. R. Martin's Saturday.

Board of Education to Meet

The County Educational Board has been called to meet at Clanton next Friday, August 22, 1913, to transact any business that may come before that body.

J. W. Moore, Co. Supt.

Tax Collector J. D. Collins has purchased 11 acres of very desirable land on the river road about 1 mile east of Clanton and will build a good home.

Mt. Pleasant

Rev. Willie Wilson preached here Sunday to a large congregation.

Mr. Ed Martin and family were recent visitors to friends and relatives in the southern part of the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Blankenship of Weogufka have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Blankenship.

Mrs. A. B. Baxley of Talladega Springs spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Massey.

Mr. Edmund Manning and Mrs. Zemma Manning of Mulberry spent last Thursday night with Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Vickers.

Mr. Jim Bailey and family of Coosa county are visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lewis.

Miss Ivory Aldridge of Clanton visited Miss Katie Duncan Sunday.

Mrs. Susie Duke and children are visiting Mrs. Tennie Lindsey this week.

Misses Velma and Lestia Watson spent Sunday with Miss Gracie Scroggins.

Mr. R. M. Butler recently made a trip to Coosa county.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshal Wesson spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Ed Martin.

Mr. Billie Honeycutt spent part of last week at Mr. T. J Maherg's.

Mr. John Guy of Coosa county visited at Mr. A. J. Duke's last week.

There will be a singing here next Sunday evening. Prof. W. G. Culp will bring his class from Liberty to help us out so we are expecting some good singing. Everybody is invited to come. Sunday school will be ot two o'clock. We especially invite the Editor of the Union-Banner.

Married at Court House

Young Couple From Cooper are United by Probate Judge, E. B. Deason.

Mr. W. T- Morris and Miss Ludelia Smith of Coopers were happily masried at the Probate Judge's office about 5:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Upon the arrival of the north bound passenger train it became known that a wedding was going to take place. Preceded by a few jolly couples from Coopers and a mass of onlookers from the offices, stores and streets, the young couple proudly marched to the court house where the fatal words were to be pronounced, and demanded of Probate Clerk, Pyron, the proper certificates. Judge E. B. Deason in a very impressive ceremony joined the couple in holy wedlock. Quite a number had crowded into the office to witness the occasion, but seemingly without much notice or attention from the contracting parties. The bride and groom are among the most popular young people in our neighboring town, Coopers, and the good wishes of many friends go out for them in their journey through coming life.

Mountain Creek

Maj. C. A. Gunn and Mr. E. L. Thornton visited Corinth church during the late continuous meeting and both of these gentlemen speak in high terms of the people, the meeting and the hospitable manner in which they were received.

Rural Route Agents, Henderson and Culver both say that the rain of last Friday saved the corn and cotton on their routes. These gentlemen cover about 25 miles each, and are not only close observers but men of good judgment. They say that while the crops will not be what is termed "bumper," crops they are above the average.

Our genial depot agent and his wife are on a month's vacation. Charley White will hold down both his and Mr. Hubbard's job.

Dr. Maddox the quick and successful welcomer to "little strangers" intending to remain with the people here says, "Well, Mr. Reporter, still they come—three new arrivals last week. And thus the population increases.

The boys (and some men too) did turn out and work the roads. Your reporter can vouch for Charley Brown, Mr. Coburn, Tom Smith and Bryant Long, for each of these and others too were actually seen by him working hard.

Citizens Meeting.

All the citizens interested in the High School proposition are asked to meet at the court house on Thursday evening at 7:45 p. m. for the purpose of perfecting plans preparatory to an invitation to the State High School Committee. This is a matter that should concern every citize.

J. J. Pickens.

Mr. T. E. Williams, Chairman of the Chilton county corn club work which was organized at the recent session of the Teachers Institute, was in our office Wednesday. Mr. Williams is a live educational worker, and expresses his characteristic determination to "bring things to pass," in this good movement.

O. Z. Robinson Dies at Clanton Infirmary

Injuries Received at the Dam Results in Death Monday Morning

Mr. O. Z. Robinson, a well known young man, died at an early hour Monday morning at the Hopkins Infirmary, from injuries received at the Dam Saturday morning. Mr. Robinson it seems had charge of some large machinery and in oiling the machinery some way he was caught and his foot badly mashed; so much so 'til amputation was inevitable. He was hurried to the Hopkins Hospital at Clanton as quickly as possible where his foot was amputated following which he died. Mr. Robinson was well known in this community having formerly lived near Clanton. He leaves a wife and two children and many friends and relatives to mourn his deplorable death. His remains were buried at Providence emetery, Beat 16, Tuesday.

CLARENCE CALLOWAY INSTANTLY KILLED.

Body Caught Under Log and Mashed to Death

Clarance Calloway, the 16 year old son of Mr. E. B. Calloway who lives near Samaria church, was killed while hauling logs near Coopers Wednesday. His body was found under the log which had fallen across him and it is supposed that he had been dead about an hour when found. He was a young boy well and favorably known in Clanton. He is a brother to our clever townman, Joe Calloway. His many friends will be sorry to hear of the sad death.

The Baby Show

The following babies have entered the contest for the Baby Show on the 28th of August:

J. H. Middleton, Jr., James Wade, Mary Goodwin Jones, Charles Simpson, Emmett Matthews Wimberley, Percy I. Hopkins, J. C. Cooley, Jessie Sam Gowan, Katherine Hayes, Sarah Luckie, Joes Luckie.

Notice.

Editor Union-Banner:

Please give us space in your valuable paper to say that the Chilton County Singing Convention No. 3 will be held at Bethel Church, about two miles west of Coopers (same distance southwest of Falakto) on the First Sunday in September and Saturday before. Books used will be Sacred Harp and Christian Harmony. All are invited. Bring books and spend two days in sacred song.

The LADY of the MOUNT

SYNOPSIS.

Comtesse Elise, daughter of the governor of the Mount, has chance encounter with a peasant boy. The "Mount," a small rock-bound island, stood in vast bay on the northwestern coast of France, and during the time of Louis XVI. was a government stronghold. Develops that the peasant boy was the son of Seigneur Desaurac, nobleman. Young Desaurac determines to secure an education and become a gentleman; sees the governor's daughter depart for Paris. Lady Elise returns after seven years' schooling, and entertains many nobles. Her Ladyship dances with strange fisherman, and a call to arms is made in an effort to capture a mysterious Le Seigneur Noir. He escapes. Lady Elise is caught in the "Grand" tide. The Black Seigneur rescues and takes her to his retreat. Elise discovers that her savior was the boy with the fish. Sanchez, the Seigneur's servant, is arrested and brought before the governor. Lady Elise has Sanchez set free. Seigneur and a priest at the "Cockles." Sanchez tells Desaurac that Lady Elise betrayed him, but is not believed. The Seigneur plans to release prisoners at the Mount. Lady Elise pleads with her father to spare the lives of condemned prisoners. Disguised as a peasant Lady Elise mingles with the people and hears some startling facts. A mysterious Mountebank starts a riot. He is arrested and locked up after making close observations of the citadel, and is afterwards summoned before the governor's daughter. The governor enters the room during the interview with the Mountebank. As a miserable buffoon, the Mountebank is released by order of the governor. Desaurac overpowers guard and dons soldier's uniform. The Seigneur successfully passes guards and finds the "Great Wheel."

CHAPTER XXI.

The Stairway of Silver.

The stillness of the moment that followed was tense; then thickly the young man answered something irrelevant about a clown, a bottle and a loaf; with cap drawn down and half-averted face, he lurched a little forward in the darkness, and the sentinel's weapon fell. "Oh, that's you, is it, Henri?" he said in a different tone, stepping back. "How did you leave the fellow?"

"Eating the bread and calling for more!" As he spoke, the other stopped, swaying uncertainly; above the arch, the wick, ill-trimmed, brightened and darkened to the drafts of air through break and slit of the old lamp; and briefly he awaited a favorable moment, when the flame blew out until almost extinguished; then with hand near sword-hilt, somewhat overbriskly, but in keeping with the part, he stepped toward the arch; through it, and quickly past the sentinel.

"You seem to have been feasting and drinking a little yourself, tonight, comrade?" called out the latter after him. "I noticed it when you went in, and— But aren't you taking the wrong way?" As the other, after starting toward the barracks, straightened, and then abruptly wheeled into the road, running up the Mount.

"Bah!" A moment the young man passed. "Can't a soldier," articulating with difficulty, "go to see his sweetheart without—"

"Eh bien!" The sentinel shrugged his shoulders. "It isn't my business. I think, though, I know where they'll put you tomorrow, when they find cut through the guard at the barracks."

To this ominous threat the other deigned no response, only, after the fashion of a man headstrong in insobriety, as well as in affairs of gallantry, continued his upward way; at first, speedily; afterward, when beyond hearing of the man below, with more stealth and as little noise as possible, until the road, taking a sudden angle, brought him abruptly to an open space at the foot of a great flight of stone stairs.

Broad, wide, broken by occasional platforms, these steps, reaching upward in gradual ascent, had designedly, in days gone by, been made easy for broken-down monarchs or corpulent abbots. Also they had been planned to satisfy the discerning eye, jealous of every addition or alteration at the Mount. My lord, the ancient potentate, leisurely ascending in ecclesiastical gown, while conscious of an earthly power reaching even into England, could still fancy he was going up a Jacob's ladder into realms supernal. Saint Louis, with gaze be- ly bent toward the aerial escalier entelle of the chapel to the left, well exclaim no royal road could e with this inspiring and holy r is it difficult to understand yond, that enchantment here, or be- pilgrimages drew to the rock on three ner than sain hat other Louis, more sin- name to mount t, the eleventh of his

To reach the point he had in mind, however, no choice remained; the steps had to be mounted, and, lowering his head and looking down, deliberately he started. As he proceeded his solitary figure seemed to become more distinct; his presence more obtrusive and his echoing footsteps to resound louder. No indication he had been seen or heard, however, reached him; to all appearances espionage of his movements was wanting, and only the saint with the sword at the top of the steeple—guardian spirit of the rock—looked down, as if holding high a gleaming warning of that unwonted intrusion.

Yet, though he knew it not, mortal eye had long been on him, peering from a window of the abbot's bridge spanning the way and joining certain long unused chambers, next to the Governor's palace, with my lady's abode. Against the somber background of that covered passage of granite, the face looking out would still have remained unseen, even had the young man, drawing near, lifted his glance. This, however, he did not do; his eyes, with the pale reflections dancing in them, had suddenly fastened themselves lower; toward another person, not far beyond the bridge; some one who had turned in from a passage on the other side of the overhead architectural link, and had just begun to come down. An old man, with flowing beard, from afar the new-comer looked not unlike one of the ancient Druids that, in days gone by, had lighted and watched the sacred fires of sacrifice in the rock. He, too guarded his light; but one set in the tall, pewter lamp of the medieval watchman.

"Twelve o'clock and all's—" he began when his glance, sweeping down, caught sight of the ascending figure, and, pausing, he leaned on his staff with one hand and shaded his eyes with the other.

A half-savage exclamation of disappointment was suppressed on the young man's lips; had he only been able to attain that parallelogram of darkness, beneath the abbot's passage, he would have been better satisfied, his own eyes, looking ahead, seemed to say; then gleamed with a bolder light.

"A sword and blade
A drab and a jade;
All's one to the King's men of the army!"

he began to hum softly, as with a more reckless swing, quickly he went up in the manner of a man assigned some easy errand. At the same time the patriarch slowly and rather laboriously resumed his descent, and just below the bridge, without the bar of shadow, the two came together.

"Think you it is too late for his Excellency, the Governor, to receive a message?" at once spoke up the younger, breaking off in that dashing, but low-murmured, song of the barracks.

"That you may learn from the guard at the palace," was the deliberate answer, as, raising his lamp, the watchman held it full in his questioner's face.

"Thanks! I was going to inquire." As he answered, at the old abbot's window in the bridge above, the face, looking out, bent forward more intently; then quickly drew back. "Good night!"

But the venerable guardian of the inner precinct was not disposed thus lightly to part company. "I don't seem to know you, young man," he observed, the watery, but keen and critical eyes passing deliberately over the other's features.

"No?" Unflinching in the bright glare of the lamp, the seeming soldier smiled. "Do you, then, know all at the Mount—even the soldiers?"

"I should remember even them," was the quiet reply.

"Those, too, but lately brought from St. Dalard?"

"True, true! There may be some of those—" uncertainly.

"No doubt! So if you will lower your lamp, which smells rather vilely—"

"From the miscreants it has smelled out," answered the old man grimly, but obeyed; stood as if engrossed in the recollection his own response evoked; then turned; walked on, and, a few moments later, his call, suddenly remembered, rang, belated, in the drowsy air: "Twelve o'clock and all's well! A new day, and St. Aubert guard us all!"

A sword and a blade;
A drab and a jade—

The words, scarcely begun, above his breath, died away on the seeming soldier's lips as the watcher on the bridge, looking down to follow first the departing figure of the old custodian, crossed quickly to the opposite window, and, from this point of vantage, gazed up after the young man rapidly vanishing in the track of the moonlight. A moment the onlooker stood motionless; then, ere the figure, so vividly defined in shine and shimmer, had reached the top of the stairway, made an abrupt movement and swiftly left the window and the passage.

At the head of the steps, which without further incident or interruption, he reached, the Black Seigneur, stepping to the shadow of a small bush against the wall, glanced about him; with knit brows and the resolute manner of one who has come to some definite conclusion, he left the spot of observation, almost the apex of the Mount, and plunged diverging to the right. From glint and glimmer to darkness unfathomable! For some time he could only grope and feel his way, after the fashion of the blind; fortunately, however, was the path narrow; although tortuous, fairly well paved, and no serious mishap befell him, even when he walked forward regardlessly, in feverish haste, beset with the conviction that time meant all in all, and delay the closing of the toils and the failure of a desperate adventure. Several times he struck against the stones; once fell hard, but picked himself up; went on the faster, only, after what seemed an interminable period, to stop.

"Am I, can I be mistaken?"

But the single star he could see plainest from the bottom of the deep alley, and to which he looked up, answered not the fierce, half-muttered question; coldly, enigmatically it twinkled, and, half-running, he continued his way, to emerge over-suddenly into a cooler well of air, and—what was more to be welcomed!—an outlook whereof the details were in a measure dimly shadowed forth.

On one side the low wall obscured not the panorama below—a ghost-like earth fading into the mist, and nearer, the roof of the auberge des voleurs, a darkened patch on the slope of the rock; but in this direction the man hardly cast a glance. Certain buildings ahead, austere, Norman in outline, absorbed his attention to the exclusion of all else, and toward them, with steps now alert and noiseless, he stole; past a structure that seemed a small salle des gardes whose window afforded a view of four men nodding at a table within; across a space to another passage, and thence to a low door at the far corner of a little triangular spot, alongside the walk and near a great wall. At once the young man put out his hand to the door; tried it; pushed it back and entered. Before him a wide opening looked out at the sky, framing a multitude of stars, and from the bottom of this aperture ran a strand, or rope, connecting with an indistinct object—a great wheel, which stood at one side!

"Twelve O'Clock, and All's—"

CHAPTER XXII.

The Whirling of the Wheel.

As old as church or cloister, the massive wheel of the Mount had, in the past, played prominent part in the affairs of succeeding communities on the rock. It, or the hempen strand it controlled, had primarily served as a link between the sequestered dwellers, and the flesh-pots and material comforts of the lower world. Through its use had my lord, the abbot, been ever enabled to keep full the mighty wine-butts of his cellars; to provide good cheer for the tables of the brethren, and to brighten his cold stone interiors with the fresh greens of Flemish tapestry, or the sensuous hues of rugs and fabrics from seraglio or mosque. Times less ancient had likewise claimed its services, and even in recent years, by direction of his Excellency, the Governor, had it occasionally been used for the hoisting of goods, wares, or giant casks, overcumbersome for men or mules.

Toward this simple monkish contrivance, the summit's rough lift, or elevator, wherein serfs or henchmen had walked like squirrels in a cage to bring solace to generations of isolated dwellers, the Black Seigneur had at first stepped impetuously; then stopped, hardly breathing, to look over his shoulder at the door that had been left unfastened. An involuntary question flashing through his brain—the cause of this seeming carelessness—found almost immediate answer in his mind, and the certainty that he stood not there alone—a consciousness of some one else, near, became abruptly confirmed.

"What are you doing, soldier?" A voice, rough, snarling, drew swiftly his glance toward a presence, intuitively divined; an undersized, grotesque figure that had entered the place but a few moments before and now appeared from behind boxes and casks where he had been about to retire to his mattress in a corner.

"What do you want?" repeated this person, the anger and viciousness on his distorted features, revealed in the moonlight from the large opening, like that of some animal unwarrantedly disturbed.

"You, landlord of the thieves' inn!" And inaction giving way to movement on the intruder's part, a knife that had flashed back in the hand of the hunchback, with his query, was swiftly twisted from him and kicked aside, while a scream of mingled pain and rage became abruptly suppressed. Struggling and writhing like a wildcat, Jacques proved no mean antagonist; with a strength incredible for one of his size, supplemented by the well-known agility of his kind, he scratched, kicked and had managed to get the other's hand in his mouth, when, making an effort to throw off that clinging burden, the Black Seigneur dashed the dwarf's head violently against the wooden support of the place. At once all belligerency left the hunchback, and, releasing his hold, he sank to the ground.

An instant the intruder regarded the inert form; then, going to the door, latched and locked it with a key he found inside. Having thus in a measure secured himself from immediate interruption without—for anyone trying the door would conclude the wheel-room vacant, or that the dwarf slept there or in the store-house beyond—the Black Seigneur walked to the aperture, and reaching up, began to pay out the rope from a pulley above. As he did so, with feet braced, he leaned over to follow in its descent a small car along the almost perpendicular planking from the mouth of the wheel-room to the rocks, several hundred feet below.

A sudden slackening of the rope—assurance that the car, at the end of the line, had reached the loading-spot below without the fortifications—and the young man straightened; in an attitude of attention, stood listening. But the stillness, impregnated only with a faint underbreath, the far-away murmur of water, or the just audible droning of insects near the figtrees on the rocks, continued unbroken. An impatient frown gathered on his brow; more eagerly he bent forward to gaze down, when through the air a distant sound—the low, melancholy hoot of an owl—was wafted upward.

Upon him at the aperture, this night-call, common to the Mount and its environs, acted in magical manner, and swiftly had he stepped toward the wheel, when an object, intervening, stirred; started to stagger to its feet. At once was the young man's first impelling movement arrested; but, thus forcibly drawn from his purpose, he did not long pause to contemplate; his hand, drawing the soldier's sword, held it quickly at the hunchback's throat.

"A sound, and you know what to expect!"

With the bare point at his flesh, Jacques, dully hearing, vaguely comprehending, could, indeed, guess and the fingers he had involuntarily raised to push the bright blade aside, fell, while at the same time any desire to attempt to call out, or arouse the guard, was replaced by an entirely different emotion in his aching brain. Never before had he actually felt that sharp touch—the prelude to the final thrust. At the sting of it, a tremor ran through him, while cowardice, his besetting quality, long covered by growl and egotism in his strength and hideousness to terrify, alone shone from his unprepossessing yellow features.

"You were brave enough with the soldiers at your beck!" went on a determined voice whose ironical accents in no wise served to alleviate his panic. "When you had only a mountebank to deal with! But get up!" contemptuously. "And," as the hunchback obeyed, his crooked legs shaking in the support of his misshapen frame, "into the wheel with you!"

"The wheel!" stammered the dwarf. "Why—what—"

"To take a little of your own medicine! Pardi! What a voluble fellow! In with you, or—"

With no more words the hunchback, staggering, hardly knowing what he did, entered the ancient abbot's machine for hoisting. But as he started to walk in the great wheel at the side of his captor, a picture of the past—the times he, himself, had forced prisoners to the wheel, stimulating with jeer and whip—arose mockingly before him, and the incongruous present seemed, in contrast, like a black waking dream.

That it was no dream, however, and that the awakening would never occur, he well knew, and malevolently though fearfully he eyed the rope, coming in over the pulley at the aperture; to be wound around and around by a smaller wheel, attached to the larger, and—drawing up what?

An inkling of the sort of merchandise to be expected, under the circumstances, could but flash through his mind, together with a more vivid consciousness of the only course open for him—to cry out, regardless of consequences! Perhaps he might even have done so, but at that instant—as if the other had read the thought—came the cold touch of a bare blade on his neck; and with a sudden chill, the brief heroic impulse passed.

AN OLD NURSE
Persuaded Doctor to Drink Postum.

An old faithful nurse and an experienced doctor, are a pretty strong combination in favor of Postum, instead of tea and coffee.

The doctor said:

"I began to drink Postum five years ago on the advice of an old nurse.

"During an unusually busy winter, between coffee, tea and overwork, I became a victim of insomnia. In a month after beginning Postum, in place of tea and coffee, I could eat anything and sleep as soundly as a baby.

"In three months I had gained twenty pounds in weight. I now use Postum altogether instead of tea and coffee; even at bedtime with a soda cracker or some other tasty biscuit.

"Having a little tendency to Diabetes, I used a small quantity of saccharine instead of sugar, to sweeten with. I may add that today tea or coffee are never present in our house and very many patients, on my advice, have adopted Postum as their regular beverage.

"In conclusion I can assure anyone that, as a refreshing, nourishing and nerve-strengthening beverage, there is nothing equal to Postum."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Write for booklet, "The Road to Wellville."

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular (must be boiled).

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in an ordinary cup of hot water, which makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

Kinder Skittish.

A good old mammy of ante-bellum days went into a shoe store and asked for "a pair of ever'day shoes—small tens." The clerk selected a pair of men's heavy plow shoes for her and she seated herself to try them on. The clerk remained standing in front of her. She glanced up and asked:

"Honey, is you all gwine to stan' dere while I tries 'em on?"

The clerk answered: "Why, no, auntie; I'll move on if you wish it."

She said: "Please do, honey, 'cause I'se white folks raised and I'se kinder skittish."—Chicago Post.

"Slowly Mending."

Dr. Lyman Abbott, who is, as is well known, an anti-suffragist, told, at a recent luncheon in New York, an anti-suffrage anecdote. "Two suffragists," he said, "were talking one evening at the club over a game of billiards. 'How is your husband?' the first asked. 'Slowly mending, thank you,' the other answered. 'Slowly mending? But I didn't know he was ill!' 'He isn't ill,' the other suffragist explained, laughing heartily. 'He's slowly mending my khaki riding breeches.'"

Maker of Death Masks.

Sculptor U. S. J. Dunbar, maker of many death masks, has added another, that of Clara Barton, founder of the American Red Cross society, for the National museum. He has made death masks of Judge W. Q. Gresham, Chief Justice Waite, Supreme Court Justices Bradley and Matthews, Fred Douglass, Frank Hatton, Senator Beck, General Joseph E Johnson and Admiral Stevens.

Plague of Snails.

A plague of snails is reported from the island of Ceylon, part of which is overrun by the animals. All vegetation is devoured as soon as it appears, and the natives have found it necessary to co-operate against them. Trenches are dug to stay their progress, and they are kept from the trees by making a circle on the ground around the trunks of cork or fiber impregnated with tar or pitch.

FARM STOCK

DISEASED FEET OF CATTLE

Sudden Lameness Often Caused by Small Scratch or Abrasion—Keep Animals Out of Mud.

(By C. C. LIPP, Assistant Veterinarian, University Farm, St. Paul, Minn.

It is not at all uncommon for cattle to show a very sudden lameness, which on careful examination proves to be an abscess-like formation between the hoofs. The starting point is usually a small scratch or abrasion of the skin, which offers a suitable avenue of entrance for the germ causing the trouble. The germs live in the soil, manure and other filth about the yards and feed lots. During dry weather they cause very little damage. When the yards are muddy, or the stables unclean, the growth of germs is favored. At this time also the continued action of the wet, foul material makes the skin between the claws tender and easy to injure.

An examination of the lame foot will usually reveal swelling and tenderness. If the space between the claws be cleaned out, the skin abrasion is usually plainly evident. Sometimes there is a thick cheesy covering of grayish pus over the surface of the sore. At other times the pus may burrow beneath the skin, and even form pockets that are filled with this cheesy material.

Treatment consists in keeping the affected animals out of the mud and wet manure for several days. Thorough cleansing of the part with any of the coal-tar dips, using five teaspoonfuls per pint of water once daily, is very necessary. All the loose shreds of skin should be cut away and pus pockets well drained. In mild cases, the application of pine tar proves a very effective treatment.

The severer form should receive, in addition to a thorough cleaning, a dressing of equal parts of iodoform and boric acid under a bandage for several days. Taken in time and vigorously and persistently treated, healing should not be prolonged beyond a week. If left alone, some cases soon assume the most severe type, which means delayed healing and more bandaging and dressing.

ARE PUREBRED COLTS HARDY?

Experiment Being Conducted at Kansas Agricultural College to Find Cost of Raising.

Whether or not it costs more to raise a purebred colt than a grade, is to be decided by an experiment now under way at Kansas Agricultural college. W. A. Cochel has selected 20 colts, ten of them purebred Clydesdales, Percherons, Belgians, and ten grades of the same breeds. One lot is to receive oats, alfalfa hay and corn fodder. The other lot will be fed in such a way as to receive the same food nutriments as if oats had been included. The lot receiving oats and alfalfa hay will get its corn fodder while running in the pasture.

All the colts are fed in an open shed and during the day are kept outside in the pasture. Their coats are heavy and they are in the best of condition. The lots are divided into five purebred and five grades, five fillies and five horses. The question to be answered is: Has a purebred the same opportunity to develop as the grade, or is it as much a matter of feeding as of breeding?

Liszt a Dry Smoker.

Liszt was a dry smoker of a peculiar type. Massenet, who knew him well in his later years tells us that Liszt could not play unless he had a cigar in his mouth, which he never troubled to light. He would sit down to the piano with a cigar between his teeth and keep munching it all the time he played. When the cigar was quite eaten up, the Abbe would rise from the instrument exhausted.

NO POSSIBILITY OF DOUBT

Why Western Bishop Was Convinced of the Ancient Lineage of His Eastern Entertainers.

A western bishop once attended a general convention in the east and was entertained by a New England family of long and honorable, if not lovable, lineage. They made no secret of a time-won superiority over any one from the new and crude west, and cited their Pilgrim ancestors constantly. The bishop was minded to bear this in Christian humility and forbearance, and did. But on his return home, he recounted his experiences to the wife; and she, good soul, spoke her mind as it is the privilege of her kind to do, even where mere man must be silent.

"I don't believe that their family is such an old one," she remarked. "Are you sure that their ancestors were Pilgrims?"

"I am certain, my dear," answered the bishop. "This may seem to be exaggeration, but at times you could positively detect the fragrance of the Mayflower."—New York Evening Post.

After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment three days I was able to remove all the crust and in one week he was entirely cured. NOT HARD TO MAKE A GUESS Asylum Superintendent Does Not Reveal Name of Last Relative to Visit Lunatic, but We Know It.

The lunatics tore up and down the white beach; they howled and leaped in the blue sea, quite like sane people.

"They enjoy the summer outing at our shore branch," the superintendent said. "It does 'em good, poor dubs!

"It's a funny thing about a lunatic's relatives. There are reliable statistics about the way a lunatic's relatives stand by him.

"The relative who stands by a lunatic least, who stops visiting him in the asylum first of all, is a brother. The next relative to drop off is a wife. That sounds hard, but it's true. Don't count on your wife if you are going to become a lunatic. Next, husbands drop off. A little truer than wives husbands are, but only a little. Next fathers abandon the lunatic. Next sisters.

"One relative never abandons him till she dies, or he dies, she comes regularly on visiting day, bringing underwear and ties, cakes and tobacco—provided, of course, that the lunatic's a male. If it's a female this relative is equally faithful. And even though, as sometimes happens, the poor, mad creature hates her, curses her, tries to strike her when she visits him, she still remains faithful. When her visits cease they cease for only one reason—death.

"Nor do I need to tell you which relative this one is."

Want Changeable Dresses!

At the recent International Congress of Applied Chemistry in London one of the most celebrated lecturers, Giacomo Ciamician, predicted that women of the future will not be contented with a dress which remains constantly of one color, but will demand colors that change in harmony with their surroundings.

Thus the color of the apparel may be changed without changing the dress. Passing from darkness to light the color would brighten, thus conforming automatically to the environment—the last word in fashion for the future.

This prediction will come true as soon as chemists learn to understand better what are called "phototropic colors," or colors that change with the intensity of the light upon them. In men's wear this might mean that the light-colored suit of the bright summer day would be transformed into a dark suit at night.

Impossible.

Startled he looked about him. "My legs are comfortable," he muttered. "My knees aren't cramped. I can get the kinks out of my calves and even lean back a little. My line of sight is unobstructed. Why, not only can I see everything, I can also hear everything! I can retire to the foyer without disturbing 15 people, or even one, but—I'm so comfortable sitting here that I'd rather stay just where I am. These lights—the music—the scenery—all look real, yes, they strongly suggest reality—but it's impossible. Whoever heard of a comfortable theater? I must be dreaming."

And, doggone it, that's just what he was doing!—Masses.

FUNDS FOR FIGHTING PLAGUE

State Legislatures in 1913 Made Generous Appropriations to Check the Spread of Tuberculosis.

Out of 41 state legislatures in session during the season of 1913, laws dealing with tuberculosis were enacted in 30 states, while in 34 states consideration was given to bills dealing with the prevention of this disease. This is a summary of the legislative campaign for 1913, issued by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis today.

Appropriations to the amount of over $5,000,000 have been set aside for the treatment and prevention of tuberculosis by the various state legislatures in session this year. Most of this money is for the maintenance of state sanatoria. There are at the present time 39 such institutions in 31 different states, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, each having more than one sanatorium. Delaware is the only state which has made provision for a state sanatorium for tuberculosis negroes. In addition to the amounts appropriated by the various state governments, congress will be obliged to set aside nearly $1,000,000 for the maintenance of the United States public health; the army and the navy sanatoria, and the tuberculosis hospital of the District of Columbia.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

THIS is the caution applied to the public announcement of Castoria that has been manufactured under the supervision of Chas. H. Fletcher for over 30 years—the genuine Castoria. We respectfully call the attention of fathers and mothers when purchasing Castoria to see that the wrapper bears his signature in black. When the wrapper is removed the same signature appears on both sides of the bottle in red. Parents who have used Castoria for their little ones in the past years need no warning against counterfeits and imitations, but our present duty is to call the attention of the younger generation to the great danger of introducing into their families spurious medicines.

It is to be regretted that there are people who are now engaged in the nefarious business of putting up and selling all sorts of substitutes, or what should more properly be termed counterfeits, for medicinal preparations not only for adults, but worse yet, for children's medicines. It therefore devolves on the mother to scrutinize closely what she gives her child. Adults can do that for themselves, but the child has to rely on the mother's watchfulness.

Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

The veterans of old who stood the tests and fought the battles are fast dropping out and no better, greated, men ever lived.

The Clayton appointment to the Senate in the late Jos. F. Johnston's place has created considerable comment through the United States, Senator Bailey of Texas says he can seat him.

Ex-Gov. Comer seems to have them on the run. We have no fight in the matter but to a man up a true it looks like if the democratic primary was to come off now, he would sweep stakes.

The indications now point to the fact that the tariff bill will not pass at the present session of Congress. Why all this wrangling and expenses. But the people pay the freight.

THE PROGRESSIVE TICKET.

A move is on foot to put in the field a Progressive State Ticket. The time was never better in the world. The people of the state are yearning for it; not only hoping for it but demanding it. The democratic candidates are beginning to get hot, but not so hot yet as they will be before the campaign is over. They are already charging ugly things about each other—saying you done it, etc. The people of the State know the record of the democratic party. A great majority of the people of the State would like to see a change.

Here is what the Montgomery Advertiser gives utterance to with reference to the democratic Governor of New York:

"Governor Sulzer was so Democratic when he was inaugurated Governor that he insisted on walking to the capitol; will he ride or walk when he leaves?"

We would like to call the attention of our readers to the letter in this issue by Mr. E. E. Upchurch, our popular druggist, who is attending the Rexall Druggists Convention in Boston. The Doctor, and his family are having a splendid vacation, and besides the fun, he is getting some valuable ideas to connect with his already broad experience in the Drug business, and when he returns he will be renewed in health and business qualities and ready for giving his patrons unsurpassed service.

WHETHER YOU USE CALOMEL OR NOT

You Will Realize How Much Better for You This Safe Vegetable Remedy Will Be.

The liver is such a delicate organ that most people hove learned from experience the danger of flogging it into action with the dangerous drug—calomel. The Alred Drug Company sells and recommends Dodson's Liver Tone, a pleasant-tasting, harmless vegetable liquid that encourages the liver, relieves constipation and biliousness without restriction of habit or diet.

There are no bad after effects from taking Dodson's Liver Tone. It does just what it is intended to do and no more. Dodson's Liver Tone connot harm either children or grown-ups and is an excellent preventative of chronic liver troubles.

Alred Drug Company sells Dodsod's Liver Tone for 50 cents a bottle, and every bottle sold is guaranteed to give satisfaction, and you get your money back without a question if it fails you. Some remedies are sold in imitation of Dodson's Liver Tone—look out for them. Remember the guarantee.

Once Upon a Time

ONCE there was really no way out of it for the farmer. Plodding home from the field with his team at close of day, he saw before him the waiting small jobs about the house, barn, and yard, jobs that took time and labor, and never seemed to end. There was water to be pumped, wood to be sawed, various machines to be run by hand. It was a dreary prospect—but that was once upon a time. Today he lets the engine do it.

Buy from the I H C engine line. I H C engines are built right and consistently all through, to work efficiently for years. Whether you want it for sawing, pumping, spraying, electric light plant, for running separator, or repair shop, or for all sorts of tiresome energy-wasting small farm jobs, you have need of an

I H C Oil and Gas Engine

An I H C engine will develop from ten to thirty per cent more than its rated capacity. Perfect combustion makes it economical in fuel consumption. Its simplicity makes it practically trouble-proof.

I H C engines are built in vertical, horizontal, stationary, portable, skidded, air-cooled and water-cooled styles. The line includes sawing, pumping and spraying outfits. Sizes from 1 to 50-horse power. They operate on gas, gasoline, kerosene, naphtha, distillate and alcohol. I H C oil tractors range in size from 6-12 to 30-60-horse power, for plowing, threshing, etc.

Have the I H C local dealer demonstrate the engine to you and explain its various points. Get catalogues from him, or write the

A Letter From Mr. Wilson

Clanton, Ala., Aug. 11, 1913.
Editor Union and Banner,

Sir:—It is not often that I write for publication, but seeing in the papers last week that President Wilson has appointed A. E. Patterson, an Oklahoma negro, Register of the Treasury, I was astonished; for you know the Clanton Press has "wrote" and "wrote," "writ" and "writ," ripped and snorted, wasted column after column of their paper talking about Republicans appointing negroes to office, and now President Wilson the first dash out of the box, appoints a negro lawyer to one of the best places he has, a $4 000 job. My, my, it must be awful for some folks to have to put up with this. Think of it; many democrats here in Chilton have said they would never vote with any party that would appoint negroes to office. Now, haven't they got themselves in a fix? I wonder what they will do. There must be some honor in politics. When honorable men like we have in Chilton stand on the streets and around the post office and swear by eternal gods that they will never vote for any party that will appoint negroes to office, I am sure they will do what they have said they would.

Now to make the offense as bad as they can they appointed a negro lawyer. We all know that the more officious the negro is, the more objectionable he is to the white people. I do not see anything for us to do but all vote the Progressive ticket next time. All the Populists that have left our party said it was on account of the negro. Now if they are honest it is time for them to move again. I have been wondering if there would be enough Democrats left in Chilton after this to get up a respectable opposition to the Progressive party. Everybody knows that about half the democrats vote their ticket on account of the negro, and now they cannot boast of the white man's party any longer; they cannot point to anything they have done in this county except raise taxes, spend the peoples' money recklessly. I remember it was charged last year dueing the campaign that taxes would be raised this year. I thought then that was a campaign story, but it looks like it was true, when we find over two thousand mens taxes raised.

Mr. Clanton Press, come out and tell us what you are going to do. You have said that you would never vote for any party that would appoint negroes over white men. Democrats get on the streets and tell the boys you are men; that you will be as good as your word. One other little thing I was about to forget. You remember Mr. Roosevelt came square out for woman suffrage, and the Press, the spokesman for the Democrats, said it was awful to think of negro women voting. We said negro women could no more vote than negro men, but no, they would not have it this way. They said it meant to put white women and negro women on an equal. Now what has happened? Mr. Hobson, the biggest man they have, has come square out for woman suffrage, and by the way came to Clanton and got right up in the court house in the presence of the Clanton people and made a speech for woman suffrage, and the Clanton Press spoke some mighty nice things about him.

It may be all this can be explained, for you know Democrats and how easy it is for them to change front.

Respectfully,
G. W. WILSON.

Resolutions Of Respect

From Clanton Lodge No. 304, I. O. O. F.

Whereas, the great Ruler, the Creator of our being, and the only one knowing the destiny of our souls, in His great power and wisdom, has seen fit to remove from the walks of men our friend and brother in the Clanton Lodge No. 304, I. O. O. F., Albert M. Cunningham, who was born in Madison county, near Huntsville, Ala., Aug. 11, 1869, but when a small boy moved to Chilton county, and lived here until July 15, 1913, when the death angel came and took our brother home. He was a member of the Methodist Protestant church, and lived a Christian life until death, having been a member of the Clanton Lodge, No. 304, for only about three years. He leaves a devoted wife and two children and a host af friends to mourn his loss.

And whereas, the Lodge feels keenly the loss of our brother, therefore, be it Resolved, that we extend to his loved ones, who suffer most keenly the sorrow of separation, our heartfelt sympathy in this great sorrow, which some of us know from experience and pray the blessings of the comforting influence of the Holy Spirit upon them, and point them to Him who doeth all things well and to whom we must humbly bow.

Be it further Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to his wife and family, a copy published in the county papers, and a copy spread upon the Lodge minutes,

Respectfully submitted,

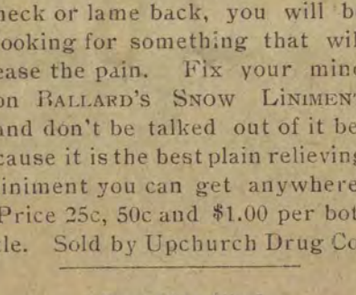
Obstinate Acne Quickly Yields

Fine Remedy that Clears Skin of Pimples on Cheeks, Temples, Sides of Nose and Chin.



Let S. S. S. Purify Your Blood. Insects can't Harm.

Acne attacks the glandular structure of the skin, more particularly those tiny glands that secrete fat.

And it is here that S. S. S., the famous blood purifier is most active in its influence.

There is one ingredient in S. S. S., the purpose of which it is to stimulate the cells in the tissues that they select from the blood the nutriment that makes new skin and thus eliminates all irritants, acids and parasites that inflame the glands. There is a natural tendency of the fine network of blood vessels in the skin to throw off impurities, but where a persistent inflammation process has invaded the skin, the natural repair work of the blood is interfered with. It requires the stimulating activity of S. S. S. to overcome such morbid conditions. If you have been troubled with acne, do not despair of a cure.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. Take no chance with a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 181 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

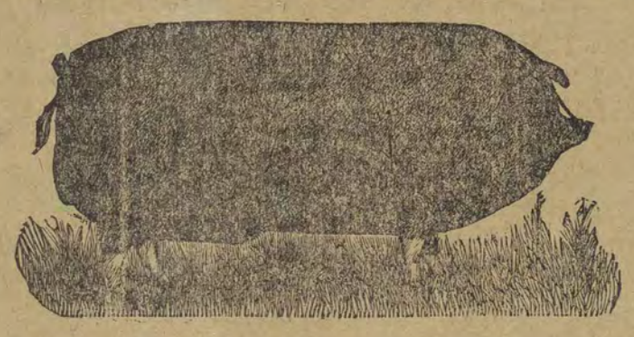
DARBYS FLUID

PREVENTS AND CURES



HOG CHOLERA

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

Pen up your hogs when cholera is in the neighborhood. For each ten hogs put one quarter of a bottle of Darbys Fluid in the daily supply of water. Clean out troughs every day before watering. Do not feed slop or any liquid food. Feed moderately on chops or other light stuff. Continue this treatment for two weeks, you can then turn your hogs out;—they are insured against cholera.

READ THE PROOF.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

This is to certify that we have used Darbys Fluid for the prevention and cure of Hog Cholera. Last summer we used it on fifty head of hogs and we lost only nine. These nine consisted of a brood sow and litter of eight pigs. We believe we could have saved the entire herd had we started using Darbys Fluid earlier.

GANTT BROS. STORE CO., Little River, Ala.

GENTLEMEN:—

Hogs were dying of Cholera by the thousand in my neighborhood They had it all around me but I saved all mine by putting Darbys Fluid in their drinking water and not letting them have any water without Darbys Fluid in it. Its a great preventive. I keep it on hand all the time. Its good for a hundred purposes.

J. A. STANALAND, Pidcock, Ga.

DARBYS FLUID has many uses about the household. It destroys germs or bad odors about the house and purifies the air of living or sleeping rooms. It heals wounds, sores, cuts or galls on human or animal flesh. It is a fine addition to the bath for cleansing the body or feet of disagreeable odors. If used in the water for brushing the teeth it sweetens the breath. As a disinfectant for the sick-room in contagious diseases and for safe-guarding the health of the family when such diseases are prevalent in the neighborhood it is worth it weight in gold.

THAW ESCAPES FROM ASYLUM

DASHES OUT THROUGH DRIVEWAY AS MILKMAN ENTERS.

ATTENDANT IS UNDER ARREST

Wife, About Whom He Killed Stanford White, Says That During Her Last Talk With Thaw He Threatened to Kill Her.

Matteawan, N. Y.—Harry K. Thaw, the slayer of Stanford White, escaped from the hospital for the criminal insane here at 7:45 o'clock Sunday morning. A dart for liberty through an open gate, a leap into the open door of a powerful automobile that stood quivering outside, and a flight like a rocket for Connecticut state line, 30 miles away, accomplished his escape. Sunday night he was still at large, and the hospital authorities felt certain he was outside the state. Once beyond its boundaries Thaw is free. Only months, perhaps years, of litigation can bring him back to Matteawan, and then only in one event—that he be adjudged insane in the state to which he has fled.

Five confederates manned the car in which Thaw escaped, and a big, black limousine, which trailed it past the asylum gate. The police have the description of Thaw's confederates, and the names under which they registered at a local hotel Friday night, and are seeking them.

The hospital authorities believed that Thaw had fled to the shore of Long Island Sound and boarded a yacht waiting with steam up to rush to Europe.

A reward of $500 for Thaw's apprehension has been offered by Dr. R. F. C. Kieb, superintendent of the asylum. Howard H. Barnum, the attendant at the gate past whom Thaw flashed in his break for freedom, is under arrest, and other arrests are expected to follow in the rigid investigation begun by Dr. Kieb.

"I will have to finish you to complete my job" are the words which froze the blood of the young wife, when, with an almost maniacal smile, Thaw addressed her for the last time just as she had concluded testifying for him during the White Plains examination into his sanity now more than two years ago.

"And what's more, he meant it. I know that look in his face. I know how remorseless he is in what he determines to do," said Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, when interviewed after her husband's escape.

HEAVY RAINS CAME TOO LATE

Showers in Eastern Kansas Do Not Revive Crops.

Kansas City.—Heavy showers over most of the eastern half of Kansas added to the relief that came with the rains, and it is believed the drouth is now effectually broken. The rains came too late to be of much benefit to the corn that has been withered with two months dryness and hot winds except for fodder, but forage and alfalfa crops will be greatly helped. The rains also will refill the ponds with water for stock, the lack of which has been a serious matter. The rains were local, but indications for more rain in most sections. With the rains came cooler temperatures all over the state. Showers fell in Southeast Oklahoma. Two inches of rain fell at Joplin, Mo., in 24 hours. Tulsa, Okla., reported a rain of almost an inch, accompanied by a falling of 20 degrees in the temperature.

Congress Settles Down to Deliberation of Revision.

Washington.—Congress having yielded to the wish of President Wilson and sent home for its fall clothes, its members are becoming reconciled to blasted vacation hopes and are settling down to complete tariff revision with deliberation and to take up currency reform without undue haste. When the special session will be ready to adjourn has ceased to be a subject of speculation. No one pretends to hazard any more guesses and leaders in both houses declare that currency legislation is to be completed, even if it is necessary to run right up to the regular session in December.

TAMMANY USED BRIBE FOR VOTES

SULZER'S FRIENDS SAY VOTES FOR IMPEACHMENT BOUGHT.

AN INVESTIGATION IS HINTED

Mrs. Sulzer Continues Very Ill and Assemblyman Levy, Who Led the Fight on Sulzer, Suffers Nervous Breakdown.

Albany, N. Y.—While the gubernatorial deadlock remained unbroken with William Sulzer and Martin H. Glynn both claiming to be the legal executive of the Empire State, open charges of bribery in connection with the recent impeachment proceedings gave a startling new twist to the situation.

James G. Garrison, a close friend of John A. Hennessy, whom Sulzer appointmented to probe all the state departments, issued this statement:

"I charge now and positively that Tammany paid cold cash for the four votes they needed to pass this resolution (that of impeachment), and they also used money to keep wavering votes in line. We will be prepared to prove this before we are through. There are some gentlemen mixed up in this who are headed straight to jail. That is all I care to say at this time."

The resolution impeaching Sulzer was carried with only three votes to spare. Tammany mustered 79 votes for the resolution, while only 76 were needed. If Sulzer's friends can prove that four of the votes against the governor were purchased they declare the impeachment will fall flat.

While the bribery charges were attracting wide attention the war between Glynn and Sulzer went merrily on with demoralization spreading among the various state departments.

Mrs. Sulzer still lies ill, with specialists in constant attendance. She was slightly improved by a refreshing sleep.

Aaron J. Levy, majority leader, who led the fight on the assembly floor for impeachment, is also suffering from a nervous breakdown.

TO STOP MARRIAGE EVASION

American Bar Association Will Propose Other Reforms.

St. Louis.—A summary of the reports to be made by committees of the American Bar Association at its meeting in Montreal next month was made public by members of the Missouri council. The committee on judicial administration and remedial procedure will criticise the federal statute requiring that a copy of the indictment and a list of grand jury witnesses be furnished those indicted for capital offenses. The committee will advocate "The extension of these privileges to all who are charged as criminals." The committee on state laws will present a "marriage evasion act" which would prohibit the marriage in other states of persons ineligible to marry in the state in which they live.

Texan Is Murdered.

Omaha.—J. J. Cahn of Dallas, Tex., was the victim of a fiendish murder and robbery. He was found in an alley in South Omaha, almost disemboweled with a knife slash 18 inches long across his abdomen.

Girl Strikers Arrested.

St. Louis, Mo.—Seven striking girl shirtmakers on picket duty were arrested in front of a clothing manufacturing establishment on a charge of disturbing the peace.

Looking Into Frisco.

New York.—Henry de Peyster, an inspector in the French ministry of finance, arrived here to look into conditions relative to the recent receivership of the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad, in whose bonds French investors were heavily interested.

Autoist Electrocuted.

Hoboken, N. J.—High power wires that fell when an automobile crashed into their pole dropped upon the wreck of the machine and electrocuted Paul J. Barriett, of Jersey City.

EUROPE WILL KEEP HANDS OFF

POWERS HAVE BEEN INFORMALLY SOUNDED ON SUBJECT.

H. L. WILSON IN TROUBLE

Resignation of Diplomat Effective Oct. 14 May Be Accepted at Once—John Lind Establishes Relations With Mexican Foreign Office.

Washington.—The United States government has informally sounded the powers and learned that foreign governments generally will do nothing to embarrass the peace policy of President Wilson toward Mexico and are inclined to support it.

Henry Lane Wilson, whose resignation as ambassador to Mexico recently was accepted to take effect Oct. 14, issued a statement attacking the reported statement of the British foreign office that recognition of the Huerta government had been extended after he had made "a congratulatory speech" to the provisional president.

President Wilson read the ambassador's statement and was so incensed at its tone and contents that he promptly requested Secretary Bryan to ascertain through the British embassy here whether the utterance of the British foreign offic as reported was correct, and the dismissal of Ambassador Wilson by summary acceptance of his resignation to take effect immediately was under consideration by the administration.

Dispatches from John Lind, personal representative in Mexico of President Wilson, indicated that he was in personal touch with Frederico Camboa, the Mexican minister of foreign affairs, and was preparing to submit the representations of the United States on the restoration of peace in Mexico.

Chief interest centered in the administration's attitude toward Ambassador Wilson's remarks concerning the British government and the information that European governments were disposed to lend their moral support to President Wilson's policy.

TROOPS ARE STILL ON DUTY

No Conference Yet Between Operators and Strikers in Michigan.

Calumet, Mich.—Gen. P. L. Abbey, in command of the state troops on strike duty in the copper fields, left, ostensibly for his home, on business for several days, but it is said he will go to Lansing to confer with Gov. Ferris before returning to Calumet. The failure of Judge Murphy, the governor's representative here, to bring about a conference between the mine operators and Wstern Federation of Miners continues the deadlock and the stay of the troops indefinitely. Interest now centers in the next step of the governor. Western Federation officials announced that President Moyer, now in Denver, was expected here, as well as a representative of the American Fedration of Labor.

Bandits Are Sought.

Charlestown, W. Va.—Officers were working along the Chesapeake and Ohio and Norfolk and Western railroads in West Virginia to capture a band of thieves who last week robbed cars of merchandise worth approximately $100,000.

General Strike Ends.

Milan.—The "general strike" in Italy, which has now come to an end, resulted in the death of three persons, wounding of 165 and the arrest of 2,478.

The Mulhall Case.

Washington.—James A. Emery, chief representative of the National Association of Manufacturers here, defined to the senate lobby committee the duties of Martin M. Mulhall, who claimed to be that association's lobbyist.

Police Are Repulsed.

Vancouver, B. C.—Twenty-five special police sent by steamer to Nanimo were met at the wharf by a mob of strikers and driven back on board the boat.

NO FUNDS FOR SPECULATIVE BANKS

NEW RULE IN CONNECTION WITH GOVERNMENT CROP DEPOSITS.

COMPTROLLER SEEKS DATA

Those Banks That Earnestly Strive to Meet Currency Demands of Agricultural Sections Will Get Benefit of Loan.

Washington.—Banks which borrow or loan money for speculative purposes will be denied any portion of the $50,000,000 of government funds about to be deposited in the national banks to assist in moving the crops, and the entire amount will go to institutions that earnestly strive to meet the currency demands of the agricultural sections.

This policy of the treasury department was announced when Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane, in connection with a call for the condition of national banks at the close of business August 9, asked every national bank in the country to report detailed information of all money loaned or borrowed. Upon the basis of this data, expected to be available in time for the distribution of the $50,000,000, the treasury department will aim to differentiate between the banks which borrow or loan in connection with speculative operations or are chronic borrowers and those who endeavor to relieve financial strain wherever it exists.

Information of this character, it was announced, will now be regularly obtained by the comptroller of the currency as a feature of his calls for the condition of national banks in order that the treasury department may know what sections of the country are in need of additional circulation at various periods of the year.

This innovation is the forerunner of other material changes in the character of information banks will be required in future to furnish the government. The forms which have been in use for years are being studied with a view to further steps to obtain detailed information.

MORE CORRUPTION CHARGED

Ex-House Page Says Pawnbrokers Gave McDermott.

Washington.—In a dramatic statement, I. H. McMichaels, dismissed page of the house of representatives, presented to the house lobby investigating committee a sweeping charge of corruption against Representative James E. McDermott of Illinois, for years his sponsor. With intense earnestness McMichaels in picturesque language, corroborated the allegations of M. M. Mulhall againts McDermott, and made additional charges, at times shocking the committee and spectators with outbursts of profanity and slang. The witness declared that for years he had exerted every effort to support McDermott, had loaned him money, had helped him in his campaigns. Now, he said McDermott had "thrown him down," and he felt he must tell the truth. In addition to the charges already made, McMichaels swore that the Chicago representative told him that he received $7,500 out of a fund of $10,000 raised by the pawnbrokers of Washington to oppose a bill passed in the last congress regulating interest rates in the District of Columbia.

CLAYTON IS MADE SENATOR

Governor Names Johnston's Successor, Despite Opposition.

Montgomery, Ala.—Shortly after 5 o'clock Tuesday evening Gov. O'Neal announced the appointment of Henry D. Clayton, Alabama congressman, to the United States senate to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of Senator Joseph Forney Johnston. Mr. Clayton's commission was delivered to him in the governor's office, the ceremony being brief. Mr. Clayton accepted the appointment and announced that he would leave at once for Washington to present his credentials to the senate. He stated, however, that he would not resign his seat in the house until after he is seated in the senate.

Diaz to Tour.

Vancouver, B. C.—Felix Diaz will not sail by the Empress of Russia for Japan. Instead he, with his party, will tour Quebec, London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna and St. Petersburg and reach Japan by the Trans-Siberian railway.

Will Arbitrate.

Nogales, Ariz.—Any differences between Sonora insurgent leaders will be submitted for settlement to Gov. Carranza, recognized chief of the constitutionalist division.

Italians May Not Exhibit.

London.—The Times in a message from Rome says: "Although the Italian parliament voted $400,000 last June for the expenses of participation in the Panama Exposition, I am authoritatively informed that such participation is now unlikely."

Tie Up Building Trades.

Pittsburg, Pa.—An acute situation in the building trades developed here when a strike of laborers tied up work on three large business buildings.

SENTIMENT SEEMS QUITE OPTIMISTIC

The Trade Trends Continue Rather Mixed — Stocks More Active.

New York. — Bradstreet's review of trade says:

Trade trends continue rather mixed, but on the whole movements are inward chiefly because of the approach of the fall season. House sales have improved at most leading markets while road business has held its own and sentiment as to distribution during the fall and winter is quite optimistic.

The situation in the southwest is somewhat spotted as the result of drouth and heat damage to the corn crop. There is more activity in textiles at New York and even though most sections still are quiet, views as to the future certainly are more cheerful, thanks to the excellent prospects for a large crop.

The stock market has furnished more activity than for some time past, though prices have reacted on realizing and concern about the corn crop.

Business failures for the week ending August 14 were 172.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week aggregate 7,517,654 bushels, against 4,273,948 bushels last year.

New York. — R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly trade review says:

Current distribution of merchandise continues in normal volume, while steady preparations are being made for an active fall and winter business in reconciliation. Some lines have been accentuated by the demand for corn, yet in a broad sense crop conditions are still promising and with remunerative prices prevailing another prosperous year is assuredly in store.

A heavy movement in agricultural products to market contributes liberally to transportation revenues while the exports of grain and other commodities add materially to credit balance over the ocean.

Domestic monetary conditions have become a matter of less concern and political developments in Europe also make for an easier situation there.

Changes in strictly mercantile and industrial conditions are of a mixed character with favorable features preponderating.

Failures this week numbered 272 in the United States, against 288 last year, and 38 in Canada, compared with 33 a year ago this date.

RIP! RIP! AND THEN

Pretty Girl Blushes and Faints on a Crowded Street.

Denver. — Downtown streets were congested when thousands of people thronged the business section to greet the Knights Templar Conclave visitors.

One incident was quite embarrassing to a pretty girl and her escort.

The two found themselves wedged hopelessly in the crowd. The man tried to free his companion, and as he grasped her hands and pulled something ripped.

In a moment what had been the girl's skirt lay limp and loose at her feet. She fainted.

Policemen forced the men to fall back, and the young woman's escort considerately and blushingly wrapped his coat around her.

FATE HINGES ON A BONE.

If Man Can Prove He Ate Roast Pork Day Before Wife Disappeared He Will Go Free.

Chicago. — If John Grady can prove that he ate roast pork for his Sunday dinner the Sunday before his wife disappeared 22 months ago, he will secure his release. He is being held on a charge of murdering his wife.

Professor George A. Dorsey, of the University of Chicago, after an examination of the bone found in the furnace at the Grady home, said that it had every appearance of being a well picked rib of a pig. The police believe the bone to be a piece of Mrs Grady's skull.

Dies Saving Friend's Life.

Dalton, Ga.—Volunteerin gto go to assistance of Jim Seay, who had been overcome by gas while cleaning a well on the Looper farm south of here, E. A. Harden, an aged farmer, gave up his own life after saving that of his friend. Harden entered the well and succeeded in tying a rope around Seay's body before he himself was overcome. Seay was hauled to safety, but no one volunteered to go after Harden until life was extinct.

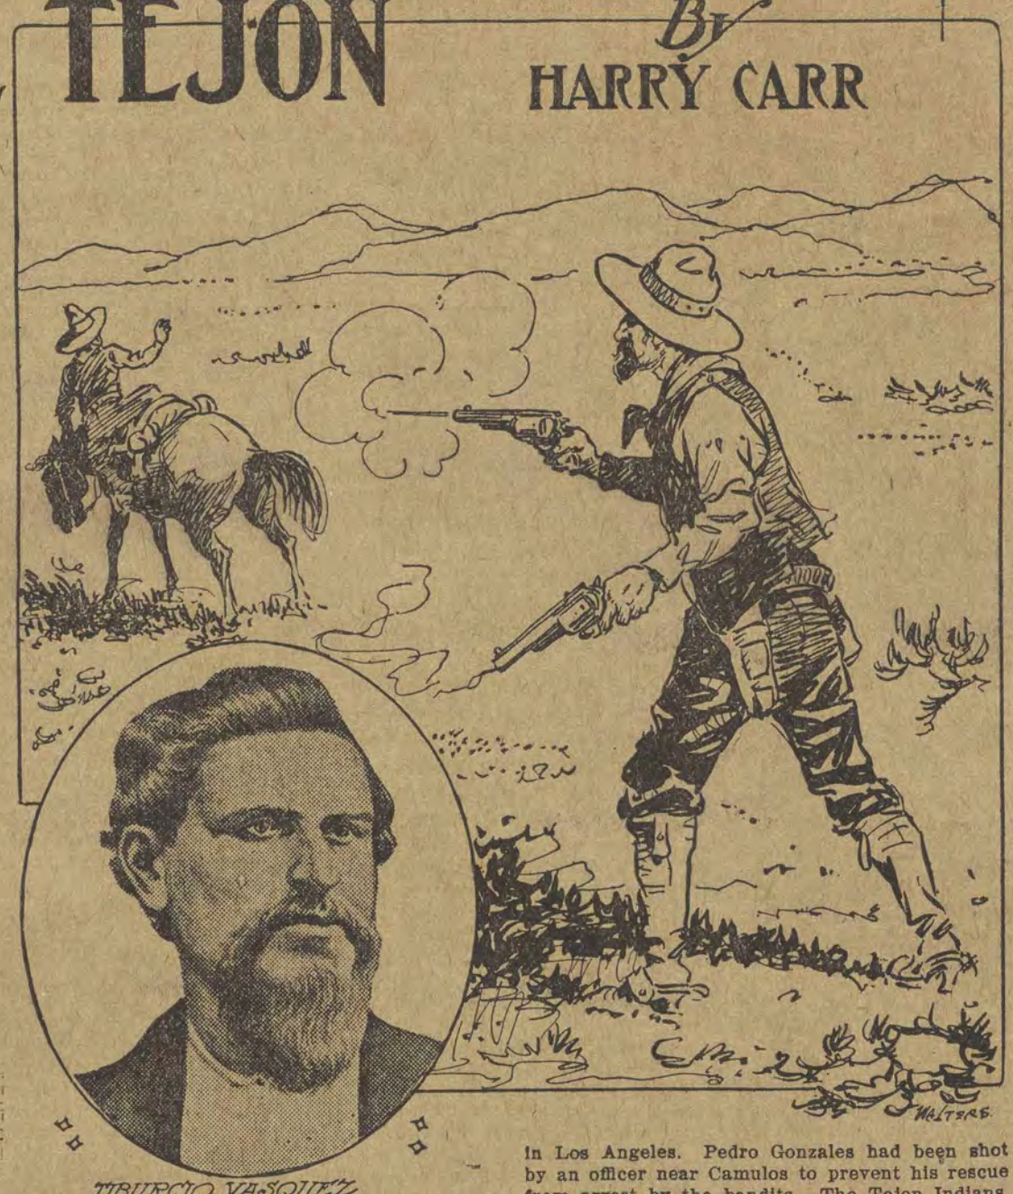
THE BANDITS AND THE BURIED GOLD OF EL TEJON

By HARRY CARR



TIBURCIO VASQUEZ

OLD Joaquin Murrieta's buried gold is growing restless in its hiding place.

One of the herders of El Tejon rancho came in pale and frightened the other night. He had seen a ball of light flickering and dancing along the plateau of the Banderillos. He said it floated along the road in front of him for a long time as though to lead him somewhere. Finally, it stopped by the side of the road; he hurried past and went home as fast as he could. Being a Gringo from Cincinnati, he thought it was a ghost.

Any Mexican vaquero would have recognized the sign. Such a light burns over buried treasure—nowhere else.

Had he followed the light, it would probably have led him to the buried loot of old Joaquin Murrieta, Three-Fingered Jack, Tiburcio Vasquez or some other one of the hundred bandits who infested the Tejon Pass and the Valley of the San Joaquin.

And sir, they were bandits. Dick Turpin! Pough! A wretched piker! Dick Turpin and Claude Duval couldn't have got a job currying horses for Joaquin Murrieta. Don Joaquin was, without doubt, the most terrible, bloodthirsty and successful bandit who ever held up a stage.

He was chief of a band that sometimes numbered nearly a hundred daredevils, and the treasure that he collected must have been enormous.

An examination into the events of his picturesque career would clearly indicate that the stories of his buried gold are not mere vaquero myths. He must have left treasure in considerable quantities cached somewhere in the vicinity of the Tejon ranch—very likely in the Tejon Pass.

Murrieta is described as a very ordinary-looking young Mexican at the time he began his depredations. He sometimes went by the name of Carillo and many suppose that to have been his real name.

He came up from Mexico, where he was born, at the time of the California gold excitement in 1849. With him came a beautiful young Spanish girl of a high-born family. Her name was Roseta Feliz.

She and Joaquin settled in Stanislaus county and had begun washing the gravel for gold when the tragedy occurred that turned Murrieta into the cruelest outlaw the world has known.

At that time there were all manner of race riots through California as a result of the "anti-foreign" mining laws that had been passed. During one of these riots, Murrieta and his bride were driven out of the gold diggings with insult and indignity. Shortly thereafter, Joaquin, while riding a horse borrowed from his half brother, was arrested and whipped as a horse thief.

With black murder in his heart he "took the road," and no one knows how many innocent lives were sacrificed to wipe out the wrong done this Mexican peon when lashed to a tree at Murphy's Diggings in Calaveras county that day when they took him from the borrowed horse.

On account of the injustice of the anti-foreign legislation, there were hundreds of young Mexicans ripe for Joaquin's picking and he soon collected a desperate band of cut-throats. Chief among them were Manuel Garcia, known as Three-Fingered Jack on account of a mutilated hand which had been wounded in the Mexican war; Reyes Feliz, a brother of his bride; Claudio, Joaquin Valenzuela and Pedro Gonzales.

Three-Fingered Jack was a monster of vice and maniacal cruelty. He seemed to take a special delight in murdering Chinese. On one occasion he rounded up six Chinamen on the road, tied their queues together and cut their throats one at a time—laughing at the terrified yells of the living as the dying men struggled in their blood.

For about four years Murrieta's band ravaged central California. Their main field of operations was through the San Joaquin valley. The old-timers say that the stage that ran from Los Angeles to Stockton was held up so many times in the vicinity of Bakersfield that it became an ordinary and commonplace event. No road was safe and every traveler rode at the peril of his life. The solitary horseman, rounding a clump of chaparral, was quite likely to hear the sing of a riata through the air and feel the rope settling around his shoulders with a jerk that dragged him from the saddle. The band of robbers that worked for Murrieta were unique in that the riata was their chief weapon—the riata and the bowie knife. Many of Murrieta's victims were dragged from the saddle and had their throats cut.

There was seldom any parley with the victims nor any mercy shown. With Murrieta it was not only a quest of treasure but a merciless war of revenge against the Gringo.

On one occasion Murrieta and his men held up a schooner on the river near Stockton and, murdering the crew, got away with $20,000.

In the firm discipline that he maintained over his gang of cut-throats, Joaquin was comparable to Robin Hood. Also like Robin Hood, all sorts of stories of his impudent daring and his whimsical kindnesses are told. Some of the stories, in fact, are very like the legends of Sherwood forest and the men in the Lincoln green.

Murrieta took all sorts of reckless chances. On one occasion one of his bandits was on trial in a San Jose court. Murrieta had, shortly before, waylaid and murdered a gentleman named Samuel Harrington. Taking Harrington's papers, Joaquin went into court, pretended to be Harrington, gave false testimony and secured the acquittal of his pal.

Another time, in Sacramento, a crowd stood looking at a poster which offered $5,000 for the capture of Murrieta. A Mexican pushed his way through the crowd and wrote on the bottom of the placard: "I will give $10,000 myself—Joaquin Murrieta;" jumped on a horse and escaped.

As might be imagined, the horrors of Murrieta's crimes roused a great hue and cry throughout California. Hunted like wild animals, Murrieta and his followers selected a dark canyon near the mouth of Tejon Pass for their headquarters and divided into three bands.

The country was becoming too dangerous for him to continue his work in. Claudio had been killed in a desperate battle at San Luis Obispo. Feliz, Joaquin's brother-in-law, had been hanged in Los Angeles. Pedro Gonzales had been shot by an officer near Camulos to prevent his rescue from arrest by the bandits. The Tejon Indians, becoming enraged at some depredation that concerned them, had swooped down upon the bandits, stole their horses and whipped some of the gang with lashes.

Although he wreaked a horrible revenge against those who tried to capture him, he never made any attempt to punish these Indians who took even the clothes from the gang.

General Bean of San Gabriel, who tried to organize a movement against Murrieta, was waylaid on the road and murdered. A campaign was started against the bandits in the town of Saw Mill Flat and Murrieta had the water poisoned.

But finally, Murrieta's Nemesis appeared. He was a Texas frontiersman, named Harry Love, who had come to Los Angeles to live. He organized a company of rangers from among the daring horsemen of Los Angeles and went on a systematic hunt for outlaws.

After various adventures and narrow escapes on both sides, the end came early one Sunday morning, July 25, 1853. Love and two or three companions were riding ahead of the mounted rangers on the flats just west of Tulare lake in the San Joaquin valley. They came upon a small company of Mexicans eating breakfast around a camp fire.

Love asked them what they were doing and one of them replied that they were on their way to Los Angeles. He asked a further question of one of the peons; whereupon a Mexican on the other side of the fire spoke up haughtily, saying: "I am the leader of this band; say what you have to say to me."

"I will speak to whomever I please," retorted Love. Noticing that the Mexican had risen and was sidling over toward a saddle that lay on the ground, Captain Love covered him with a revolver and told him to stand still, for there were revolvers on the saddle.

While they were standing there, a ranger who knew Murrieta by sight came up. The recognition was mutual. Joaquin suddenly yelled for his men to escape as best they could. Leaping on a horse without saddle or bridle, Murrieta went headlong over a bank and down into a ravine, landing in a tumbled heap at the bottom. Neither his horse nor himself was hurt, however.

Scrambling to their feet, they started off at a dead run down the canyon. One of the rangers had followed them. His horse had fallen also. Without attempting to remount, he took careful aim and shot Murrieta's horse as it ran.

The outlaw leaped from the falling horse and continued his retreat on foot. By this time half a dozen rangers were following him. Three times, as they fired, he was seen to hesitate and reel; then run on again. One last shot and he stopped.

Turning, he raised his hand and said: "Don't shoot any more; the work is done." He stood for a minute with weakening limbs; then he sank slowly to his right side, his head upon his arm. Wicked old Joaquin Murrieta was no more. Another pursuing party overtook and killed Three-Fingered Jack. One of the bandits escaped and drowned himself in the San Joaquin river. Another was murdered by Mexicans who were afraid he might reveal to the authorities their connection with the band.

Murrieta's head was cut off and, until the San Francisco earthquake, was on exhibition in a museum in San Francisco.

At the time of his death Don Joaquin was preparing his grandest coup. He intended to collect all his booty, and march his men openly, like an army, into Mexico. The old-timers assert that he had his loot cached in the Tejon for this "get-away" and that it is still there.

Ismael Ramirez says that he spent three months looking for the buried gold. One rainy night he saw the mystic light flickering underneath an old oak tree back of the ruins of Fort Tejon. He carefully noted the location, intending to dig at the indicated spot the next morning. When he went there at down, however, he found that a rancher had also seen the light. Ramirez found an enormous hole and a great iron kettle from which the rancher had taken $30,000 in gold.

According to all reports the light has begun to dance and flicker again around the Tejon, ready to guide some one to the uneasy gold of the arch cut-throat and bandit, Joaquin, Murrieta

POTENTATES AMUSE LONDON

When a foreign potentate or royalty of minor rank visits London for the first time, a clerk from the foreign office is usually detailed by the government to "show him round," or, in official language, to act as the potentate's "visiting attache."

I have acted on several occasions officially as guide, counselor, and friend to a number of minor foreign royal personages, and when doing so have had some rather amusing experiences.

I acted as attache to Prince Lidj Eyassau, of the Abyssinian royal family, when he came to London some years ago. He was rather an awkward sort of person to have to take charge of. He had a habit when he went into a shop of picking up things to look at, and if they did not take his fancy, of dropping them to the ground in the most lordly and disdainful manner.

On one occasion we went into a dealer's shop in Bond street, where he took up an old Dresden vase and, after looking at it critically for a few minutes, threw it to the ground. I made a frantic but unavailing effort to catch it. The prince had subsequently to pay £300 to the dealer for the vase.

Another gentleman I had the honor of escorting about London for a couple of weeks was the Sultan of Oran. I went with him to a dinner party one night given at one of the embassies. All went well until the end of the dinner, when the ambassador and his wife rose from the table. The chief guest then suddenly hit the table a resounding blow with his fist, and shouted out something in his native tongue, while his eyes appeared to blaze with anger as he glared first at his host and hostess and then at their guests. No one seemed to know quite what to do.

Then, in a low undertone, the sultan explained to me in French he was endeavoring to thank his host for his hospitality, and the incident ended happily.

Occasionally minor foreign potentates who come here neglect to make proper arrangements about having money advised to them from their native country to London, and, as a result, find themselves in considerable financial embarrassments when they get here.

Some years ago a prince of the reigning family of a minor European state arrived in London for a short visit without a penny.

The attache, however, who was commissioned to look after him, brought a pawnbroker to the hotel where the prince was staying, who advanced £1,000 on the prince's jewels, which lasted the prince until he obtained money from his own country, fortunately only a few days later.

One of the most amusing incidents I remember in connection with my experiences as a visiting attache was when I took the then crown prince of Siam to a great society bazaar. The prince evidently did not understand, though I tried to explain to him, that the ladies selling at the bazaar were persons of high rank.

A few minutes after he entered the bazaar several great ladies approached him, asking him to buy some of their wares. One of these was a duchess. "Tell these women to kneel when they address me," he said to me in broken French. The ladies, who understood him, promptly did so, and succeeded in taking about £50 off the prince before they rose. Nothing on earth could, however, convince the crown prince of the high rank of the saleswomen.

UNCLE SAM MUST RECOGNIZE HUERTA

MEXICAN GOVERNMENT DELIVERS ULTIMATUM TO UNITED STATES.

ASSUME DEFIANT ATTITUDE

Huerta Announces That He Will Tolerate No Itnerference From Any Source.

Mexico City.—Immediate official recognition of the Mexican government by the United States has been demanded by President Huerta, it is officially stated.

The government is not specific in the public announcement as to what course will be pursued, but it is understood that it means the severing of all relations between the two countries.

Senor Urrutia, minister of the interior, who on previous occasions has been the spokesman for the administration, was the person chosen to make the announcement.

Senor Urrutia refused to give out the text of the correspondence between Mr. Lind and the Mexican government, but confirmed the fact that an exchange of notes had taken place. Two notes from Mexico have been sent to Washington. The first was a reply to that delivered by Mr. Lind. This note included the demand for recognition of Mexico. President Huerta in his reply, is reported to have told the United States that he would tolerate no interference, even though that interference might be characterized as friendly mediation.

The second note was sent direct to Washington and demanded that a reply to the previous note be made immediately.

This is regarded her as an ultimatum.

One official in discussing this latter note said that Mexico had reached the point where she either must bow her head in humiliation before the United States or adopt an attitude of defiance. The first contingency, he added, was regarded as impossible.

Washington — Administration officials were puzzled when they received the announcement through press dispatches that Provisional President Huerta had delivered an ultimatum demanding recognition of his government in Mexico by the United States.

Secretary Bryan said he had received merely cablegrams announcing the rejection by the Huerta government of the American suggestions for a peaceful settlement. In the absence of official confirmation Secretary Bryan said no announcement would be made by this government.

VESSEL SINKS; 30 PERISH

Pacific Coast Steamer Strikes Uncharted Rock and Sinks in Three Minutes.

Juneau, Alaska. — Twenty-five or more passengers and seven members of the crew of the Pacific Coast Steamship company's steamer State of California perished in Cambier bay, 90 miles south of Juneau, when the vessel struck an uncharted rock and sank in three minutes, with many passengers imprisoned in their staterooms.

The steamship Jefferson, of the Alaska steamship line, southbound, heard the wireless call of the sinking vessel and turned back to rescue the survivors who had taken to small boats and life rafts. Ten of the passengres had suffered so severely from exposure that it was necessary to take them to a hospital in Juneau for treatment.

The State of California, an iron steamship of 2,276 gross tons, was built at Philadelphia in 1879, and carried a crew of 75 men. The ship was valued at $400,000.

Attorney General Hands Down Official Opinion on Governorship Controversy.

Albany, N. Y.—Lieutenant Governor Martin H. Glynn is the lawful chief executive of New York state pending the outcome of impeachment proceedings against Governor Sulzer, according to an official opinion handed down by Attorney General Carmody to Secretary of State Michael May. Mr. Carmody holds that the assembly was within its rights in instituting impeachment proceedings at an extraordinary session.

Boy Kidnaped Years Ago Is Found.

Watertown, N. Y.—Word reached here that Frederick Brosseau, aged 24, who was kidnaped by gypsies nearly 17 years ago, has been restored to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Brosseau, of Sissonville, N. Y. They had long mourned him as dead. On October 14, 1896, when but 7 years old, young Brosseau left home to meet his father at the edge of the village. That was the last seen of the boy in Sissonville. He was recognized from his pictures in the papers.

Layin' By Time

Layin' By Time is a happy time. It means more than quitting work after the farmer has put his crop in condition to mature for the harvest.

It means the end of long, hot days of labor, of restless nights of worry, of doubt of weather conditions and of seasons.

It means the consciousness of good work well done; the knowledge that the family is protected against want, and that more than the bare necessities of life has been earned.

The L. & N. takes pride in the knowledge that through its Agricultural Department it has contributed somewhat to the success of a large number of farmers. It believes that its employees—experts skilled in the various departments—have been of some assistance to the farmers in cutting down labor while increasing yield.

We want to see the country prosper; want to see the soil developed to its maximum capacity; want to see the people happy and enjoying a healthy contentment.

Let your layin' by time mean something. If you owe money at the bank, let it mean that you have laid by enough to pay, or to make a substantial payment.

If you owe the supply man, let it mean that you can look him in the face, as one honest business man looks into the face of another, and get your receipt.

Our experts know a good deal about gathering and marketing crops. They are at your service. All you have to do is say the word and we will do all we can to help.

The markets of the world are waiting for your shipments to be made. In making those shipments bear in mind that the L. & N. offers unexcelled freight facilities. This applies particularly to perishable products, where promptness of delivery and careful service mean so much.

E. E. Upchurch In Boston.

Popular Druggist having Fine Vacation In Hub

If he were not so well liked, Mr. E. E. Upchurch, proprietor of the Rexall Store at Clanton, could count on the envy of the stay-at-homes in Clanton. For our fellow citizen is having the time of his life in the Hub of the Universe, where he is attending the eleventh annual Rexall Convention of the United Drug Company, an international manufacturing and importing organization in which he is a heavy stockholder. A letter just received from Mr. E. E. Upchurch, by The Union-Banner, makes very interesting reading.

UNITED DRUG COMPANY'S LABORATORIES.

Boston, Mass., August 19, 1913.

Editor Union Banner,-

I did a wise thing when I came to Boston, for I never had such a good time before. United Drug Company's Convention opened in Mechanics Building yesterday morning, when Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of Boston welcomed us to the city. Then for three hours we listened to the annual address of President Louis K. Liggett, who told about the Company's progress in the past year, and outlined some big plans that will mean better goods and better service in every Rexall Store in this country in the future. Then came the annual report of the Treasurer, and I tell you it was impressive to see in black and white how Rexall sales have grown in twelve months.

There are over 2,000 druggists here from every state in the Union, from all the provinces of Canada and from England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales. Of course a fellow, can't hope to know so many people personally, but I know a good many at that, and they're all such good co-operators and so filled with the Rexall Spirit that when I meet the strangers, an introduction seems unnecessary. A good many of the Stockholders have brought their wives and daughters, and yesterday afternoon the ladies were given an auto trip to Wellesley College, where they had five o'clock tea on the campus. In the afternoon we had another business meeting, and at night the whole party went to a grand concert given by the United Company at Symphony Hall Grand is no name for it. The singers included MadameCorinne Rider-Kelsey, Madame Roso Olitzka, Mr. Orville Harrold Mr. Albert Spalding and Mr. Claud Cunningham.

While we men were talking business this morning, the ladies went on boat trip to Plymouth Massachusetts, where they saw Plymouth Rock and the histoic spots associted with Pilgrims.

There's something going every minute. When we're not in business session or having a good time somewhere we are talking business among ourselves, and I have had to break away to get time to write this. Tomorrow is the big field day. The whole party will go to Nantasket Beach on the Steamer Rose Stanish; there will be a Buffet Luncheon at the Palm Garden at Paragon Park and all the Park entertainments, chutes, scenic railways, etc., will be open free to visiting Rexalties. For most of us, especially those who come from the far West, the chance to bathe in the ocean will be the best feature.

In the evening they are going to give us an Old-Fashioned New England Clam Bake, followed by a Vaudeville Show, music, dancing and a fireworks display.

Thursday, the last day, will be spent in visiting the big candy plant where Liggett's, Fenway and Saturday Candies are made; the Rexall Laboratories, where we make Rexall Remedies, Harmony Perfumes, etc., and the new Pharmaceutical Laboratory just completed. The Convention will close with the annual banquet to be held in Mechanics Building. Of course, I have enjoyed the geod times, but the best feature of my trip has been the chance to see just how the goods controlled by The Rexall Stores are made. Now that I have seen the care and skill that goes into everything made by the United Drug Company, I have more reason than ever to be enthusiastic over the Rexall proposition, and to congratulate myself on the fact that The Rexall Store in Clanton is my store.

I suppose you know something about The United Drug Company. It was formed eleven years ago by Louis K. Liggett, at a time when there was absolutely no co-operation among retail druggists, who were making their own proprietary remedies in the back shop, buying their goods in small quantities at long prices, and in general conducting business with a good deal of waste. Mr. Liggett saw that if the buying power and manufacturing facilities of the leading druggists could be combined, the result would be better service, higher grade goods and lower prices for the public. Beginning with forty of the best known retailers in the country, he organized the United Drug Company and began to manufacture Rexall Remedies. The remedies were made right and sold right, and the public was protected by a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. Mr. Liggett thought it best to give the privilege of selling Rexall goods to only one man in each locality.

No man was allowed to become a Rexall druggist unless his financial standing and character were above reproach. It wasn't long before the public realized that The Rexall Store sign over a man's door was proof that man could be trusted, and that goods bought in that store would be better, last longer and cost less than goods bought elsewhere. Then people began to ask for other goods "made by the same people who make Rexall." To meet this demand, the United Drug Company began to manufacture other goods.

In 1903 our business was confined to one building, comprising only 30,000 square feet of floor space. Today, United Drug Company owns and operates factories, mills, laboratories, warehouses and branches, all over the United States, Canada and Great Britain and we require more than 1,000,000 square feet of floor space—or over 25 acres—to supply the public with Rexall Remedies; Liggett's Fenway and Saturday Candy; Harmony Perfumes and Toilet Articles; Symphony Lawn, Ustaco and Bokhara Stationery; Maximum, Monogram and American Beauty Rubber Goods; Klenzo and Marguerite Tooth Brushes; Liggett's Orangeade, Grape Juice and Fruit Syrups, etc., etc. In 1903 there were 40 stockholders, today there are more than 7,000. To meet these men is a revelation, and you can tell anybody that's interested in my doings that the ideas and new goods that I've seen at this meeting have more than paid my expenses for the trip. I am coming home cram full of plans for a big campaign, and I am going to give the people of Clanton such bargains in down-to-the-minute merchandise, and such ahead-of-the-clock service as they never saw before, even in the Rexall Store.

Yours sincerely,
E. E. UPCHURCH.

Sad Death of 2-Year Old Child

Little Son of Mr. and Mrs Guy Higgins Dies Suddenly With Spasm

One of the saddest deaths which has occured in Clanton was on last Friday about eleven o'clock, when Guy, Jr., the two year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Higgins passed away very suddenly, having been ill only a few hours. The child was first taken sick, but it was not thought serious. But the mother and father impatient for the little sufferer and anxious for his relief, called a physician. The Doctor came and administered aid, and he too, did not think the danger very great. Shortly after his departure the little boy was seized by a violent spasm, and in about five minutes was dead. Mr. and Mrs. Higgins have the heartfelt sympathy of their many friends in the loss of their precious jewel. The sympathy of friends is consoling, but it is slow to heal the wound inflicted by the grim reaper.

Jno. B. Higgins, a brother of the deceased, who was attending College in Georgia was at once informed of the sad death, but he reached Clanton too late for the burial services which took place at Clanton cemetery on Saturday evening.

Good Road Scouts Visit Clanton

Trans-Continental Pathfinders are Guests of Judge Reynolds

Last Friday night Mr. R. L. Furgerson, wife and two children, and Mr. Walter Harper, who compose the Pathfinders party of the Southern Trans-Continental Highway, stopped in Clanton and were guests of Judge L. H. Reynolds at the Palmer Hotel. It is the purpose of the party to select a route for the great southern trans-continental highway to be used by the winter tourist in going from the eastern to the western states. There is already a northern highway, but it cannot be used by autoists in winter.

The party are making the trip in a large automobile, and are stopping at all principal cities and towns. As they travel they make a directory of the route, which will later be published in book form and serve for guides to tourists who may wish to travel the selected route. It will be good for Clanton if she succeeds in getting a place in this directory.

RAWLINSON-HALL.

The following wedding invitation has been received by friends in Clanton:

"Mr. and Mrs. Hines Holt Hall give in marriage their daughter, Mary Louisa, to Mr. Robert Moledis Rawlinson, on the afternoon of Wednesday, the tenth of September, at half after five o'clock, at home, "The Elms," Coosada, Ala.

Miss Hall iswell and favorably known in Clanton, being a former teacher in the Clanton High School. Her many friends here will be interested to learn of her wedding.

School Notice

The Clanton High School will commence its next session on Wednesday, Sept. 3rd, at 9:00 a.m. It is hoped that every parent having a pupil to send will have it present the first day of school. This is especially true of the smaller ones. Failure to make a grade is often due to failure to take an even start with the class. Charges will be the same as they were last year.

Yours very truly,
J. J. Pickens.

Mount Pleasant

Hurrah for G. W. Wilson! Say Mr. Wilson, did you know that there was a negro delegate to the democratic national convention at Baltimore last year? President Wilson is just rewarding them for voting for him last year. That's nothing, the democratic governors here in Alabama have been appointing negroes to office.

The singing at this place last Sunday evening was real good and well attended. Quite a number from Liberty were here. We find Mr. Culp to be an energetic and enthusiastic music leader. We give him a special invitation to sing with us again, and we will certainly try to give him more time than he had last Sunday.

About two weeks ago rumors were in circulation about Mr. G. W. Melton's little girl being dog bit. A neighbors dog jumped on her and bit her right bad, and for fear he might be mad his head was sent to Montgomery to be examined, which proved that he was not mad.

Mr. P. R. Smith of Texas is visiting at Rev. J. T. Nelson's.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Duncan spent Sunday with the latters brother near Clanton.

Mrs. Andrew Jones of Birmingham is visiting her sister here.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. King were callers at Mr. Lee Vickrs Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bart Oden and son, Bart, Jr., spent Sunday with Mr. W. H. Foshee.

Mr. and Mrs. Dixon Baxley and Miss Susie Morris of Weogufka, spent last Friday night with Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Massey.

Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Hawkins of near Cooper spent Saturday and Sunday with friends and relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Duke spent Sunday with the formers parents.

Mrs. J. W. Doster was a visitor at Mr. J. P. Smith's Sunday.

Mr. A. D. Low attended the State Union at Montgomery last week.

Mr. Arch Dupriest and cousin, Miss Telsia Nickerson spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Dupriest.

Geo. D. Mims Dies Suddenly

Prominent Man of Chilton County Victim of Paralysis

Geo. D., better known as "Dutch" Mims, a well known citizen of the eastern part of the county, died suddenly at his home Sunday night, as a result of a sudden attack of paralysis.

Mr. Mims had for the few days previous to his death been in apparently good health, and his death comes as a surprise to his friends who knew him.

His home was near Lock 12 on the Coosa River, about ten miles from Clanton. A wife and family survive him.

Maplesville News

We are proud to say that the health of our town is very good at present. Crops are very good. Had a nice rain Saturday which was good for the picnic the Methodists gave the Sunday school chi'dren. Had a large crowd and the children spent a most delightful day. Had plenty of nice dinner and refreshments. Sorry indeed the Baptists never joined in our picnic.

We notice the Methodist Sunday school is doing some fine work now under their assistant superintendent, W. S. Wallace. He gained in six weeks sixty-five new members.

The Ladies Aid Society are not doing much now; wonder what's the matter? Get busy ladies and help push the good work for Christ along.

Glad to see Mr. Bob Ritcherson, who has been in Selma for several days undergoing a slight operation, in his office at the Twin Tree Lumber Co. again.

Clanton Eager For High School

Citizens Meet at Court House and Formulate Plans

On last Thursday night a large number of prominent citizens of Clanton met at the Court House to institute plans for meeting the State's requirements in securing a County High School for this locality. Several present made stirring arguments, setting forth the opportunities of Clanton in securing this valuable institution, and showed every reason why Clanton should grasp it.

The most tangible conclusions that were reached were donations of lots for the school property by Dr. Gowan, Mr. J. W. Stanfield and others.

The main purpose of the meeting was to determine some plan for raising the four thousand dollars which is the part the individual citizens of Clanton must donate in meeting the requirements of the State Department of Education. The town and vicinity falls into three sections which are interested in the school. They are the east side of the railroad, the west side and south Clanton. Committees were appointed in each of these districts to get up subscriptions for the school.

W. I. Mullins, J. B. Downs and E. M. Pinckard are the committee for the east side district.

H. T. Pipes, C. R. Mullins and W. H. Sartor for west side.

J. N. Dennis, J. L. Dupree and J. H. Roberts for south Clanton.

It is the purpose of the citizens to get everything worked up so as to have something definite to offer the High School Commission when they come to look into Clanton's desirability as a location for the school.

Indications

There is now every indication that the coming year will be one of reasonable plenty and prosperity.

It follows on the heels of a year full of doubt and misgiving. Even the most optimistic, if he be thoughtful, cannot but admit that conditions have required careful management and much economy.

An occasional year of "hard times," of poor season, short crops, depressed business, and the like, is a good thing.

It makes a man thoughtful of his resources, careful of his opportunities, and thankful for his possessions.

Now that plenty and prosperity is upon us—for the seasons have been advantageous and the crops give promise of bounty—let us remember last year; the hard work, the short crop and the tight money.

Let us make the most of what we now have and of what the year will bring forth.

To do this the farmer and the business man should be sure that he realizes the maximum price for his products, sure that he pays no more than is just and reasonable for what he consumes.

Transportation enters largely into the fabric of business. The L. & N. supplies the best to be had in freight and passenger facilities. Not only does the L. & N. supply transportation, but it will cheerfully, gladly, cooperate with the shipper, be he merchant, manufacturer, or farmer, to get the shortest route and the lowest rate. It will and does do all in its power to promote prosperity throughout its territory.

If you want information concerning transporting any given article from any given point in Alabama to any given point on the civilized globe, that information will be supplied by competent experts.

If you contemplate taking a trip from any point in Alabama to any point on the civilized globe, full information concerning rates, accommodations, time, etc., will be supplied.

Let the L. & N. contribute to your comfort, convenience and prosperity.

COTTON LOSES IN CONDITION

DETERIORATION IN OKLAHOMA, TEXAS AND ARKANSAS.

EAST AFFECTED BY DROUTH

Boll Weevil in Mississippi and Louisiana Augmented Damage of Dry Weather—Outlook West of the River Poor.

Memphis, Tenn.—The condition of the cotton crop is estimated to be 69.6 of normal, an even 10 points loss from the government's figures of July 25. The figures given are based on an average date of August 22.

Deterioration has been heaviest west of the river, where the long drouth continues unbroken and is making itself felt on the crop. Conditions probably have never been worse in Oklahoma, and in Texas the loss has been very severe. The plant is withering and is shedding heavily and young bolls are opening prematurely. In Oklahoma the grade of cotton brought to market is said to be rather poor.

Hot, dry weather prevailed over most of the eastern belt during the last fortnight, with a resultant deterioration in Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama. The loss in Mississippi and Louisiana was greatly augmented by boll weevil, the second hatching of which is infesting the fields and doing much damage. In Georgia and the Carolinas the plant about held its own during the month and prospects are still bright in those states for a splendid crop.

In many places in the west it is contended that rains will not be of benefit should they fall soon, but in most sections correspondents are of the opinion that good rains would greatly add to the yield. The extremely hot weather and the very dry soil tended to minimize the benefit accruing from recent scattered showers in Texas.

Owing to the dry, hot weather, cotton is opening fast and picking promises soon to become general. Farmers are placing the lint on the market as soon as ginned. Labor, generally speaking, is ample.

TO INDORSE CURRENCY BILL

Criticisms of Bankers Cause Tightening of Lines.

Washington.—The answer of the administration forces in the house to the criticisms of the currency bill made by the conference of bankers at Chicago will be a tightening up of the lines and a more vigorous indorsement of the bill as it now stands. Informal conferences of Democratic members of the house currency committee emphasized the fact that the active supporters of the president's currency plan expect to pass the measure through the house without substantial change. The amendments proposed by the bankers, it was pointed out by house leaders, all were considered in detail when the bill originally was prepared and in the long debate over its provisions in the house committee on banking and currency.

BTSY TIME FOR BIG VISITOR

British High Chancellor to Be Widely Entertained.

New York.—Viscount Richard Burden Haldane, lord high chancellor of Great Britain, will have a busy time during his coming visit to the American continent. An inspection of the military academy at West Point, banquets in New York and Montreal, an address before the American Bar Association at Montreal and the acceptance of an honorary degree from McGill University, are some of the events that will occupy his time. Viscount Haldane left Liverpool on the Lusitania Saturday and is expected to come ashore in New York next Friday. The primary object of his visit is to deliver an address before the American Bar Association September 1. His theme will be "Higher Nationality."

Receiver for Mining Company.

Livingston, Mont.—George B. McCaron of Livingston was appointed by District Judge Law receiver of the property, mines, mills and water power plant of the Montana Consolidated Gold Mining Company, incorporated for $10,000,000, and having property alleged to be worth a half million.

Want U. S. Steel Unmolested.

Philadelphia.—Private advices received here state that 150,000 of the 200,000 men in the employ of the United States Steel Corporation have signed petitions to be forwarded to the attorney-general requesting that all proceedings looking toward the dissolution of the corporation be brought to an end.

[illegible] Army Corps.

Windsor, [illegible].—The first Salvation Army corps [illegible]med among prisoners east of Ch[illegible] was organized in the state prison here by Salvation Army officials.

No General Strike.

Erie, Pa.—A decision not to call a general strike of all Erie trades unions was reached at a special meeting of the Central Labor Union. It was the opinion of the executive committee of the body that such a move would jeopardize the molders' strike.

Pope Receives Bishop.

Rome.—The pope received in private audience Rt. Rev. J. M. Laval, auxiliary bishop of New Orleans.

UPHOLD WILSON'S CURRENCY IDEAS

AMENDMENT FOR INTERLOCKING DIRECTORATES IS DEFEATED.

TRIUMPH FOR THE PEOPLE

Popular Control of Financial Institutions as Opposed to Centralization of Power, a Democratic Idea.

Washington.—Supporters of the administration currency bill scored an important victory in the house Democratic caucus when they brought to their aid an unqualified indorsement of the measure from Secretary Bryan and defeated the proposed "insurgent" amendments that would have prohibited interlocking directorates in national or state banks incorporated under the proposed new law.

Secretary Bryan, in a letter addressed to Chairman Glass of the currency committee, approved the bill as it stands, declaring President Wilson had recognized fundamental rights of popular control in its provisions. He asserted that the plank of the Democratic platform against interlocking direcorates was aimed chiefly at trusts, and he urged Democrats to "stand by the president" and not to load down the currency bill with any amendments which might endanger its early passage.

Fortified with the backing of one of the makers of the Baltimore platform, Representatives Glass and Underwood met the demand for an amendment to prohibit interlocking directorates with a counter-proposal that the Democrats of the house take up general legislation against interlocking directorates at the next session.

Administration leaders said the large vote that supported the Underwood motion and the hearty approval that greeted Secreary Bryan's indorsement of the bill assured the approval of the complete Glass bill with but little change.

GAYNOR WILL BE CANDIDATE

He Will Make Race on Independent Ticket.

New York.—With Edward E. McCall's acceptance of Tammany Hall's designation as its candidate for mayor, and John Purroy Mitchel, collector of the port of New York, already picked to lead the fusionists, Mayor Gaynor was placed in the lists for re-election on an independent ticket by his friends. Announcement that Gaynor would run was made by Louis Goodman, president of the East Side Gaynor Association, after Mr. Goodman had called on Mayor Gaynor at the city hall. Prior to Mr. Goodman's visit Mayor Gaynor issued a statement indicating his willingness to be a candidate. Present plans of the association and two other organizations supporting Mayor Gaynor are to place the mayor at the head of "the strongest ticket they can pick ou," withou regard to organizations that may have indorsed his running. Thus the independent ticket may be partly fusionist, partly Tammany and partly new.

May Call Convention.

Washington.—Progressive Republicans identified with the "conciliation" committee selected at the Chicago conference will take up at once with Chairman Hilles of he Republican national committee the question of calling a general reorganization convention. The original plan was to call a meeting of the national committee within 60 days of the adjournment of congress. Senator Cummins and other leaders have determined to urge Chairman Hilles to act at once, as the prospect of an adjournment of congress is remote.

Oversea Limited Wrecked.

Peters, Fla.—The Oversea Limited, a fast passenger train of the Florida East Coast Railroad, running from Key West to Jacksonville, was derailed by a defective switch near here.

U. S. Orders Torpedoes.

London.—The Standard says that the United States government has given a large order for improved Whitehead torpedoes similar to those just supplied to the new Japanese cruiser Kongo.

DIGGS IS GUILTY WHITE SLAVERY

20 YEARS IN FEDERAL PENITENTIARY MAXIMUM PENALTY.

MOTIVE IS A CRUCIAL TEST

Judge, in Instruction to Jury, Says Intention to Perpetuate Immoral Act Paramount Consideration to Observe in Framing Verdict.

San Francisco.—In eloping with Marsha Warrington from Sacramento, Cal. to Reno, Nev., Maury I. Diggs, former state architect of California, was guilty of violating the Mann act, which makes it a felony to transport women for immoral purposes from one state to another. This was the verdict of the jury that tried him. Five years in the federal penitentiary is the maximum penalty.

There were six counts in the indictment and the jury found a verdict of guilty on the first four. Each count carries a maximum penalty of five years and a minimum of one year in a federal penitentiary.

After being out three hours and five minutes, the jury returned to ask the court what form the verdict should take if they were agreed on some of the counts in the indictment and not on the others.

Judge Van Fleet instructed them to make their findings on those counts as to which they were agreed. A verdict of guilty on any one count, he said, would be a verdict of guilty of violating the statute, and would carry the penalty imposed by the statute.

Diggs, his wife, father, mother and three aunts, Mrs. Drew Caminetti and Mrs. Anthony Caminetti, were in court, waiting for the verdict. Diggs was pale and his wife showed the tension she was under by the twitching of her lips and the lessened bloom of her rich color.

The questions of the foreman clearly foreshadowed the coming verdict and gave them time to steel themselves for the final shock. There was no demonstration of any sort when the expected blow fell.

The case won national notoriety when United States Attorney John L. McNab resigned, charging that the trial had been delayed by political influence, and made public his resignation in an open letter to President Wilson.

F. Drew Caminetti, co defendant with Diggs, will be placed on trial before Judge Van Fleet in the United States district court.

JEROME TO BE AFTER THAW

Former District Attorney Is Named Special Deputy.

Albany, N. Y.—William Travers Jerome, former district attorney of New York county, was appointed by Attorney-General Carmody a special deputy attorney-general to represent the state in procuring the return of Harry K. Thaw to New York's jurisdiction. He was selected because of his familiarity with the Thaw case, gained in the two murder trials and as special counsel in several of Thaw's attempts to establish his sanity.

Messina Wind-Swept.

Rome.—American and other dwellings erected at Messina after the 1908 earthquake were devastated by a hurricane of terrific violence. The number of persons drowned is unknown as yet, but the death list is certain to be large.

Eight Hurt in Wreck.

St. Louis.—Eight persons were injured, several of them perhaps fatally, when a Missouri, Kansas & Texas passenger train from Sedalia, Mo., and a local freight train met in a head on collision at the foot of Dock street here.

Dead Wall Reached.

Washington.—The United States and Mexico, according to official analysis at the state department and White House, have come to the dead wall of diplomacy over the solution of the Mexican troubles. Huerta is described as standing firm on his proposition, or rather attitude, of absolute rejection of mediation, and Special Envoy Lind is either voluntarily or by instruction continuing his efforts to make an impression on Huerta. The diplomatic situation seems to be the impact of irresistible force on the immovable body.

THAW IS CAUGHT; TO MAKE FIGHT

WILL SEEK RELEASE ON WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS.

HE WAS CAUGHT IN CANADA

Canada May Deport Him by Law as Insane Person or Through Extradition Proceedings on the Charge of Bribery.

Sherbrooke, Quebec.—United States Consul Daniels announced that he would go before Judge Mulvena and ask that the habeas corpus proceedings to be brought in behalf of Harry K. Thaw be postponed. This will give District Attorney Conger an opportunity to appear.

Tired and sleepy, but apparently unworried by his capture, Harry K. Thaw arrived here from Coaticook, in the custody of two officers of the judicial district of St. Francis.

Previous to his departure from Coaticook he had been arraigned before the local magistrate as an insane person and remanded to jail at Sherbrooke, which is the headquarters of the district.

The proceedings by which Thaw was remanded were brief. He was represented by his attorney and the dominion by Hector Vearrette, K. C. On the statement of the case by Counsel Vearrette, Justice of the Peace Dupey ordered the prisoner taken to Sherbrooke.

As soon as Thaw had been ordered held he wired to New York for a large sum of money. The prisoner refused to make any statement to newspaper men who came here on the train with him. He had been instructed by his attorney to say nothing.

Chief of Police Bedeau of Coaticook was one of the officers that guarded the prisner on the train journey.

"Our prisoner has admitted to me that he is Harry K. Thaw," said the chief. "His tall and erect stature and dark, staring eyes, certainly bear out all description of Thaw that I have ever seen. The eyes would attract attention anywhere. He did not have glasses on when we arrested him and has not had them on since. He seems to be all right, but tired, and looks as if he needed sleep. His eyes probably have a more staring and fixed expression on that account. "We are taking good care of him."

NO POLITICAL EARTHQUAKES

Glynn, Acting Governor of New York, So States.

Albany.—Martin H. Glynn was officially recognized as acting governor of New York state by the board of trustees of public buildings when rooms in the capitol were designated as the "executive chamber" for his use. The assembly parlor and a committee room were set aside as the acting governor's quarters. They are situated on the third floor, while the executive offices to which Gov. Sulzer still clings are on the floor below. As his first act after moving into the new offices Mr. Glynn issued a statement outlining his policy. In part the statement says: "I do not intend to employ a emporary occupancy of the governorship for the purpose of partisan warfare. Under me, as acting governor, there will be no political earthquakes and no factional reprisals."

Thaw Invited to Virginia.

Charlottesville, Va.—John Armstrong has written a letter to Harry K. Thaw congratulating him on his escape from Matteawan and inviting him to come to Virginia when he gets out of Canada.

Regrets for Wilson.

London.—Ambassador Page called at the foreign office and tendered to the foreign secretary the regret of the American government for the recent attack made on the British foreign office by Henry Lane Wilson.

Kills Wife and Self.

Wheeling, W. Va.—While four of their six children looked on helpless, John Marshall shot dead his wife at the breakfast table in their home in Martin's Ferry, across the Ohio river from here, and then killed himself.

H. L. Wilson Silent.

Chicago.—Henry Lane Wilson, retiring ambassador to Mexico, arrived here on his way to his home at Culver, Ind. He had no comment to make on Mexico.

Practical Fashions

LADIES' EVENING CAPE.

For the evening there is no wrap as convenient as the cape and as it does not crush the dress it is doubly desirable. This model has just fullness enough for comfort. At the neck there is a hood collar, which can be made of something very light and slipped over the hair. Crepe de chine, brocaded faille or messaline will make up nicely in this style with lining of chiffon or silk.

The cape pattern, (6313), is cut in sizes small, medium and large. Medium size requires 5¾ yards of 44-inch material.

To procure this pattern send 10 cents to "Pattern Department," of this paper. Write name and address plainly, and be sure to give size and number of pattern.

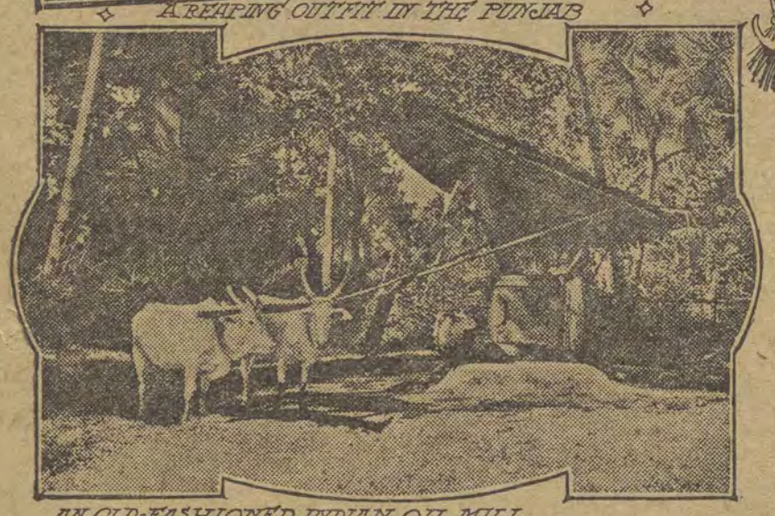
INDIA'S CHANGING COUNTRY LIFE

By SAINT NIHAL SINGH

TREADING OUT CORN

A REAPING OUTFIT IN THE PUNJAB

TOBACCO CULTIVATION IN BENGAL



AN OLD-FASHIONED INDIAN OIL MILL

HERE and there the country life in India is changing. The old agricultural implements which have preserved through the centuries the simplicity and inefficiency with which the primitive people of the peninsula endowed them are being discarded, and their place is being taken by chilled steel plows and modern harrows, cultivators, mowers, reapers and threshing machines, imported from the United States. At the same time, large irrigation canals, built by the government, are liberating cultivators from eternal worry over the prospects of rain. These changes are taking place with startling rapidity. The process is proceeding at a snail's pace, so slowly that it is hard for foreigners to realize that the transition is going on. However, each year more and more of the illiterate farmers are sendng their sons and daughters to school, and each year they show more interest in the demonstrations held on the experiment farms, and display less opposition to innovations. In a few districts the advancement is already quite marked. This is especially true of certain parts of the Punjab—the province of the Five Rivers, situated in northwestern India—which are known as the Canal colonies. There several million acres of land that twenty years ago was barren waste, today have been converted, thanks to a marvelous irrigation scheme, into an important grain-producing region, spreading the fame of India wheat far and wide in the world.

The very first farm that I visited in the colonies during a recent tour vividly revealed the transformation of Indian rural conditions. In the courtyard, shaded by a spreading jujube tree, stood a reaping machine. In a mud shed, erected especially for the purpose of protecting the farm machinery, I wound four chilled-steel plows, two of them made in the United States. On the floor of the low-roofed verandah the farmer's son, a lad of about twelve, at the highest reckoning, clad as Dame Nature had dressed him at birth, but for a scanty breech-clout, stood turning the wheel of a modern fodder-chopper, which cut green chari (millet) in small shreds that fell about him in a succulent shower.

After further travel and investigation among the cultivators living round about Lyallpur, the largest city in the erstwhile waterless wilderness, which now, in the wake of the water carried by the Chenab canal, has become a paradise for farmers, I found that the cultivator whose home I had first visited was not a whit more enterprising than scores of others in the district who today are employing time and labor-saving machinery to do all the work on their land. Wherever I went I found agriculturists galore who owned their own steel plows, harrows, cultivators and improved fodder-choppers. Occasionally I would come across a reaper which was the property of a progressive individual who profited by renting it to his neighbors at harvest time. At one place I even found a steam threshing machine.

Many causes have combined to make the farmers in the Punjab colonies progressive. In the first place they more or less entirely have been cut off from their old moorings, and have begun life all over again in a strange locality. They have left some of their ultra-conservatism behind them in the congested Punjab from which they hailed, and the pioneer conditions that they found confronting them in the new region divested them of some more of their inborn reaction. The Lyallpur agricultural experiment farm, located in the very heart of the settlebent, has demonstrated to them the good results of deep plowing with chilled-steel plows, and the advantage of using improved implements instead of farming in the cumbersome, bungling, old-time way. A still more potent factor that is encouraging these farmers to use modern machinery is the scarcity of workers and the high wages they demand. To begin with, it never was intended that these colonies should become glutted with an over-population. In order to guard against that the individual holding was made about twenty-eight acres in area, many times larger than the average plot in other parts of India, which is very small indeed. Added to this is the fact that fell work has been done by the bubonic plague, and the population has been ruthlessly thinned out. As a result there constantly is a dearth of laborers, especially at harvest time. Then, too, during the cotton season it is necessary for the many ginning factories which have been established to coax to them men, women and children who otherwise would be available for field work. This further shortens the labor supply on the farms. Indeed, the shortage is so great that the government irrigation department, which is constructing suplementary canals to bring more water to the Punjab colonies, finds it necessary to employ mechanical excavators, since coolies are not to be had for love or money. In such a circumstance it is only natural that wages should rise, so that the landowners find it more profitable to employ labor-saving machinery than hands.

The same causes which have induced the Punjab colonies farmer to use modern implements are persuading their brothers in other parts of the country to take them up. Whenever one thinks of India he has in mind its teeming millions and cheap scale of wages; but he rarely remembers that the price of labor has risen a great deal during the past few years, and still is rising, compelling the wise native to employ mechanical instead of manual help. Moreover, the agricultural department, which maintains well-equipped experiment farms at the principal centers of India, and schools and colleges, dotted all over the land where scientific agronomy is taught to the sons of farmers and young men whose forefathers have always looked down upon manual work, and issues popularly written literature for the enlightenment of the agricultural classes, also are exerting their influence to persuade the cultivators all over British India to make use of modern implements. Many of the native states, too, are following the example of the British administration and are carrying on a similar propaganda for the enlightenment of the agriculturists. This is especially true of Baroda and Mysore, two of the largest territories under native rule. It is quite natural therefore that the demand for farm machinery should be growing.

Since most Indian farmers are exceedingly poor and cannot offhand afford expensive implements, they have taken to clubbing together, sometimes as many as ten of them combining their resources to buy a reaper; and in many instances they are not satisfied with this machine alone, but indulge in improved machinery of other descriptions. In the central provinces agricultural associations have been formed to interest the tenantry in the use of up-to-date methods. This means India's salvation; for the implements now in use on the land are of the crudest character imaginable. The plow is nothing more than a crooked stick with a blunt piece of iron fastened to the point. The handle stands up at right angles, and by this the primitive share is laboriously guided as it is dragged through the hard-baked earth by the patient bullocks. The cultivating is done with a short-handled hoe, which can be used only when the worker is squatting on his heels, and he waddles along at his task without rising. The corn is cut by a hand sickle and threshed out by the old-fashioned method of driving oxen over and over it. The winnowing is done by pouring the grain out of small baskets held high above the head by a man, either standing on the ground or on a sort of step-ladder, the wind blowing away the light chaff, while the corn falls in a heap below. Fodder is cut into shreds with a small hand-knife. Water is drawn from shallow wells or rivers or ponds, sometimes by a "Persian wheel" operated by one or two oxen, sometimes by hand, sometimes by baskets let down and quickly drawn up and emptied into a shallow, narrow channel which conducts it to the field. In view of all this, the adoption of modern implements is a move in the right direction.

SAFETY DURING STORM

The question of personal safety during a thunder storm is perhaps the most interesting to the majority of people. If in a building which is isolated in the open country or is higher than surrounding buildings in a group, avoid chimney or other flues, open windows or drafts, especially warm currents of air directly below a high tower or flag pole, peak or angle of the structure, is the warning given by the writer in the New York Sun. Keep away from overhead wires entering a building—although these are generally protected by lightning arresters, the currect is not always "arrested."

If in the open avoid trees, wire fences or poles, and if you happen to be the most prominent object in the landscape, as in an open field or on a beach, do not raise a steel rod umbrella, or, in fact, any umbrella, as you may become a living lightning rod without an approved ground connection. If you should happen to be caught in such open space, with lightning discharges coming close, as may be determined by the lessening intervals between flash and report, it is better to lie flat on the ground and risk a soaking than to offer a possible path for a discharge. The reason for this is that the body, being warm, offers a better conductor than the surrounding air, and only a few feet rise is necessary to attract lightning on flat ground.

Questions as to the action of lightning striking a building are frequently asked, and are somewhat difficult to answer without going into a lengthy discussion of the various kinds of discharges and other matters of a more or less technical nature. Let us, however, take the most frequent case, that of the ordinary "forked lightning," as seen at a distance, which at close range becomes the blinding flash, with the accompanying instantaneous crash, often causing disastrous results to life and property. This discharge is caused by a difference of potential between earth and cloud. The one is heavily charged with positive electricity ,the other with negative, with the air between acting as an insulator. If the air is sufficient to keep apart the two currents no discharge will take place except from one cloud to another. Now, as the storm moves on it comes closer to the earth or meets some object in its path which offers less resistance than the air—maybe a tree, pole, building, etc. The electrical pressure is so great that the slight decrease in resistance offered by such object is sufficient to cause the current to jump the intervening space and we have the destructive discharge. This explanation will be clearer to those who have seen the spark gap from coils used on automobiles.

Now let us assume that instead of the object before mentioned, such as a tree, pole, building, etc., we have a perfect conductor of electricity, as a steel building, steel tower or pole in electrical contact with the earth; the current passes through this into the earth silently, the pressure is relieved and in the great majority of cases there is no violent or explosive discharge.

Here is where the function of the lightning rod appears, similar to pipes tapping the tank and drawing off the water before dangerous pressure is brought to bear on the tank. A properly constructed lightning rod will, in the vast majority of cases, act in this manner by silently discharging the current from cloud to earth, thus preventing the violent discharge which we call the thunderbolt.

PRODUCTION OF FAT LAMBS

Flock Masters Are not Slow in Finding Out What Breed Suits Their Soil and Climate.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.)

The Shropshire is much in favor as a sire for fat lamb production of Welsh or Kerry Hill ewes, and the Ryeland also claims qualities of no mean order in this respect.

Where a flock is kept solely for the fat lamb trade, and the ewes are cleared out every year as soon as the lambs are off, then the Welsh, Kerry or Chevoit is generally in favor crossed with a Shropshire, Ryeland or Western ram. The latter are much used and their lambs feed very quickly and are of fine quality.

Flock masters, as a rule, are not long in finding out what breed suits their soil and climate best, and in sheep breeding both are very important factors, and therefore on cold, heavy land quality must be to some extent sacrificed to size.

Small-natured, fine-boned sheep will not thrive when folded on sticky land when a big weight of dirt is hanging to each foot in damp weather, productive of more muscle than mutton, and, therefore, a stronger, bolder, and more muscular sheep is necessary; and it is on that account that crossing some of our larger breeds is so much in favor, as it tends to produce sheep possessing those characteristics coupled with good constitutions.

And although beauty of form has to be sacrificed, yet in the weight of mutton and wool obtained, together with a small percentage of mortality, it is more than compensated for, and for cold, sticky land, the Oxford and Hampshire cross seems to take the lead.

On light land, or any really good sheep land, people can do as they please, and on sheep land most breeds will thrive, either kept pure or otherwise; but sheep are now kept on land where in days gone by such a thing would not be dreamed of, and it is on that kind of land that cross-bred sheep are sure to thrive better than any other.

All the crosses above named are good in their way, but the surrounding circumstances and the chief object to be aimed at, whether fat lamb, mutton, or wool, or all combined, must be the factors in deciding which is best.

MOLASSES GOOD HORSE FEED

Product of More Value as Laxative and Appetizer Than as Food—Valuable as Conditioner.

Molasses in horse feeding is valuable in two ways: It is a laxative when horses are being fed wholly on dry feed. Molasses will make unpalatable food much relished, says Farmers' Digest. Every farmer realizes that he may have some very fine hay lining in the swath, or even get a light wetting from a shower when raked up in the windrow.

This hay contains just the same nutrition and digestibility as it did before the slight wetting, yet the horse will not relish it as he will the same hay that was put in the barn before it got wet. It simply is not as palatable. Now if a gill of molasses is mixed with about a pint of water and a feed of this hay is dampened with it the horse will eat it even better than he will the same hay put in the barn before getting wet.

The feeding of molasses is of more value as a laxative and appetizer than as a feed in horse feeding. It can be fed either on the roughside or used to sprinkle on either grain or meal. Horses will also eat it if stirred in meal or whole grain, but it usually is sticky in their mouths if not mixed with water.

Molasses is also fed in larger quantities than mentioned when horses are being fattened for market and are ill, but I don't advise this kind of practice, as it makes a soft fat and the horse, when put to work, soon loses his flesh, but in a limited way, along the lines mentioned, it is a valuable horse conditioner, as a lot of horses become constipated on wholly dry food.

Advantageous Houses.

Movable hog houses make it possible to distribute the hogs over the farm in clean, fresh quarters, thereby utilizing grass and forage crops to the highest degree and at the same time reducing the danger of disease to a minimum.

Hearth-Hunger.

"Beyond the need for bread, a woman's needs are two; deeper than all cravings save the mother's passion, firm-rooted in our endless past, is the hearth-hunger. The trees that sweep my chimney have their roots at the world's core! The flowers in my door-yard have grown there for a thousand years! What milenniums have done, shall decades undo? We are not so shallow, so plastic as that! We will go into the mills, the shops, the offices, if we must, but we know we are off the track of life. Neither our desire nor our power is there."—Cornelia A. P. Comer, in Atlantic.

ECZEMA DISFIGURED FACE

Hampton Springs, Fla.—"I had had eczema on my face and hands for about three years. My face was badly disfigured. The eczema broke out in pimples and itched so very badly I would scratch it all the time. It was the most irritating disease I ever had. It started on my face and hands and it spread all over my body. I had great large sores all over me, caused from the eczema. It bothered me day and night so that I could not rest at all.

"I used three remedies for skin disease and they didn't give relief at all. I was almost terrified until a friend recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment to me. They helped me from the time I started to use them. I only used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and was cured." (Signed) Mrs. E. C. Parker, Dec. 7, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

The repairs which have been in progress at the county jail for some weeks are near completion. They make the condition of the jail much more satisfactory, and insure humane treatment to the inmates. Dr. Oates, the state prison inspector, will make investigations of the new conditions soon.

If you are not already a subscriber to The Union-Banner you should not delay in getting your name on our list. We intend to make a paper that will be welcomed to your home every Thursday in the week. If you already take it, we hope you will continue to give us your support in our effort to reach a higher standard of newspaper service.

Sometimes our correspondents send in programs for conventions, etc., to be held weeks after they write them. Owing to our space being limited we often omit these for a week or two after we get them, but manage to get them in at least one time before the meeting is held. We would like to give these things several weeks notice, but it is impossible to do so, owing to the large amount of other matter that must go in and cannot wait. We hope they will continue to give us such matter as it is interesting reading, but please do not push us about getting it in so long in advance. We will arrange always to give at least one week's notice. If we can do better we will do so.

HEALTHY LIVER MAKES BEAUTY

Famous Actress Finds That a Healthy Liver is Necessary to Good Looks and Youthfulness

One of the best known women of the American stage is writing a series of articles on the preservation of beauty. She attaches great importance to keeping the liver active at all times, and she is right. Neither good looks nor happiness will stay long with any man or woman who lets the liver get lazy and sluggish.

It is not always safe to take calomel, the old liver remedy. Doctors agree that it is a very uncertain drug. But the Alred Drug Co. has a remedy for sale that they guarantee to take the place of calomel absolutely, and still be harmless, causing no restriction of habit or diet. This remedy is Dodson's Liver Tone.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant tasting vegetable liquid, but it starts the liver gently and surely and relieves constipation and biliousness so promptly that it has become a dependable remedy in thousands of homes in the United States. There are scores of families in this vicinity who will not be without it in the house and who would not think of starting on a trip without a bottle of it.

Alred Drug Co. have sold so much Dodson's Liver Tone that they are convinced of its merit and will give any person his 50 cents back, who buys a bottle and does not find that it takes the place of calomel to perfection.

To Stop Scaling of Psoriasis

This Troublesome Skin Disease Promptly Checked by a very Simple Attention.

Classed with eczema, psoriasis has been considered one of the most obstinate of skin diseases.

A lady in Lexington, Ky., says that before she began using S. S. S. the disease broke out at frequent intervals where she thought it cured. But by getting her blood under control by the influence of S. S. S., psoriasis entirely disappeared and there was never again the slightest sign of it.

Like nearly all skin diseases, psoriasis is primarily due to impaired blood.

The skin is but a network of fine blood vessels. And it is a perfectly natural consequence that any influence in the blood that is a condition of ill health makes its first appearance in the skin. There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which peculiarly stimulates cellular or glandular activity to select from the blood or from this fine network of blood vessels in the skin, those elements which it requires for regeneration.

Thus pimples, acne, eczema, lupus, or any other blood condition that attacks the skin or seeks an outlet through the skin, is met with the antidotal effect of S. S. S.

This is why skin troubles vanish so readily and why they do not return.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. Take no chance by permitting anyone to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 182 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

VERY LOW RAILROAD RATES

Cotton Notice

To Merchants, Farmers and Ginners.

Birmingham, Ala., July 25, 1913.

The maritime Associations have adopted rules effective the coming season, and state that they will be absolutely and strictly enforced. In self protection the railroads are forced to adopt the same rules, and exceptions will be made on bills of lading where cotton is:

1st. More or less wet.

2nd. More or less stained.

3rd. More or less soiled.

You are urged to properly care for your cotton so that the bales will remain in good condition.

All ocean freight engagements will be based upon a standard bale gin-box 27x54 inches, and any bale larger than this will be penalized one dollar per bale by the steamers. Further, any bale that cannot be compressed to a density of 22 1-2 pounds per cubic foot, ship side, even if 27x54 inches in size, will be penalized 50 cents per bale.

These rules by the ocean carriers are caused by the great difficulty in properly stowing, in steamers, bales of unusual and large sizes, and the consequent loss of room. Everyone can readily understand the saving involved in stowing cotton in a ship, railroad car or warehouse where the bales are of the same dimensions. We urge therefore that all gin boxes be changed before the new season opens, to the standard size of 27x54 inches. Texas now has a state law making this standard.

Because of the new maritime rules, it will be necessary to penalize bales above standard size $1.00 per bale. Bales under 400 pounds cannot be compressed to the required density, and bales weighing between 300 and 400 pounds will be penalized 50 cents per bale. Bales under 300 pounds are unmerchantable as heretofore. We recommend that each farmer make each bale weigh as near 500 pounds as possible.

In view of these rules made by the maritime associations, it will be to the interest of each farmer to see that his bale is packed in gin-box of 27x54 inches, and is properly cared for before shipment.

The steamship lines have also made rules in regard to the condition in which cotton shall be delivered them, and in order to comply with same, it is necessary that cotton be covered at the gin with good strong bagging, free from sample holes, and that the ends be well sewed up.

A little thought will show that the above rules are for the benefit of all concerned, and especially the producer, as the cheaper and less wasteful handling which will be permitted by observing these rules mean as higher price paid the farmer for his cotton.

We desire that you understand that these rules were not made by the cotton buyers, but by the maritime associations, steamship companies and the railroads, and every cotton merchant must abide by them.

The co-operation of all therefore is urged in effecting these reforms.

A WOMAN'S WORK

sometimes reduces her strength to the depths of weakness—her devotion to household cares prevents sufficient rest and recreation. Thousands of women in this condition find Scott's Emulsion exactly what they need; it is predigested body-food so medically perfected that every drop yields direct returns in strengthening the organs and tissues and in making healthy, life-sustaining blood. Scott's Emulsion is devoid of alcohol or any harmful drugs, and overcomes tiredness and nervousness in a marvelous way.

4th Class P. M. Examination

Saturday, September 27, 1913.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces that on the date named above an examination will be held at Selma, Ala., as a result of which it is expected to make certification to fill a contemplated vacancy in the position of Fourth Class Postmaster at Stanton, Ala., and other vacancies as they may occur at that office, unless it shall be decided in the interest of the service to fill the vacancy by reinstatement. The compensation of the postmaster at this office was $100 for the last fiscal year.

Age limit 21 years and over on the date of the examination, with the exception that in a state where women are declared by statute to be of full age for all purposes at 18 years, women 18 years of age on the date of the examination will be admitted.

Applicants must reside within the territory supplied by the post office for which the examination is announced.

The examination is open to all citizens of the United States who can comply with the requirements.

Application forms and full information concerning the requirements of the examination can be secured from the postmaster at Stanton and the local secretary at Selma, or from the U. S. Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

Applications should be properly executed and filed with the Commission at Washington, at least 7 days before the date of the examination, otherwise it may be impracticable to examine the applicants.

DARBYS FLUID

PREVENTS AND CURES

HOG CHOLERA

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

Pen up your hogs when cholera is in the neighborhood. For each ten hogs put one quarter of a bottle of Darbys Fluid in the daily supply of water. Clean out troughs every day before watering. Do not feed slop or any liquid food. Feed moderately on chops or other light stuff. Continue this treatment for two weeks, you can then turn your hogs out;—they are insured against cholera.

READ THE PROOF.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:
This is to certify that we have used Darbys Fluid for the prevention and cure of Hog Cholera. Last summer we used it on fifty head of hogs and we lost only nine. These nine consisted of a brood sow and litter of eight pigs. We believe we could have saved the entire herd had we started using Darbys Fluid earlier.
GANTT BROS. STORE CO., Little River, Ala.

GENTLEMEN:—
Hogs were dying of Cholera by the thousand in my neighborhood They had it all around me but I saved all mine by putting Darbys Fluid in their drinking water and not letting them have any water without Darbys Fluid in it. Its a great preventive. I keep it on hand all the time. Its good for a hundred purposes.
J. A. STANALAND, Pidcock, Ga.

DARBYS FLUID has many uses about the household. It destroys germs or bad odors about the house and purifies the air of living or sleeping rooms. It heals wounds, sores, cuts or galls on human or animal flesh. It is a fine addition to the bath for cleansing the body or feet of disagreeable odors. If used in the water for brushing the teeth it sweetens the breath. As a disinfectant for the sick-room in contagious diseases and for safe-guarding the health of the family when such diseases are prevalent in the neighborhood it is worth it weight in gold.

SYNOPSIS.

Comtesse Elise, daughter of the governor of the Mount, has chance encounter with a peasant boy. The "Mount," a small rock-bound island, stood in vast bay on the northwestern coast of France, and during the time of Louis XVI. was a government stronghold. Develops that the peasant boy was the son of Seigneur Desaurac, nobleman. Young Desaurac determines to secure an education and become a gentleman; sees the governor's daughter depart for Paris. Lady Elise returns after seven years' schooling, and entertains many nobles. Her Ladyship dances with strange fisherman, and a call to arms is made in an effort to capture a mysterious Le Seigneur Noir. He escapes. Lady Elise is caught in the "Grand" tide. The Black Seigneur rescues and takes her to his retreat. Elise discovers that her savior was the boy with the fish. Sanchez, the Seigneur's servant, is arrested and brought before the governor. Lady Elise has Sanchez set free. Seigneur and a priest at the "Cockles." Sanchez tells Desaurac that Lady Elise betrayed him, but is not believed. The Seigneur plans to release prisoners at the Mount. Lady Elise pleads with her father to spare the lives of condemned prisoners. Disguised as a peasant Lady Elise mingles with the people and hears some startling facts. A mysterious Mountebank starts a riot. He is arrested and locked up after making close observations of the citadel, and is afterwards summoned before the governor's daughter. The governor enters the room during the interview with the Mountebank. As a miserable buffoon, the Mountebank is released by order of the governor. Desaurac overpowers guard and dons soldier's uniform. The Seigneur successfully passes guards and finds the "Great Wheel." Jacques, the jailer, forced to tread the wheel and bring up enemies of the governor.

CHAPTER XXII—(Continued).

More stealthily now he began to study his companion in the wheel, while a question, suddenly occurring, reiterated itself in his brain. This man—who was he? And what did he know of the mountebank, or his, Jacques', dealings with the clown? That his captor was no soldier of the rock, or belonged there, the hunchback felt by this time assured, and a growing suspicion of the other's identity brought home with new force to the dwarf the thankless part chance, perhaps, had assigned to him in that night's work. And at the full realization of the consequences, should his surmise prove correct—what must ultimately happen to himself in that event, when unwilling co-operation at the wheel should become known—almost had he again reached the desperate point of calling out; but at that moment a turn in the wheel brought to the level of the aperture, the car. In it, or clinging thereto, were a number of figures who, as soon as the rope stopped, sprang noiselessly to the platform.

"Seigneur, we hardly dared hope—"

"We obeyed orders, but—"

Gazing through the spokes of the wheel, and listening to their whispered exclamations, any lingering doubt as to who his captor was could no longer be entertained by the hunchback. These new-comers took no pains to conceal it; even when the dwarf's presence became known to them and unceremoniously was he dragged forth—they displayed a contemptuous disregard of him as a factor to interfere, not calculated to dull the edge of his apprehension! Too late now might he regret that pusillanimity that had caused him to draw back from an immortal role; already was the car again descending!

It came up loaded; went down once more, reappeared. On the little platform now were more than a dozen men assembled, but to Jacques this force looked multiplied. Amid the confusion of his thoughts, vaguely could he hear orders given; caught something about the need for quiet, haste, overpowering the guard; then saw the door open, and the men, like shadows, go out; leaving him alone. No; with two black figures; ominous; armed. He could see the glitter of their weapons, and ventured to move his thick tongue, when, fiercely silenced, he crouched down; waited, with hands clenched, an interminable period; until faintly from afar sounded the note of a night-bird.

Roughly jerked to his feet, between them he walked to the door; heard it close; stepped out into the night. Many times had he made his way between wheel-room and guard-house, but now the route seemed strange, and, looking around near the structures at the entrance to his dungeons Jacques shook his head as if to rid his brain of some fantasy. But the scene did not change; the guard-house remained—familiar; unlike, with unknown faces peering from it, and an imperious voice issuing commands to him, once unquestioned commander here!

And comprehending what was being said, he struck his breast violently; with curses would have answered that the keys were his own; the dungeons, too, and what they held, and that he would never lead them there; never open these doors! But this grim, savage, determined band beat down his arms, and his courage; and, with the shadow of the grave again before him, the dwarf walked on; past the stable into the guard-house, where familiar forms once had been seated, and into the passage leading to the dungeons beyond.

CHAPTER XXIII.

At the Verge of the Aperture.

The footfall of the Black Seigneur, near the guard-house of the dungeons, was measured, yet noiseless, as he stepped on the soft earth, alongside the stone walk, now toward the passage in the direction of the wheel-room, then back into the little square. That his thoughts, however, moved not in accord with that deliberate stride, the brows impatiently knit, and the quick glances he continued to cast over his shoulder, bore testimony.

"Seigneur, We Hardly Dared Hope—"

Stopping at length near the Tour Bernard, he looked fixedly down at the town, wrapped in a stillness that should have reassured him. Nevertheless he appeared not satisfied; and had stepped out into the court again, when some sound he heard, or fancied, sent him quickly to an embrasure in the wall. From this opening—formerly for cannon in defense of the fenils, and the poulain, or planking for the hoisting of goods—he leaned far out, his glance instinctively turning toward the barracks, some distance to the right and far below. As he stood thus, that which had first attracted his attention—the sound of a voice giving orders—was repeated; at the same time where had been only darkness now shone many windows, while to the left, near the entrance he had passed after leaving the stable, lights began to dance like fireflies.

At these signs of activity and the sounds breaking the general quietude, an exclamation fell from his lips; then, pausing only a moment to listen and observe, he sprang toward the guard-house. Crossing the threshold, defined by a faint glimmer from a distant corner, he made his way past several motionless forms, into a low passage beyond. Here he called out impatiently; but from those depths, leading down into the dungeons where his comrades had gone, no answer was returned. His voice, hollow, mocking, seemed stifled in a tomb; more loudly he shouted; walked farther in, when an indistinct response was followed by a pin-point of light, and, ere long, by the bearer of a little lamp, Sanchez.

"The others?" At the head of a dark stairway into which he would inadvertently have plunged, had he gone farther, the Black Seigneur confronted the man, as he approached.

"They will soon be here," said the old servant, springing up the steps and walking after his master, who had already turned back toward the guard-room. "Jacques—curse him!"—putting out his light in obedience to a gesture from the other—"fumbled with the keys; pretended he couldn't find the right ones! So it took longer to open the doors."

"The prisoners?"

"I left our men working at the last dungeon to come on ahead—to let you know you might soon expect them."

"Soon," ironically, "may be too late."

"You mean—?"

"The hue and cry is out! I have long been expecting it; I do not understand why it didn't come before; unless a mountebank, locked up, was considered safe enough for the night—"

"Then some one knew—?"

"Some one?" A bitter laugh was quickly suppressed on the young man's lips. "Hark! Listen!"

"Sounds below! the soldiers!" exclaimed Sanchez, and started toward the window to look out, only to fall quickly back.

"What is it?" With his hand on the other's shoulder, the Black Seigneur whispered the question.

"A face! At the window!"

"So soon? The hounds are quicker than I thought! Or," drawing his sword, "it may be only one or two in advance. In that case—"

But no enemy, single or plural, met their view, either in front, or at the side of the guard-house; only the darkness, void, empty, and the bare rampart wall winding around the head of the Mount like a monster guardian dragon, asleep at his post.

"Here is no one!"

"No one! Yet am I sure I saw—"

"A shadow!" answered the other "And we have nothing worse to fight!"

"Some one was there, Seigneur," stubbornly, "and fled!"

"Eh bien! He's gone!"

"He? It looked like a—"

"Back with you, quick! Is this a time for talk? Call those who can come—if they would save their necks!"

"Here they are now," exclaimed the servant, and, as he spoke, the first of their men, blowing out the light he carried, ran quickly across the guard-chamber and into the open air. Others hastily followed, until the gathering, swelled by those brought with them from the dungeons, stood expectantly before the little stone structure.

"All the prisoners are here?"

"All!"

"To the wheel-house, then!"

But as they hastened across the square and into the narrow way, the Black Seigneur again spoke to the man just ahead:

"The hunchback?"

"We left him below, locked up in the Devil's Cage!"

"The Devil's Cage! Quelle bonne plaisanterie! Although," looking back, "it may cost us dear!"

And indeed, behind the sound of pursuit came nearer; the clatter of soldiers' feet grew louder, until, reaching the little square and the guard-house, all tumult suddenly ceased. A momentary silence, strange, ominous, was broken by a din of voices, as the flaring here and there of torches threw grotesque reflections high against the grim background of black masonry.

To those now within the wheel-room, the cause of that abrupt clamor was not difficult to divine; his Excellency's soldiers had found the sentinels overpowered in the guard-house! Would the former stop to investigate; search first those subterranean passages? Already had the prisoners, the weaker of the Black Seigneur's men, filled the car, or hung clinging to the rope above; already was the wheel turning—almost before the key had turned in the lock at the entrance.

"Seigneur!"

"Sanchez?"

"When we left the wheel-room, we closed the door."

"When we got back, it—"

A footfall without interrupted, followed by the sound of a hand at the door, and other steps drawing near.

"Jacques!" An expectant voice spoke; waited; called louder. Then those outside listened; some one exclaimed, and hurried footsteps retreated toward the guard-house.

As they died away, in the wheel-room the car came up for the second time empty, and inquiringly the men there looked from one to the other; but, even in that moment of danger, not one of them moved, or made sign of impatience. Some must go; others remain, and stoically they awaited the word of their leader.

"Down with all of you! I'll let you out the line," taking a turn with the rope around a stanchion near the wall, "and then come down myself."

The command was unexpected; for the first time those that had never questioned their leader's authority, hesitated, and more sharply was the order repeated; whereupon they obeyed; all save one.

"I'll let it out myself," said Sanchez.

"Get in!"

"No!" was the obdurate reply, when the Black Seigneur made a sign; hands reached up, seized Sanchez, and a moment later the car started down. The line strained; as it played out, now running free about the stanchion, then stopping with jerks, the man in the wheel-house almost looked to see it part. The hempen strand, however, proved sound; held its human freight; but another danger pressed near.

Scarcely had the car begun its downward journey than an attack, indications of whose approach had not been wanting, manifested itself without. Beneath a sudden, savage assault, the door shook; yet engrossed at the line, every muscle strained, the man at the stanchion heeded not. Swiftly, mechanically he worked, apparently as unconscious of the clamorous soldiers without as of a silent presence within—some one that had been concealed in the little store-room adjoining, opening into the wheel-house, and now peered out; but at once drew back, as, with a crash, the door fell in.

At first, in the comparative darkness, with only the sky at the aperture staring them in the face, the in-rushing black figures paused, uncertain; lights soon were pushed forward, however, and then could they see the great wheel going round, unwinding the rope; the man at the stanchion.

"The prisoners! He's letting them down."

"Cut the line!"

Some one with a knife rushed forward, severed the strand; but at that moment the car touched the bottom. Then did the solitary man at the rope for the first time awaken to his own situation; with a backward sweep of the arm he struck so fiercely the foremost of those to rush at him that the fellow fell, hitting hard the stone floor. Those nearest stumbled, and drawing his sword, with a thrust of point or blow of hilt, the Black Seigneur, for a moment withstood the first confused on-coming; then extricated himself and leaped to the narrow space behind the wheel. Here was he protected behind by the wall; at one end, by the masonry jutting out, while, at the other, only one or two could attack at the same time. But in front, through the spokes of the broad wheel, they might well hope to reach him.

At once the soldiers sprang forward, when, seizing the wheel, the man behind, with a savage jerk, set it in motion. The swords thrust at him were turned aside, one or two of his assailants were caught in the ponderous mechanism, and, before those attacking him had recovered from their surprise, the blade of the Black Seigneur shot in and out; to the right, to the left. Those ahead fell back upon their comrades; two, however, were unable to withdraw, and sank to the ground before the wheel. A third, with his hand to his throat and making strange sounds, staggered back to the wall.

Momentarily disconcerted, the others hesitated. "In the fiend's name, fear ye one man?" shouted an authoritative voice.

"A devil!"

"'Tis the Black Seigneur! I had a good sight of him."

"Beat! beat!
'Mid marsh-muck and mire—" came in mocking tones from behind the wheel.

"The mountebank!"

"Sacre tonnerre! But mountebank, or outlaw, you shall pay! This way!" And at the unprotected side of the wheel the commandant sought to bring the issue to a conclusion. One blade the Black Seigneur struck down, while his own weapon retorted with more effect, though as it did so, another soldier made a lunge, and his sword entered the shoulder of the man behind the wheel. A shout of triumph that fell from the lips of the Governor's trooper was, however, abruptly checked; lurching forward with the stroke, ere he could recover, something heavy—a brass hilt—beat like a hammer on his head and he dropped to his knees. The others pressed closer; but with the desperation of a man resolved to sell his life dearly, the Black Seigneur fought on; regardless of cut and thrust, was holding the narrow entrance, when from the rear, somewhere, came the report of a firearm.

"Back! Stand back!"

Those nearest the wheel, not unwilling, perhaps, to desist, drew away; other detonations followed and smoke filled the place, obscuring the gaze. In the yellow fog they waited; until first it was swept aside close to the opposite wall by a draft of air from the aperture of the adjoining store-room, and the commandant, in an effort to see, moved impatiently forward. Ere, however, he could reach the wheel, near the threshold of the store-room, he felt his arm suddenly seized.

"Look, listen!"

For Tired Nerves.

When everything in life goes wrong, when the tempter within you begins to stir and growl, go to some good masseuse and you will soon find that your rage is calmed and your poise restored.

"But," exclaims the woman of small income, "this is rather expensive advice for most women, and only those fortunate enough to possess money can indulge in it."

But in this she is wrong. It is precisely the woman of small income, whose life is swamped in a thousand irritating details, who must scrimp and save to make both ends meet, whose temper is always on edge because of the constant demands made upon her, whose heart is frequently sore because her purse falls so far short of her desires, that needs the economy of an hour's rest in the hands of good masseuse and the complete relaxation that her treatment brings.

The Blade of the Black Seigneur Shot In and Out.

She Wanted to Know.

An inexperienced colored girl had just been installed as housemaid. Having eyed a patent bottle with much curiosity for some time she asked her mistress: "And what sort o' thing is dat, ma'am?" "That," replied madam, "is a bottle that will keep things hot or cold." "Land sakes, honey!" exclaimed the astonished darky, "how is it gwine to know whether you want it to keep things hot or cold?"—Ladies' Home Journal.

PRESIDENT READS MEXICAN MESSAGE

DECISION REACHED FOLLOWING MESSAGE FROM LIND IN MEXICO CITY.

NEGOTIATIONS TERMINATED

The Future Policy of the United States Will Be One of Absolute Non-Interference.

Washington. — President Wilson read his message on the Mexican situation at the capitol, following the receipt of a message from John Lind, personal representative of President Wilson in Mexico, that he had said good-bye to Foreign Minister Gamboa. Negotiations, so far as Mr. Lind is concerned have been terminated. The United States will receive any further proposals through Charge d'Affaires O'Shaugnessy of the American embassy.

The message makes it plain that there will be no lifting of the embargo on arms; that no faction or government in Mexico will be allowed to receive munitions of war from the United States. If necessary, the president proposes to increase the American border patrol to enforce this policy.

It is a message of friendship, not hostility, and precedes a policy of absolute non-interference. It proclaims to the world the sympathetic feeling that the United States government and the American people have for their neighbors in the rebellion-torn republic south of the Rio Grande. It records the views of the United States on constitutional government, its unalterable opposition to governments set up by the irregular and arbitrary acts of ambitious individuals and formally announces that the government of Victoriano Huerta shall not be recognized the efforts of the United States to bring about a peaceful settlement of the difficulty through the representations made by John Lind, special envoy of President Wilson, are outlined, as well as the answer of the Huerta government.

The United States had proposed that a constitutional election be held and that Huerta should not be a candidate. To these suggestions through which the United States believes peace could be restored, Huerta has replied in the negative. Foreign governments generally since that rejection, have been active in support of the American policy to persuade Huerta to yield.

LEO FRANK FOUND GUILTY

Atlanta Factory Superintendent Mus Pay Penalty for Murder of Mary Phagan.

Atlanta. — The jury in the case of Leo M. Frank, on trial for the murder of Mary Phagan, found the defendant guilty. No recommendations were made by the jury.

Mary Phagan's body, bearing marks of violence, was found in the basement of the National Pencil factory on the morning of April 27.

Newt Lee, negro night watchman of the factory, who found the body, was arrested on suspicion. Superintendent Frank and several other employes were detained several days later. Among these was James Conley, negro sweeper.

After an exhaustive coroner's investigation Frank and Lee were bound over to the grand jury. Frank was indicted for murder on May 24. Lee is still in jail, as is the sweeper, Conley.

Frank's trial began July 28. James Conley gave the only direct testimony against the defendant. Conley swore he had stood guard outside the factory office while Frank was closeted with the pretty 14-year-old girl, and later helped Frank carry the body to the basement. The negro also told a revolting story of other alleged incidents at the factory office, charging the defendant with degeneracy.

Late in the trial the defendant made a statement denying all knowledge of the crime.

Frank showed no visible signs of emotion when he was informed that he had been found guilty of the murder of 14-year-old Mary Phagan. The factory superintendent's wife was with the prisoner when the message was delivered and she collapsed.

Thinking they had killed him members of the mob dispersed, but when a call was sent in to police headquarters and officers arrived it was found the negro was still alive.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK VERY ENCOURAGING

Money Much Easier — Movements of Merchandise Continues Liberal.

New York.—Bradstreet's review of trade says:

Optimism concurrent with good buying furnishes the keynote for this week's trade report. Visiting buyers have held sway in most of the country's leading markets, and while those from parts of the drouth afflicted southwest have operated rather conservatively, the general run has bought with more or less liberality. In consequence, house trade, especially in dry goods and allied lines, has broadened perceptibly.

Taken by and large, the situation is encouraging, and it is patent that the prolonged policy of buying from hand to mouth has stripped shelves, as the result of which a reaction toward rather extensive buying has set in. Advices from textile mill centers indicate that idle machinery is starting up and at the same time complaints of slow deliveries abound.

Business failures for the week ending August 21 were 278, which compares with 264 in 1912.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the aggregate 7,032,487 bushels, against 3,338,569 last year.

New York.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Recent expansion in commercial activity is generally maintained, although more or less irregularity is manifest in reports from the leading trade centers. Movements of merchandise continues liberal and the low position of stocks at all points leads to increased uneasiness.

Deterioration in corn has not affected confidence in agricultural prospects. Sentiment responded also to the monetary situation's relief. Improvements are noted by the recession in long time paper rates. This is expected to prevent any financial stringency this fall. The trend of security values was somewhat uncertain because of conflicting advices from Mexico, yet standard issues of speculation show substantial gains over the low point of the year.

Failures this week numbered 247 in the United States, against 279 last year, and 38 in Canada compared with 21 a year ago.

MUCH LEGISLATION OF VALUE

Anti-Tuberculosis Workers Have Reason to Be Satisfied With Laws Passed in 1913.

Out of 41 state legislatures in session during the season of 1913, laws dealing with tuberculosis were enacted in 30 states, while in 34 states consideration was given to bills dealing with the prevention of this disease. This is a summary of the legislative campaign for 1913, issued by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. Appropriations to the amount of over $5,000,000 have been set aside for the treatment and prevention of tuberculosis by the various legislatures in session this year. In addition to these, congress will be obliged to set aside nearly $1,000,000 for the maintenance of the United States public health, the army and navy sanatoria, and the tuberculosis hospital of the District of Columbia.

Among the notable advances in the legislative enactments of this year are the tuberculosis registration law of Colorado; laws providing for subsidies to local hospitals in Minnesota and Wisconsin, an act providing for the establishment of county hospitals in Indiana, and the establishment of state bureaus for the prevention of tuberculosis in Ohio and California. A complete analysis of the tuberculosis legislation considered and enacted in 1913, is being prepared by the national association.

Egged Off.

De Wolf Hopper, at a luncheon in New York, said of a bad actor:

"He's had hints enough to quit the stage, dear knows. He's had more hints than Phatt.

"Phatt, after a brief experience on the road as 'Hamlet,' returned to his job in Canal street.

"'How did you come to leave the stage?' I asked him one night.

"'I had hints that I wasn't suited to it,' he replied.

"Thinking he meant the critics, I said:

"'Aha, the little birds told you, eh?'

"'Well,' said he, 'they'd have become birds, I suppose, if they'd been allowed to hatch.'"

Identified Himself.

The whizzing motor car struck a stump, and one of the occupants of the back seat, a lady possessed of considerable embonpoint, executed a neat but not gaudy parabola in the atmosphere and alighted by the roadside like a polypus falling from a shot tower.

"I don't believe I have broken any bones," she stated, in reply to the inquiry of the omnipresent bystander; "but there is a lump on this bank that—"

"Lump—nuthin'!" snarled a smothered voice. "I'm the constable that's got to arrest you gosh-durney joyriders, if I live!"—Judge.

Plant That Catches Its Food.

The common bladderwort, an aquatic plant not only defends itself against insects and animals, but catches worms and fish for its food. As it floats underneath the surface of the water its leafy branches spread out in all directions. Its leaves are covered with little oval bladders filled with air, and at one end of each bladder is a cavity which leads into the mouth below. Inside the bladder is a small trap door which opens when pressure is put on it. A small worm or a small fish can enter this door, but they can never come out.

Anecdotal.

Menelaus was king of ancient Laconia, and being such, he deemed it only his duty to be as laconic as possible, so, in a manner of speaking, to set the pace for the people.

Now, his wife was none other than the beautiful Helen, and, of course, the day came at last when she wanted a new hat. Could she have it?

"No," replied Menelaus.

"Just because 'no' is a letter shorter than 'yes!'" protested Helen, and burst into tears, and at the first chance ran away with Paris.—Puck.

Some Comfort.

"Represent to your afflicted friend, the young widow, that there is no misfortune without some comfort."

"Of course; black is extremely becoming to her fair complexion."

In the Bungalo.

"How do you like our ketchenette?"

"Rather small, isn't it?"

"Oh, no; it's plenty large enough. We take our meals out."

Gets Clogged.

"Has your friend Scriblets an easy flowing style?"

"Not so much as formerly. He's using a fountain pen now."

Drawback.

"You deserve a great deal of credit young man."

"Maybe I do, but I always have to pay cash."

Quite So.

"I think children's nurses are extortionate in their prices."

"Well, isn't it naturally a hold-up business?"

Plenty of men can give a girl a home like she has been accustomed to; but most girls are looking for something better than that.

Lamb and Sheep.

"Oh, dear! Something else to remind me that my boy is growing up."

"What now?"

"The sheepish way he looks when I call him my little lamb!"—Lippincott's.

Thoroughly Enjoyable.

"How was the picnic?"

"A great success. More people came near getting drowned than on any other similar occasion I ever heard of."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Expert Opinion.

"What do you have to say to all this gossip about Miss Maude's heavy intellectual eyebrows?"

"I don't believe they are as black as they are painted."

Hang the Expense.

"Is your new beau good to you, Mame?"

"Good to me? I should say he is. He picks out the ten-cent movies to take me to."

It's Illuminating.

"Did you see where in some city they have put luminous paint on the park benches to prevent spooning?"

"Luminous paint? That's a bright idea."

Weird Work.

"What's this; volcano in action?"

"No."

"Town on fire?"

"No, no; still life. Piece of huckleberry pie, painted by a cubist."

Natural.

"Just look at the fissures in the ceiling and walls of this house."

"Well, what of them? Didn't you tell me it was put up by a crack builder?"

No. SIX-SIXTY-SIX

MOTHER SO POORLY

Could Hardly Care for Children — Finds Health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Bovina Center, N.Y. — "For six years I have not had as good health as I have now. I was very young when my first baby was born and my health was very bad after that. I was not regular and I had pains in my back and was so poorly that I could hardly take care of my two children. I doctored with several doctors but got no better. They told me there was no help without an operation. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has helped me wonderfully. I do most of my own work now and take care of my children. I recommend your remedies to all suffering women."—Mrs. WILLARD A. GRAHAM, Care of ELSWORTH TUTTLE, Bovina Center, N.Y.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy we know for woman's ills. If you need such a medicine why don't you try it?

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

ROMANTIC WEDDING AT VERBENA

Elopement of a Popular Young Girl With Her Daring Lover Creates Great Excitement.

Bright and early Monday Morning as the world was yet dormant in the stillness of Sunday, cupid had already aroused an amorous young brave of the far north and hurried him southward seeking a counterpart for his affections.The drowsy world was unaware of his mission, but he knew and"she" knew. The object of his love was at Verbena, and by someone of the thousand of strange tricks known only to Cupid himself she knew of his coming and was ready and waiting breathlessly to greet her hero and flee with him to blissful land of which they long had dreamed.

Quietly, and insensitive only to the passions of love they sped away together and were soon united for life, making known to the world their cherished desire to be as one.

Tho not surrounded by their throngs of friends and well-wishers, and not treading to the rhythm of a wedding march, everything necessary for the performance was easily produced.

In the waiting room in the depot Mr. L. A. Calloway, in the presence of two friends of the couple, pronounced the rites that made Mr. Geo. S. Naish and Miss Irma Duffee husband aud wife. Mr. Naish is a young business man of promising future, holding a responsible position as agent of the L. & N. Railroad Company. Miss Duffee was one of the most charming and accomplished young girls of Verbena, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noah Duffee.

Mr. and Mrs. Naish left immediately for Birmingham, from which place they will continue their bridal tour through Georgia and Florida, returning by way of Pensacola and Montgomery.

Clanton Jail Now Repaired

The much needed improvements which have been underway at the Chilton County Jail for some weeks have been completed and the prisoners returned from the Montgomery Jail, whither they had been carried for safe keeping during the course of the work here.

The jail was inspected by Dr. Oates Saturday and pronounced acceptable. It is much better than before the work was done, the sanitary conditions now being in first Class Shape. The health of the inmates will no longer be in danger from the existence of bad surroundings in the prison.

To avoid malaria or chills keep the liver active and the bowels regular. An occasional dose of Dr. M. A. Simmons' vegetable Liver Medicine is the only thing needed. It keeps the system in fine vigorous conditiod. Ask for the tin box with the picture of Dr. M. A. Simmons on the front pannel. Price 25c. Sold by Alred drug Co.

RESOLUTION OF RESPECT

Of O. Z. Robinson.

Friends: How feeble are words to carry consolation to hearts bereaved of a beloved husband and father; a tender clinging vim interwoven in sweet memories, from the hour the angel first gave him to your home; a gentle spirt of light that flitted in and out like a gleam of sunshine. No one can fill his place in the vacant chair; no one will take his place in your hearts, and you would not have the void filled even if you could. It will be a sacred thought in the years to come, to relatives and friends that shed radiance in home as long as he did. It will be a blessed recollection that he grew up to love and to be loved by those who will ever so tenderly cheerish his pure and sweet memories, and whereas we feel hat Providence Local Union No. 215 will feel keenly its loss therefore be it resolved that we try in all of our indeavors to imitate him both fraternally and regiously. Be it further resolved that we lend a helping hand and a praying heart to his bereaved wife and console her with the truth that our loss is heaven's gain. Be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be sent to each of the county papers and the Alabrma Farmer for publication and one to his bereaved wife.

Respectfully,
W. W. Robinson,

The merchants and citizens of this place intend to have good roads and streets in the town. A traction engine with road scraper attached and men with picks and shovels commenced work in real good earnest a few days ago.

Thos. Smith at leisure hours paints. Tom says, "Well, while the crop's laid by I make myself busy at other work."

Wm. Coburn is superintending the building of a new house out on the road beyond the Baptist church.

Wm. Sims is running his cotton gin on full time now, and says that he will work nights in order to keep up if necessary.

Mrs. Martha Gray, mother of Postmaster Gray is improving from an operation for removal of cancer.

Dr. W. J. Coburn, dentist, who has been residing on his stock farm in New Mexico for the past three years, returned here recently and will remain until next spring.

Route agents Henderson and Culver both say that cotton is very much injured and that there will be only half a crop made on their routes.

Services, which lasted one week closed at the Baptist church on Sunday. Rev. A. J. Smith had charge of the meetings and his efforts were very successful. The music, as usual, was excellent and the sermons instructive, and full of wholesome and religious thoughts. D. H. Marbury and almost the entire congregation of Marbury Baptist church attended, and, thereby showed the spirit and interest that all good Christain people should entertain.

No Prizes in 1913 For Corn Club

Movement Instituted too Late to Launch A Contest.

Mr. T. E. Williams, the chairman of the Corn Club Committeee for Chilton County announces that it has been decided most equitable that no prizes be announced for members of the Corn Club in this county for the current year. The reason, he says, is that the movement was not begun in time to let all who wished to, enter the contest, and those who did enter have not had the time necessary for a fair test of their ability.

He urges that those who went to contribute to the awarding of prizes hold their interest till next spring and then encourage the move by making their offers. Also boys who expect to enter the Club next year should be laying their plans so they can get the benefit of a full season's work by beginning at the beginning.

This move is one of great good, and we wish to lend our full support to it.

Buy a Mechanical Drudge

MANY a winter day of back breaking labor has the average farmer spent stooping over the old buck saw, zr-r-p, zr-r-ping its way through tough wood for the kitchen stove supply. But the wise ones don't do it now. They have a handy engine to run the saw, while they rest and plan for next summer's work.

That engine is about the busiest and most convenient machine the wise man has on his farm. It pumps water for him, runs the separator, washing machine, feed grinder, corn sheller, and grindstone. Often it runs a hay press, ensilage cutter, small thresher, or a repair shop. The year round it drudges for him, saving the man's strength for more profitable things. And the wisest man has an because it does most for him at least cost. Its simplicity renders it almost trouble-proof. Its construction makes it easy to start and to operate, and it is most economical in fuel consumption. It is made of best material, and when necessary it will deliver 10 to 30 per cent above its rated horse power. I H C responsibility for the engine lasts all the years it is in service.

I H C engines are made in all styles—vertical and horizontal, portable, stationary and skidded, air and water cooled. There are pumping, sawing and spraying outfits. Sizes from 1 to 50-horse power, to operate on gas, gasoline, naphtha, distillate, kerosene, and alcohol. Oil tractors, 6-12 to 30-60-horse power for plowing, threshing, etc.

The I H C local dealer will show you the engines and tell you all about them. Get catalogues from him, or write the

PRESIDENT READS HIS MESSAGE; MEXICANS NOT TO HARM CITIZENS

Asks United States Remain Neutral by Prohibiting Arms Being Shipped From This Country—Advises All Americans to Leave There.

Washington, D. C. — President Wilson's message, read before a joint session of congress, contained a complete history of our negotiations with Mexico, and included the following advisory statements:

That all Americans be earnestly urged to leave Mexico at once.

That Mexico be informed summary punishment will be made if American lives are outraged.

That he deems it his duty to let the various Mexican factions fight out their troubles.

That he must prohibit shipment of arms to both federal and rebels to insure strict neutrality by the United States.

Failure of the negotiations of Special Envoy John Lind was reported by the president, but he said the door was not closed to resumption of peace overtures.

The president regards the situation as critical. The spirit of his address was friendship for the Mexican people, but extreme pessimism as to the outlook for immediate restoration of peace, because of President Huerta's rejection of the mediation plan.

The Message in Part.

In part, the president said:

"It is clearly my duty to lay before you fully, very fully, and without reservation, the facts concerning our present relations with the republic of Mexico. The deplorable posture of affairs in Mexico I need not describe, but I deem it my duty to speak very frankly what this government has done and should seek to do in fulfillment of its obligations to Mexico herself, as a friend and neighbor, and to the American citizens whose lives and vital interests are daily affected by the distressing conditions which now obtain beyond our southern border.

"Meanwhile, what is it our duty to do? Clearly, everything that we must do must be rooted in patience and done with calm and disinterested deliberation. Impatience on our part would be childish and would be fraught with every risk of wrong and folly.

"We can afford to exercise the self-restraint of a really great nation which realizes its own strength and scorns to use it. It was our duty to offer our active assistance.

"It is now our duty to show what true neutrality will do to enable the people of Mexico to set their affairs in order again and wait for a further opportunity to offer our friendly counsels. The door is not closed against the resumption, either upon the initiative of Mexico or upon our own, of the effort to bring order out of the confusion by friendly co-operative action, should fortunate occasion offer.

Contest Will Be Sharper.

"While we wait, the contest of the rival forces will undoubtedly for a little while be sharper than ever, just because it will be plain that an end must be made of the existing situation, and that very promptly; and at the increased activity of the contending factions will come, it is to be feared, increased danger to the non-combatants in Mexico as well as to those actually in the field of battle. The position of outsiders is always particularly trying and full of hazard where there is civil strife and a whole country is upset.

"We should earnestly urge all Americans to leave Mexico at once and should assist them to get away in every way possible—not because we would mean to slacken in the least our efforts to safeguard their lives and their interest, but because it is imperative that they should take no unnecessary risks when it is physically possible for them to leave the country.

"We should let everyone who assumes to exercise authority in any part of Mexico know in the most unequivocal way that we shall vigilantly watch the fortunes of those Americans who cannot get away and shall hold those responsible for their sufferings and losses to a definite reckoning. That can be and will be made plain beyond a possibility of a misunderstanding.

"For the rest I deem it my duty to exercise the authority conferred upon me by the law of March 14, 1912, to see to it that neither side to the struggle now going on in Mexico receive any assistance from this side of the border. I shall follow the best practice of nations in the matter of neutrality by forbidding the exportation of arms or munitions of war of any kind from the United States to any part of the republic of Mexico—a policy suggested by several interesting precedents and certainly dictated by many manifest considerations of practical expediency. We cannot in the circumstances be partisans of either party to the contest that now distracts Mexico or constitute ourselves the virtual umpire between them."

Repeated declarations of friendliness of this government for the Mexican people were made in the message.

"But we are not the only friends of Mexico," the president declared. "The whole world desires her peace and progress; and the whole world is interested as never before. Mexico lies at last where all the world looks on. Central America is about to be touched by the great routes of the world's trade and intercourse running from ocean to ocean to the isthmus. The future has much in store for Mexico as for all of the states of Central America; but the best gifts can come to her only if she is ready and free to receive them and to enjoy them honorably.

"America, in particular America north and south, and upon both continents, waits upon the development of Mexico; and that development can be sound and lasting only if it be the product of a genuine freedom, a just and ordered government founded upon law. Only so can it be peaceful or fruitful of the benefits of peace. Mexico has a great and enviable future before her if only she choose and attain the paths of honest constitutional government."

Here the president gave a word picture of conditions in Mexico today:

"The present circumstances of the republic," he said, "I deeply regret to say, do not seem to promise even the foundations of such peace. We have waited many months, months full of peril and anxiety, for the conditions there to improve, and they have not improved. They have grown worse, rather. The territory in some sort controlled by the provisional authorities at Mexico City has grown smaller, not larger. The prospect of the pacification of the country even by arms has seemed to grow more and more remote; and its pacification by the authorities at the capital is evidently impossible by any other means than force.

"Difficulties more and more entangle those who claim to constitute the legitimate government of the republic. They have not made good their claim in fact. Their successes in the field have proved only temporary. War and disorder, devastation and confusion seem to threaten to become the settled fortune of the distracted country. As friends we could wait no longer for a solution which every week seemed further away. It was our duty to at least volunteer our good offices—to offer to assist if we might in effecting some arrangement which would bring the relief and peace and set up a universally acknowledged political authority there."

The president then said he "took the liberty" of sending John Lind to Mexico as his personal spokesman and representative. He gave instructions to Lind which outlined the mediation plan with the following four distinct proposals:

"An immediate cessation of fighting throughout Mexico and definite armistice solemnly entered into and scrupulously observed.

"Security given for an early free election, in which all will agree to take part.

"The consent of Huerta to bind himself not to be a candidate for election as president of the republic at this election.

"The agreement of all parties to abide by the results of the election and co-operate in the most loyal way in organizing and supporting the new administration."

The president said Lind's instructions were to represent that in advancing the plan the nations of the world looked to the United States to act "as Mexico's nearest friend" and to offer this nation's good offices in assistance.

"Mr. Lind executed his delicate and difficult mission with singular tact, firmness and good judgment, and made clear to the authorities at Mexico City, not only the purpose of his visit, but also the spirit in which it had been undertaken," said the president. "But the proposals he submitted were rejected in a note, the full text of which I take the liberty of laying before you.

"I am led to believe that they were rejected partly because the authorities at Mexico City had been grossly misinformed and misled upon two points. They did not realize the spirit of the American people in this matter, their earnest friendliness and yet sober determination that some just solution be found for the Mexican difficulties; and they did not believe that the present administration spoke through Mr. Lind for the people of the United States.

"The effect of this unfortunate misunderstanding on their part is to leave them singularly isolated and without friends who can effectually aid them. So long as the misunderstanding continues, we can only await the time of their awakening to a realization of the actual facts. We cannot thrust our good offers upon them. The situation must be given a little time to work itself out in the new circumstances; and I believe that only a little while will be necessary. For the circumstances are new. The rejection of our friendship makes them new and will inevitably bring its own alterations in the whole aspect of affairs. The actual situation of the authorities at Mexico City will presently be revealed."

The president concluded:

"I am happy to say that several of the great governments of the world have given this government their generous moral support in urging upon the provisional authorities the acceptance of our proffered good offices in the spirit in which they were made. At the world expects us * * * to act as Mexico's nearest friend and intimate adviser. * * * There is nowhere any serious question that we have the moral right in the case or that we are acting in the interest of a fair settlement * * * not for the promotion of some selfish interest of our own. * * *

"This consent of mankind in what we are attempting, this attitude of the great nations of the world toward what we may attempt in dealing with the distressed people at our doors, should make us feel the more solemnly bound to go to the utmost length of patience and forbearance in the painful and anxious business.

"The steady pressure of moral force will before many days break the barriers of pride and prejudice down and we shall triumph as Mexico's friends sooner than we could triumph as her enemies—and how much more handsomely, with how much higher and finer satisfaction of conscience and of honor."

Rebels Want Arms.

Houston, Texas. — Given unrestricted opportunities to buy munitions of war in the United States, the Constitutionalists will sweep Provisional President Huerta from power, assume responsibility for injury done foreigners, hold a free and fair election and re-establish Mexico in firm cordial relations with the United States, according to a statement from Gen. Jesus Carranza, which Dr. Henry Allen Tupper and Capt. J. T. Armstrong of the international peace forum are carrying to President Wilson. Dr. Tupper and Capt. Armstrong passed through Houston and made public the statement of Gen. Carranza, who is a brother of the Constitutionalist commander-in-chief. They were commissioned by the peace forum to confer with Constitutionalist leaders in an effort to devise possible peace measures.

Lind at Vera Cruz.

Vera Cruz, Mexico.—John Lind, special envoy from the United States, remains in the Terminal hotel awaiting instructions. He is prepared either to start back to Washington or retrace his steps to Mexico City.

He knew of Foreign Minister Gamboa's latest statement, construed to mean that Mexico desired to reopen negotiations, but Gen. Huerta had not asked Lind to return nor had Washington indicated, so far as could be learned here, what Lind's next move would be.

HEAVY DEATH TOLL IN AUTO RACES

FOUR RIDERS MET DEATH WHEN DRIVER DONOVAN CRASHES INTO FENCE.

2 RECEIVE MINOR INJURIES

Two Cars Miraculously Escape Injury — Thousands Witness Horrible Catastrophe.

Nashville. — Death claimed a heavy toll in the Labor Day automobile speed races at the state fair grounds when four of the six high powered cars entered in the twonty-five mile free-for-all were wrecked and rendered into a mass of twisted steel and splintered wood on the far side of the mile track opposite the big grandstand, wherein were packed 5,000 expectant people.

Four of the daredevil drivers were killed, two instantly, while four escaped without injury of any sort. Two of the cars with their drivers and mechanicians flashed through the tangled wreckage of broken cars and maimed bodies at a speed of 60 miles an hour, escaping injury by a miracle.

The horrible tragedy came without warning to the spectators, as the previous races had been run off without a hitch.

The six cars were speeding around the circular track at a terrific rate of speed with the Studebaker "Whiskbroom" carrying the ill-fated number 13, about 200 yards in the lead of Mercer number 2.

On the fifth lap the "Whiskbroom" sped by the grandstand and took the curve at full speed. It disappeared in a cloud of dust. Suddenly the spectators were brought to their feet by the sound of a loud crash as Driver Clyde Donovan felt his right front wheel gave way after swerving slightly to keep from striking a small negro boy who ran across his path, and with iron nerve turned his car into the outside fence, rather than block the track in the face of those who were too close behind him to slow up. It was a heroic piece of bravery, but failed to serve its purpose. Mercer number 2 flashed by in an instant, but the wreckage of the fence fell back into the track and the way of the succeeding cars partially blocking the track.

The Stutz, which was running third, drove into the wreckage at full speed, striking the broken railing and pieces of the "Whiskbroom." It took a high leap into the air, turned a somersault and came to earth, throwing both of its drivers clear of it as it fell.

On the heels of the Stutz sped the Buick, which struck the wreckage with a terrible crash, turning over several times and crushing the life out of both of its occupants before it stopped after striking the inside fence. The machine was torn to pieces by the impact and the drivers probably died instantly.

After having passed the wrecked "Whiskbroom" on one occasion with safety, the Mercer No. 2 continued around the track unmindful of the carnage that had been wrought and did not see the wrecked cars and dead bodies that blocked their path until they had turned the lower turn. Then it was too late to stop. Unable to reach the emergency brake, Driver Edward Polk attempted to dodge the bodies that lay in his path. He was successful in this, but the swerving of his car put it beyond his control and, after passing through the wreck he swerved sideways and hit the outside fence head-on. He and Freeman Ormsby were thrown to the track, the latter receiving painful bruises while Polk was hardly hurt.

Both the Apperson and Mercer No. 5 passed through the death trap unscratched, although going at full speed. Ten Shepard, driver of the Mercer No. 5, declared after having been flagged down that he never saw the wrecked cars and only good fortune brought him through in safety.

Prisoner With Broken Leg Leaps From Window Into Waiting Auto and Escapes.

Minneapolis, Minn. — Eugene Calendar, an alleged boy burglar, confined in the criminal hospital of the city ward here, escaped by jumping from a window into an automobile with a broken leg. Wants to Dress As Man.

New York. — Fro ma jail cell Elizabeth Trondle, a Brooklyn girl, appealed by letter to President Wilson to issue her a permit to dress as a man. "I can appear as a man and do a man's work, I shall be more respected and better paid," she wrote. "It's no crime for a female to wear male attire, yet I am locked up in jail because I did so." Miss Trondle, arrested for masquerading as a man, had been working in male attire at a book bindery.

PROSPECTS ARE GOOD FOR COMING SEASON

Evidences of Reviving Industrial Activity Better—Reports From Dry Goods Market Gratifying.

New York.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Evidences of reviving commercial and industrial activity steadily multiply, and business optimism is becoming widespread.

This spirit of confidence finds a reflection in the more general anticipation of future requirements and since merchandise stocks at all leading points must be replenished, prospects are encouraging for a satisfactory fall and winter season.

The restrictive influence of tariff revision is somewhat less manifest and the expansion in trade is facilitated by the improved monetary situation, increasing preparations for remote needs being stimulated by the broader absorption of commercial papers at lower prices.

Conditions in iron and steel have been rather better than expected this month. Reports from the dry goods market continue gratifying to the trade. A generally improved comparison with the two preceding years is shown in bank clearings this week. The total at all leading centers amounts now to $2,400,285,805, an increase of 0.4 per cent over last year.

Failures this week numbered 329, against 251 last year and 28 in Canada, compared with 27 a year before.

New York.—Bradstreet's weekly trade review says:

In some respects trade reports suggest somewhat more irregular movements. Western advices indicate conservative buying, presumably a reflex of reports of reduced crop yields. At the same time they proclaim that trade is equal to or in excess of that done at this time last year, when operations certainly were growing. On the other hand, the more important eastern markets, particularly those having to do with textiles, display more vim.

House trade has enlarged and mills instead of making concessions are insisting upon higher prices.

Incidentally there are few dissenting notes as to the outlook for fall trade and advices as to low stocks are well nigh unanimous.

As before stated, conservatism is likely to be practiced in certain sections where crops fall short of earlier expectations.

Wheat, including flour exports from the United States and Canada for the week, total 7,042,180 bushels, against 3,545,134 bushels last year.

Buzzards Are Hookworm Carriers

New Orleans. — Despite the protest of Frank M. Miller, former head of the old conservation commission, against the action of the new commission in issuing a state-wide permit for the destruction of turkey buzzards, there seems to be no immediate prospects of the slaughter stopping, and the conservation commission, backed by an opinion of the attorney general and the support of sanitarians, is standing extremely pat in the matter. Dr. Sidney F. Porter, head of the hookworm commission, is a strong advocate of the destruction of the turkey buzzard. He says it is a carrier of hookworms.

Mystery in Theft of $26,000 Jewels.

Chicago.—The police faced a deep mystery in the theft of $26,000 worth of gems from a big downtown jewelry store. The thief, the police believe, intended to steal the sample case of William H. SYNOPSIS.

Comtesse Elise, daughter of the governor of the Mount, has chance encounter with a peasant boy. The "Mount," a small rock-bound island, stood in vast bay on the northwestern coast of France, and during the time of Louis XVI. was a government stronghold. Develops that the peasant boy was the son of Seigneur Desaurac, nobleman. Young Desaurac determines to secure an education and become a gentleman; sees the governor's daughter depart for Paris. Lady Elise returns after seven years' schooling, and entertains many nobles. Her Ladyship dances with strange fisherman, and a call to arms is made in an effort to capture a mysterious Le Seigneur Noir. He escapes. Lady Elise is caught in the "Grand" tide. The Black Seigneur rescues and takes her to his retreat. Elise discovers that her savior was the boy with the fish, Sanchez, the Seigneur's servant, is arrested and brought before the governor. Lady Elise has Sanchez set free. Seigneur and a priest at the "Cockles." Sanchez tells Desaurac that Lady Elise betrayed him, but is not believed. The Seigneur plans to release prisoners at the Mount. Lady Elise pleads with her father to spare the lives of condemned prisoners. Disguised as a peasant Lady Elise mingles with the people and hears some startling facts. A mysterious Mountebank starts a riot. He is arrested and locked up after making close observations of the citadel, and is afterwards summoned before the governor's daughter. The governor enters the room during the interview with the Mountebank. As a miserable buffoon, the Mountebank is released by order of the governor. Desaurac overpowers guard and dons soldier's uniform. The Seigneur successfully passes guards and finds the "Great Wheel." Jacques, the jailer, forced to tread the wheel and bring up enemies of the governor. The Black Seigneur liberates the prisoners.

CHAPTER XXIII—(Continued.)

The warning cry—a girl's voice—rang through the wheel-room; but the commandant did not at once heed it; at that abrupt touch he had involuntarily wrested his arm away; he stared, not in the direction she who had called out pointed, but at her! The white, drawn face, the eyes dilated—

"You, my Lady! Here?" he stammered.

But she only made a wild movement; again grasped, drew him forward.

"Quick, or—" And suddenly was he brought to a realization of what she wished him to see; a figure drawing itself along, slowly, painfully, toward the verge—

"Don't you see? Rather than be taken, he's going to throw himself over!"

The excited, admonishing sound of her voice aroused the commandant. He gave a sharp order and the soldiers sprang forward; laid roughly hold of the prostrate form; drew it back. The Black Seigneur yet struggled, but not for long! A moment, and his eyes turned to the Governor's daughter.

"Ma foi! I must needs yield—to your Ladyship! Yet, what matter, since I have done what I came to do!"

His gaze, darkly glowing, seemed to envelope the shrinking figure whose cloak only partly concealed the gay, rich gown beneath; lifted to the brilliant affrighted brown eyes. "Your Ladyship has bright eyes, forsooth!" An ironical laugh burst from his lips. "But sharper than their swords!" He strove to speak further, when a hand holding a weapon fell heavily. At that a cry escaped the girl's lips.

"No, no; you shall not!"

The Black Seigneur lay still.

"Ciel! It's fortunate we got him," ruefully the commandant gazed around. "It would have made a pretty tale, if—" he turned to the Governor's daughter, "I have your Ladyship to thank—" he began, and stopped.

My lady's figure had at that moment relaxed and fallen to the ground!

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Hall of the Chevaliers.

The report of the capture of the Black Seigneur spread from Mount to town; from rock to shore. Pilgrims repeated, peasants circulated it; many credited; a few disbelieved. Like shadows had his comrades and the escaped prisoners vanished, leaving no trace, save one—an over-turned car and severed rope at the foot of the poulain, without the fortifications. And flocking to that point, of greater interest now than shrine or sanctuary, the pilgrims gazed around; down the rocks; up the almost perpendicular planking to what looked like a mere pigeon-hole in the side of the cliff. Then ominous grumblings escaped them; some shook their fists at the black wall; others scoffed at distant sounds of priestly hallelujahs. Had the soldiers that day appeared in the town or on the beach, serious trouble would have ensued. For the time, however, they remained discreetly housed, while supplies for pilgrims' needs were, by the commandant's orders, so curtailed, many of the indigent multitude, urged by pinched stomachs, began, ere night, to wend their way from strand to shore. But as they left the vicinity of the Mount, they turned last looks of hatred toward the rock.

His Excellency, the Governor, wasted no time considering the humor of the masses; their resentment, or displeasure, signified nothing; his own complacency left little room for speculation on that score. He was undeniably satisfied; even the escape of the prisoners and the loss of the soldiers at the guard-house, or in the wheel-room, was over-shadowed by the single capture. This contentment, however, he kept to himself; instigated a rigorous inquiry, and prepared to punish certain offenders. But the principal of these he could not reach; when released from the iron cage, the hunchback, knowing he would be called upon to answer for his part in the night's work, had made the best use of his short legs to place a long distance between himself and the Mount.

The sentinel that allowed the Black Seigneur to pass through the entrance near the barracks; the watchman encountered on the stairway, and the soldier that had been overpowered in the stable, his Excellency could, however, lay hands on, and promptly ordered into custody to await his official attention. For this last culprit, the commandant—mindful, perhaps, of bolstering his own position—interceded; pointing out that the man had to get the gag from his mouth and give the alarm; also, that the mountebank's appearance and acting had been calculated to deceive even one of the governor's discernment. Which remark his Excellency had received with sphinx-like, and not altogether reassuring, gravity; had reserved his verdict, and continued, after his own fashion, to collect the details of the affair.

The searching process should have led him almost at once to his daughter—a puzzling figure in the maze of events; but the Governor had exhibited no haste in approaching that important witness. Only when he had marshaled his other testimony and put it in order did the scope of his sifting extend to the girl. And then had his manner been strictly judicial; maintaining an imperturbable mask, he professed not to notice the pallor of her face, the unnatural brightness of her glance.

"When you sent for the mountebank to come to your apartments, did you know who he was?" the Governor asked.

"No."

"When did you find out?"

"When you entered the room."

"Why did you not give the alarm then?"

"Because," she hesitated; her face changed, "he would have killed you, I think—if I had!"

"Was that solicitude for me the only reason?"

"Why, what other could there be?"

"What other, truly? And after he left with the commandant—why did you not, then, inform me?"

"You remember you had something important, from the King, to consider." hastily.

"More important than this?"

"He was going to be locked up," was the best reply she could make.

"And in the morning set free!"

She did not answer.

"And yet, you gave the word that enabled us to capture him at the wheel-house! How, by the way, came you there—in the wheel-house?"

"I saw him from the abbot's bridge; heard him tell the watchman he had a message to deliver at your palace, and followed."

"Again feeling solicitude for me?"

"I did not know—he would dare much; and what does it matter now?" almost wildly. "You have captured him, shut him up somewhere in some terrible, deep dungeon, where—"

"He is safe? True; that is the main consideration."

Thereafter had the subject of the Black Seigneur been dropped between them; the pilgrimage over, the Mount resumed its normal aspect, but only for a little while! One day about a week later, a bright cortege whose appearance was in marked contrast to that of the beggarly multitude, late visitors to the rock, came riding down through the forest to the sea; at the verge of the sands, stopped for a first distant impression of the rock.

"Noble monument, I salute you!" Smiling, debonair, the Marquis de Beauvilliers removed his hat.

"And the noble mistress thereof?" suggested one of his train.

"She, of course!" he said, still surveying a scene different from that final memory he had carried away with him. Then had the rock reared itself in all the glamour of a sunny day; now was the sky overcast, while through a sullen mist the Mount loomed like a shadow itself.

"A cold place for our gay Elise!" One or two who viewed the sight for the first time looked disappointed; even the Marquis appeared for the instant more sober; but immediately regained his lively demeanor.

"Wait until you have seen it at its best," he retorted carelessly, and set the pace across the sands.

Midway, where once on the sands the men of Brittany had engaged in fierce conflict the ancient abbot's forces, were the new-comers met by an imposing guard; escorted with due honor through the gates, and up the narrow street of the town.

As he climbed the winding highway, my lord, the Marquis, bestowed approving nod and smile this way and that; it may be that he already felt a nearer affiliation with these people; for his glance, gracious, condescending in passing, was that of a man armed with the knowledge that he, kinsman of the King, might some day be called upon to govern here. But to these advances, the townspeople responded ill, and the young noble's brow went delicately up, as if a little amused! Mon dieu! did not unfriendly eyes peer from every lurking place around the royal palaces and pleasure grounds near Paris; and had they not encountered them all the way to the sea? People were the same everywhere; must be treated like bad children, and, with relays of troops from the capital to the sea, from the strand to the Mount's high top, one could afford to smile at their petty humors. Above all, when one had more momentous matter for consideration! And my lord lifted his head higher, toward a rampart, where some one had once bid him au revoir, and where he might yet in fancy see a fluttering ribbon wave a bright adieu!

But today my lady, the Princess of the Rock, was not there; waited above, with her father, to receive him—then—in the great Hall of the Chevaliers. Until that morning she had not known of the coming of the Marquis, an impatient suitor, following the courier and the perfumed missive acquainting her with the noble's near approach. Certainly had she shown surprise; but whether she was pleased or not, his Excellency could not tell.

He was still uncertain; standing, near the raised gallery, in the ancient salle des chevaliers, from time to time regarded her furtively! Often had she looked from one of the round windows, commanding a view of the shore and the sands; many times turned away. At first sight of the company on the beach, the Governor had seen the girl's face alter and noted the involuntary start she had given. Whereupon, moving toward one of the giant fire-places, had he sought for the sake of diplomacy and the end in view, to turn their conversation into a channel that should have interested her; spoke of plans to be made; preparations for festivities and merrymaking commensurate with the circumstances. But to these suggestions of gaieties, the prelude to a stately ceremony, had she hardly listened; paused absently before the blazing logs; once or twice seemed about to say something and stopped.

She was silent now, a slender figure beneath that great canopy of stone designed for the shelter of a score of knights; nervously twining and intertwining her fingers, she looked out at the shadows moving between the columns, playing around the bases, or melting in the vaulting.

"They should be almost here now," observed his Excellency, again seeking to break that spell of constraint, when suddenly she stepped to him.

"Mon pere," her voice sounded strained, unnatural, "it was you who wanted this marriage?"

"Yes," he had answered in some surprise; "yes."

"And I have not opposed you—the King—"

"Opposed? No! Of course not!"

"Then," more hurriedly, "must you do something in return for me! I do not want my—the wedding festivities—marred by anything unpleasant! Promise that nothing will happen to him, the Black Seigneur, until after—"

"Impossible!" The sudden virulence her unexpected request awoke could not be concealed.

"Very well!" Before the anger in his gaze, her own eyes flashed like steel. "In that case, you can send the Marquis back! For I will not see him—today, tomorrow or any other time again!"

Long he looked at her; the white face; the tightly compressed lips; the eyes that would not flinch! They reminded him of another's—were of the same hue—so like, and yet so different! Unlike, in bespeaking a will he could not break! What he said, matters not; his face wore an ashy shade. She did not answer in words; but he felt, with strange bitterness, a revulsion; she seemed almost suddenly to have become hostile to him.

Gay voices sounded without; nearer; she walked to a door opposite the entrance their visitors were approaching. An instant, and she would have passed out, when the Governor spoke.

But the Marquis, stepping quickly in a few moments later, noted nothing amiss between them. "Your Excellency!" With filial respect he greeted the Governor. "My Lady!" Gaily, approvingly, his eye passed over her; then in that hall dedicated to chivalry, a graceful figure, he sank to his knee; raised a small cold hand, and pressed it to his lips.

CHAPTER XXV.

The Under World.

A coterie of brilliant folk soon followed in the wake of my lord, the Marquis' retinue; holy-day banners were succeeded by holiday ribbons; the miserere of the multitude by paeans of merriment. Hymen, Io Hymen! In assuming the leading role to which circumstances now assigned her, the Governor's daughter brought to the task less energy than she had displayed on that other occasion when visitors had sojourned at the rock. Her manner was changed—first, lukewarm; then, almost indifferent; until, at length, one day she fairly waived the responsibility of planning amusements; laid before them the question: What, now, would they like to do?

"Devise a play," said one.

"With shepherds and shepherdesses!"

The Marquis, however, qualified the suggestion. "A masque! that is very good; but, for this morning—I have been talking with the commandant—and have another proposal—"

"Which is?"

"To visit the dungeons."

"The dungeons?" My lady's face changed.

"And incidentally inspect their latest guest! Some of you heard of him when we were here before—Le Seigneur Noir—the Black Seigneur!"

"Le Seigneur Noir!" They clapped their hands. "Yes, let us see him! Nothing could be better. What do you say, Elise?"

She started to speak, but for the instant her lips could frame no answer; with a faint, strained smile, confronted him, when some one anticipated her repdy.

"Did she not leave it to us? It is we who decide."

And a merry party they swept along, bearing her with them; up the broad stairway, cold, gray in the morn; beneath the abbot's bridge—black, spying span!—to the church, and thence to the isolated space before the guard-house to the dungeons. Here, at the sound of their voices, a man, carrying a bunch of keys—but outwardly the antithesis to the hunchback—peered from the entrance.

"Unless I am mistaken, the new jailer!" With a wave of his hand, the Marquis indicated this person. "The commandant was telling me his Excellency had engaged one—from Bicetre, or Fort l'Eveque, I believe?"

"Bicetre, my lord!" said the man gravely. "And before that, the Bastille."

"Ah!" laughed the nobleman. "That pretty place some of the foolish people are grumbling about! As if we could do without prisons any more than without palaces! But we have come, my good fellow, to inspect this lower world of yours!"

The man's glance passed over the paper the Marquis handed him; then silently he moved aside, and unlocked the iron doors.

"Are you not coming?" At the threshold the Marquis looked back. When first they had approached the guard-house, involuntarily had the Governor's daughter drawn aside to the ramparts; now, with face half-averted, stood gazing off.

"Coming?" Surprised, the Marquis noted her expression; the fixed brightness of her eyes and her parted lips. "Oh, yes!" And turning abruptly, she hastened past him.

Would they have to be locked in?—the half-apprehensive query of one of the ladies caused the jailer at first to hesitate and then to answer in the negative. He would leave the doors from the outer room open, and himself await there the visitors' return. With which reassuring promise, he distributed lights; called a guardsman, familiar with the intricate underground passages, and consigned them to his care.

One of the gay procession, the Lady Elise stepped slowly forward; the guide proved a talkative fellow, and seemed anxious to answer their many inquiries concerning the place. The salle de la question? Yes, it existed; but the ancient torture devices for the "interrogatory ordinary" and the "interrogatory extraordinary" were no longer pressed into service; the King had ordered them relegated to the shelves of the museum. The cabanons, or black holes? Louis XI. built them; the carceres duri and vade in pace, however, dated from Saint Mauritius, fourth abbot of the Mount.

"And the Black Seigneur? How have you accomodated him?"

"In the petit exil; just to the left! We are going there now."

"I—am going back!" A hand touched the arm of the Marquis, last of the file of visitors, and, lifting his candle, he held it so that the yellow glimmer played on the face of the Governor's daughter. Her eyes looked deeper; full of dread, as if the very spirit of the subterranean abode had seized her. He started.

"Surely you, Elise, are not afraid?"

"I prefer the sunlight," she said hurriedly in a low tone. "It—it is not cheerful down here! No; do not call the guide—or let the others know. I'll return alone, and—wait for you at the guard-house."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

No Inducement to Become Engineers.

A resident of a small Kansas town one day called on Dean Marvin of the University of Kansas engineering school, after a visit to the forge room, and explained that he was desirous of hiring some young man, who was about to be graduated from the institution, as assistant in his general repair shop.

Dean Marvin explained that he didn't believe the job would appeal to any of the students, as they were all preparing themselves to be engineers.

"I don't know what they want to be engineers for," replied the visitor. "There's more engineers in the country now than there is engines to run."

Curious Accident.

A most curious accident occurred, recently, in Albany, N. Y., when a motorman lost control of a car going down a hill. When it reached Broad street it left the track, overturned and crashed into a three-story dwelling. Seven passengers and the motorman were injured, though none fatally. The car smashed into a bedroom, where a man, his wife and child were sleeping. They were showered with plaster and broken glass from the window, but were uninjured.

Practical Fashions

MISSES' DRESS.

In this model we have the simple yoke style, which is so becoming to all figures. The yoke in this case is square and fairly deep, with the balance of the waist, both front and back, gathered where it is attached. The sleeves are plain and the skirt is made with four gores, the panel effect being used in front and back, with gathers at the sides.

The dress pattern (6316)) is cut in sizes 14, 16 and 18 years. Medium size requires 4⅛ yards of 36-inch material.

To procure this pattern send 10 cents to "Pattern Department," of this paper. Write name and address plainly, and be sure to give size and number of pattern.

Keep Fences in Condition.

A New Jersey man, according to a decision of the state supreme court, must pay damages for the death of his neighbor's cow, which broke through the fence of a garden and ate enough green corn to cause its death. The farmer who lost the green corn was liable to damages, the court decided, because the fence should have been so constructed that the neighbor's cow could not have broken through.

What He Is Doing With It.

"My earning capacity has been doubled since I married."

"What are you doing with all your money?"

"With what money? I merely said my earning capacity had been doubled."

Two Opinions.

"I thought she exhibited verve and aplomb," said Mrs. Oldcastle.

"Did you?" replied her hostess. "Josiah said she had nerve, but was a peach."

AND BANNER.

UNION PUBLISHING CO.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.00.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

We are glad to learn that Gov. O'Neal has appointed Mr. W. P. Thompson of Mountain Creek as a commissioner to represent Alabama at the National Good Roads Convention at Knoxville, which meets on August 27, and remains in session for several days.

A movement is being agitated for the establishment of a U. S. Postoffice out at Lock 12 on Coosa river. This should be done as it would be a great convenience to the army of men employed on the works. At present they are served only by a Rural Route from Clanton which is very much inadequate for meeting the demands of the town of 1500 men who are there.

Another movement in the progressive career of Clanton which demands the support of every loyal citizen is the waterworks and Sewerage proposition. Anyone who has ever been in a city or town having a system of waterworks and sewerage cannot deny the myriads of aevantages afforded by the same. Those who have not seen the conditions in actual existance have only to make the slightest investigations to secure absolute convincing proof of its worth.

CRIMSON CLOVER.

Crimson clover is an annual soil building plant that can be grown on almost any soil in this county by sowing with the seed 200 to 500 lbs of moist top soil from where crimson, red, white, hop, or rabbit foot clover has grown successfully during the previous year. The use of the soil referred to above is to insure the inoculation, which any nitrogen gathering plant has to have to grow successfully.

Without inoculation crimson clover is almost a sure failure, but when the land is well inoculated it is a well paying crop.

Crimson clover may be sown between your corn, cotton or cow-pea rows at the rate of fifteen pounds per acre and harrowed in during September and the first half of October, or the land may be well plowed and harrowed till fine, and the seed sown and the harrow run lightly to cover the seed.

The crop may be used in many ways all of which are good. 1. It furnishes a good late winter and early spring clover crop. 2. It gathers nitrogen from the air and stores it in the roots. 3. It makes a pasture through March and April that can't be excelled. 4. When it is desired to use the crop for hay it can be saved early enough for the land to be planted to corn, cotton, or other crops. 5. When cut for hay the land is left in much better condition than when left bare all winter. 6. A good crop of crimson clover plowed under about April the 15th is worth a ton of 10-2-2 guano to the acre.

Malaria Will Get You If You Don't Watch Out.

How to Prevent and Get Rid of the Meanest, Most Sickening, Bone-Breaking, Nerve-Racking Torture That Drives People Nearly Mad.

There is Nothing Else to Take the Place of S. S. S.

In the wakeful dreams of malaria's victims, ten thousand demons are stalking with stone hammers, bludgeons, pitchforks, and other weapons, and it is high time to ward off any possible attack. Your only safeguard is that matchless, marvelous remedy, Swift's Sure Specific. This is the remedy that drives malaria back to the realm of darkness. Thousand say it is the world's greatest medicine. Throughout the country wherever malaria abounds are happy, joyful people to whom S. S. S. has brought the most wonderful recovery after the most sickening rture imaginable.

That tell-tale "cotton face," the pale, gaunt complegion of malaria's victims, the scrofulous skin eruptions, the chills and fever, enlarged spleen, the malarial dysentery that seems to defy all other treatment; those chronic malarial sores and ulcers that resist all medical skill until S. S. S. drives out the malaria; the malarial leg in which the legs swell as in elephantiasis; the enlarged liver; and the pernicious, persistent anemia where the blood turns to water and the system wastes away to a skeleton; these are the conditions that S. S. S. so wonderfully and so completely overcome and restore the blood to strong, virile health.

You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores at $1.00 a bottle. Take nothing else. Do not make the great mistake of your life by trifling with malaria. There is no other remedy like Swift's Sure Specific, for it is made of those things which nature, in her all-wise creation, has caused to grow and thrive as a healthful antidote in the highland region of the lowlands where is developed the death-dealing malaria germs. For special advice on how to overcome chronic malaria, quicly heal those terrible eruptions, get red blood into your circulation, energy into your muscles and vigor from head to foot, write the medical department of The Swift Specific Co., 130 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Do not allow any one to tell you they have something "just as good" as S. S. S. There are minds so small and mean that for the sake of a few extra pennies of profit they will actually endanger lives by trying to sell substitutes for the famous antidote S. S. S.

A LETTER FROM MR. BICE.

Dear Editor: The Banner a few weeks ago printed an article on the assurance of a high school in Clanton. I ...nks if the Commissioners of this ...unty have money to give for the support of schools, they should give it to ...e Rural schools where it is so much ...eeded. There are schools all over the ...unty where they can only have five, ...x or seven months school per year ...ecause of the lack of sufficient funds ...o run the school. Many of the boys ...nd girls of this county can never avail ...emselves of more schooling than ...ey can get in the Grammar school, ...d so there are two high schools in ...horsby one of more than eight years ...anding and the Unity Baptist High ...chool just about to open. It seems to ...e that the young people all over the ...unty could enter these schools if they ...uld afford the opportunity of a high ...hool education, and put the money ...e commissioners, the citizens, and ...e people who believe in education, ...ve into the high school already doing ...st class high school work. Our own ...wn can only aftord a seven months ...blic school because of the lack of ...nds. I will say at the outset that I ...n not altogether informed as to the ...orking of this school, but to the best my knowledge the citizens of Clan...n must raise ten thousand dollars to ...y lots and put up the high school ...ilding and then deed it to the state ...d the state has full control of the ...hool. You cannot have a teacher ...thout the consent of the State Board ...Education, and then the state only ...ves you three thousand dollars. ...ouldent it be a nice plan for the citi...ns of Clanton to take their ten thous...d dollars, elect trustees and build ...high school of their own and control themselves. But oh, how much ...sier it is to have the people follow ...ten strange God's. They do not have ...nfidence in each other, but let some ...eat schemer come along and make ...ings look fine on paper, and the peo...e are ready at once to take the matter ... It is a good thing to have high ...hools, but woe to the Chilton County ...mmissioners when they take the ...oples money and give to the propos... high school at Clanton, for there ...ll come a day when the dry bones of ...e valley will be shaken up. "Why ... I say this; because you want to make ...e rich richer and the poor poorer." ...fear the county papers speak one ...uld be led to believe that there was ... high school in Chilton county. I ...t to say through the columns of the ...per that there is a high school in ...ilton county and another about to ...en its doors to the boys and girls, ...d what has the county commissioners ...ne for it. Suppose the people of ...orsby had asked the county commis...ners for two or three thousand dol...s to aid their school: we would have ...en hooted at and nearly driven out the county. Suppose the Unity ...ptists should ask the county commis...ners for a few thousand dollars, they ...uld be told "depart from me I know ... not." But here comes O'Neal and ... crowd and says give ten thousand ...llars and I will give you three thous...d, and so you dance and they play ... fiddle. Now to make a long story ...ort, I believe in high schools and ...e acording to my ability to support ...h, but I am thoroughly opposed to ...ing the peoples' money to High ...ools and let the rural schools go ...wn. We need more money to run ... public schools all over this county. ...re are many young people who can ...ot avail themselves of a high school ...ucation. They must go to work after ...y get what they can from the rural ...ool, so let us increase the length of ... term of the public school. I feel ...fident that the people of Thorsby ...uld not be very cheerful over the ... of their taxes going to support a ...h school elsewhere, when the funds ... so much needed in their own town ... school purposes. I want to say to ... citizens of Clanton that if they want ...gh school let them have it, but keep ...r hands off the peoples pockets. ...y opinIon the State loads down the ...h Schools, the Normal Schools and ... Industrial Schools, but how much, ...me ask, do they give to the rural ...ools, where the parents of the boys ... girls get the benefit of it. Again, ...e say more money to the public ...ools. Give my boy or girl, your boy ...irl, an education up to and includ... the eighth grade, then if they can ... get more they can get through the ...ld and make a living; if they can ... go on to school after they have ...shed the eighth grade, all right, but ... must make the rural schools as ...cient as possible for those whose ...cation must stop there. I under...d from last week's Press that the ...or wished that other towns includ... Thorsby, would apply for the County ...h School. The editor of the Press ...t know that Thorsby has two high ...ols already, and don't ask the ...nty commissioners for one cent to... their support.

...ent just about such an article as ... to the Union a few weeks ago and ...formed that the prospects for the ...school had been blighted for this ... at least and none of the county ...ds would be used. I withdrew my ...cle on the basis of that information. ...m the reading of the Press it seems ... has not been dropped. Therefore ...sh the editor of the Union-Banner ...ublish this communication.

Yours very respectfully,
J. BICE,
Mayor of Thorsby.

THORSBY INSTITUTE

This school has established a reputation as a school of high standard, being well equipped and doing thorough work. The fall term opens on Tuesday, September 9th, with the following teaching force:

Principal, Rev. S. H. Herbert. Assistants, Miss Marian Knight, Miss Christena McIntyre, Miss Mae Sarles, Rev. E. W. Butler. Music, Miss Erva O. Finch. Matron and Domestic Science. Miss Elizabeth Hoopes. Chilton county citizens are fortunate in having an opportunity to send their boys and girls to a school of such high standard, with teachers trained in the best colleges and universities in the country. The expenses are low at this school. Already some of the boarding studedts are at the dormitory preparing for work, and the indications are that the coming session will be the most successful in the history of the institution.

THE BABY SHOW

On last Thursday evening the baby show was held at the court house under auspices of the Methodist Ladies Aid Society.

There were two prizes up, one for the most popular baby from one to two years old, and one for the most popular baby from two to five years old.

Mary Goodwyn Jones was the winner of the prize for the younger baby, getting a total of 135 votes. The next in the race was James H. Middleton, Jr., with a ballot of 62.

In the older baby contest the winner was William Pinckard, who polled 270 votes. The next in this race was Jesse Sam Gowan, with 255 votes.

In each contest the prize was a nice little ring. The Ladies Aid Society realized about $70 from the contest.

DIARRHOEA QUICKLY CURED.

"I was taken with diarrhoea and Mr. Yorks, the merchant here persuaded me to try a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. After taking one dose of it I was cured. It also cured others that I gave it to," writes M. E. Gebhart, Oriole, Pa. That is not at all unusual. An ordinary attact of diarrhoea can almost invariablyl be cured by one or two doses of this remedy. For sale by Upchurch Drug Co.

Clanton High School Opening

The 1913-14 session of the Clanton High School opened Wednesday morning. The occasion was attended by a number of the citizens of the town and about two hundred pupils reported for enrolimen. The prospects are that the school this year is exceptionally good.

The faculty is composed of Prof. J. J. Pickens, who is agaiu principal, and the following assistants:—Misses Corita Wilson, Ola Johnson, Gladys Wood, Lucile Gross. The music teacher has not yet been definitely decided upon.

All in all, the faculty, is a strong one and great success for the school is predicted.

NOTICE

The Chilton county division of the F E. and C. U. of A. will meet with Culp Local No. 894 at Fairview school house eight miles south-west of Clanton on Thursday and Friday, September 18-19, 1913. Those coming by rail will get off at Clanton where you will be met by conveyance by writing W. O. Durbin, Clanton Route 3. The speakers for public session will be L. M. Duncan, J. B. Hobdy, Mrs. B. I. Robinson of Auburn and R. F. Kolb of Montgomery. The first day will be public.

Yours in the work,
J. M. Smith,
County Secretary.

Simply Human

We get a tinge of rheumatism, a headache, a crick in the neck, a bad cold, and all of those human ills, occasionally, just like other folks.

We are not boasting of it, but simply make mention of it here, because we are sometimes regarded only as a monster of steel rails, wood cross ties, roaring engines and swiftly moving coaches.

We have hopes and ambitions, dreams and disappointments, plans and determination, just like you and your neighbor a mile or two down the road.

Among our plans is one to see the territory traversed by the L. & N. developed practically into what it is naturally—the most productive anywhere in the world.

To do this we must have the help of the people, and to get the help of the people we must help the people.

We have organized a corps of the best experts known to agriculture and science. They are men of wide information, practical experience and demonstrated ability. They are retained by the L. & N. to help the people who have ambition and determination. Their services are free—It is an investment we are making in future increase in productivity—We know you can raise more on the same acreage you are now working. If you raise more, we haul more—we both prosper. It's a fair proposition, and we ask you to join in.

After you have raised more on the same acreage, you will want your crops gathered and marketed. We can be of assistance to you in both lines of work. Our experts know a lot about economy in harvesting, and our road supplies the finest equipment and fastest service for transporting your crops from the field to the markets of the world.

The L. & N. is going to keep on working constructively. It does not believe the people are bad, nor does it believe the country is going to have any serious setback. Let us all work together for the common good.

DARBYS FLUID

PREVENTS AND CURES

HOG CHOLERA

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

Pen up your hogs when cholera is in the neighborhood. For each ten hogs put one quarter of a bottle of Darbys Fluid in the daily supply of water. Clean out troughs every day before watering. Do not feed slop or any liquid food. Feed moderately on chops or other light stuff. Continue this treatment for two weeks, you can then turn your hogs out;—they are insured against cholera.

READ THE PROOF.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

This is to certify that we have used Darbys Fluid for the prevention and cure of Hog Cholera. Last summer we used it on fifty head of hogs and we lost only nine. These nine consisted of a brood sow and litter of eight pigs. We believe we could have saved the entire herd had we started using Darbys Fluid earlier.

GANTT BROS. STORE CO., Little River, Ala.

GENTLEMEN:—

Hogs were dying of Cholera by the thousand in my neighborhood They had it all around me but I saved all mine by putting Darbys Fluid in their drinking water and not letting them have any water without Darbys Fluid in it. Its a great preventive. I keep it on hand all the time. Its good for a hundred purposes.

J. A. STANALAND, Pidcock, Ga.

DARBYS FLUID has many uses about the household. It destroys germs or bad odors about the house and purifies the air of living or sleeping rooms. It heals wounds, sores, cuts or galls on human or animal flesh. It is a fine addition to the bath for cleansing the body or feet of disagreeable odors. If used in the water for brushing the teeth it sweetens the breath. As a disinfectant for the sick-room in contagious diseases and for safe-guarding the health of the family when such diseases are prevalent in the neighborhood it is worth it weight in gold.

HER EXPERIENCE QUITE EXPENSIVE

Gives Out Some Interesting Facts Regarding Her Troubles, and How She Avoided Further Expense.

Pineview, Va.—Mrs. Cora Brooks, of this town, writes as follows: "I suffered for about three years with womanly trouble, and was getting worse and worse all the time.

I had two good doctors and I was sent to two good hospitals to be operated on, but no operating was done.

All this cost me lots of money, and I was no better off than before I started.

Finally I began to take Cardui, the woman's tonic. After taking six bottles, the pains are all gone, and I feel like a new woman entirely. I am now able to do all the housework for myself, husband and five children, with ease. Before taking Cardui, I was in bed seven weeks at a time, not able to do anything at all.

I cannot praise Cardui enough for what it has done for me."

There are thousands of women who have been benefited by taking Cardui, the woman's tonic, and there are thousands who are suffering from some form of womanly trouble—suffering for the lack of Cardui.

Are you of this number? If so, don't delay, but begin taking Cardui to-day. What it has done for so many others, it should surely do for you. At your drug store.

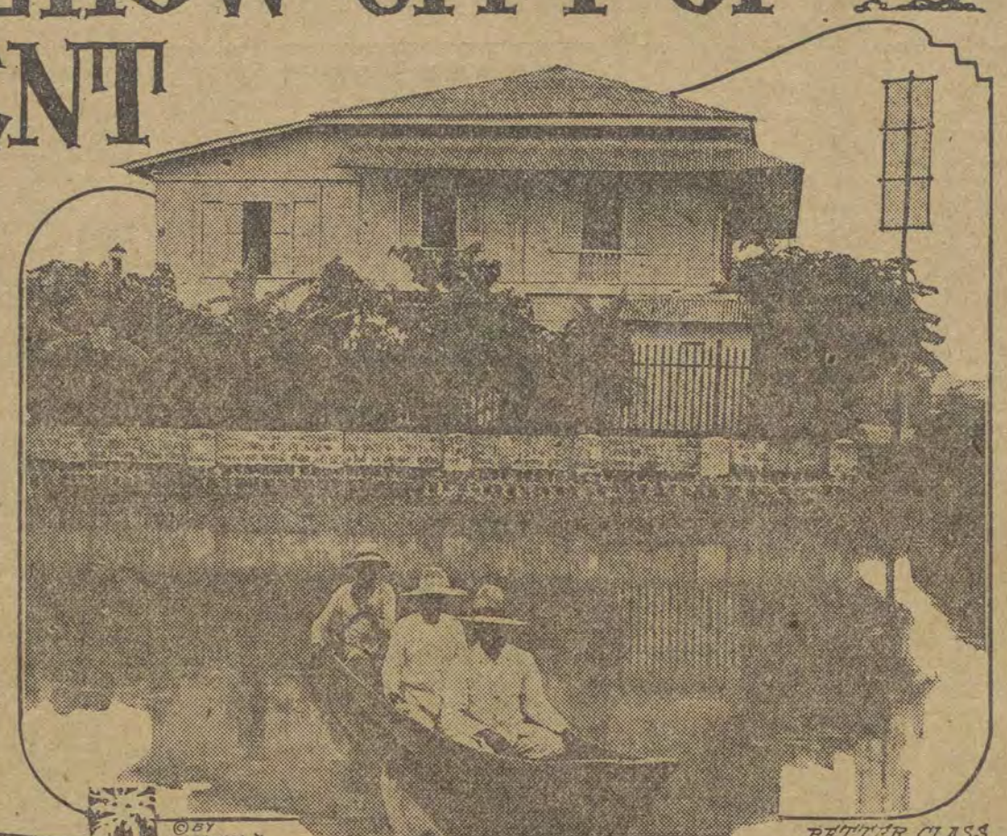
MANILA, SHOW CITY OF THE ORIENT



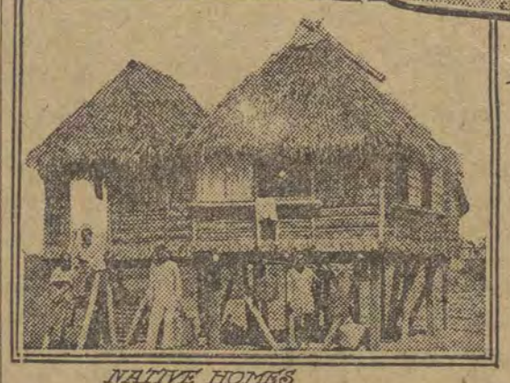
BETTER CLASS SPANISH HOUSE AT MANILA

THERE can be no doubt that Manila is—at least for Americans—about the most interesting place in the world. The old and the new, the obsolete and the advanced, the historic and history in the making can nowhere be found in more contrast. The massive and picturesque walls of the old Spanish city are fortunately intact, though a dozen years ago many Filipinos would gladly have seen them banished with the Spanish flag. The unwholesome mediaeval moat, however, has been filled up and turned into the first Philippine public playground. Vast swampy malarial tracts have been reclaimed and made into parks beautiful with tropical foliage and flowers and every evening enlivened by the music of good Filipino bands.

Solid waterfronts and valuable building sites have also been created. Fine bridges and fine roads have come into existence as by magic and clean streets put to shame some of the boasted cities of the Occident. While the climate is a continual summer, the healthiness of Manila is now proverbial. It is called the healthiest city in the Orient, and has been made so by unremitting care, such as sending inspectors twice a week to look after conditions, and even in many private houses to disinfect drains. In parts of the city still unsewered refuse is carried away in tight receptacles and burned, receptacles and all. The utilizing of such refuse for fertilizers is impracticable as the dreaded amoeba which lurks in the soil is stimulated into activity by impurities.

The "walled city" keeps its mediaeval character, though such of its denizens as cholera, smallpox, leprosy, plague and fever have been routed. One delights in the picturesqueness of the old, narrow, tortuous streets with their low, wide spreading buildings, shut in courtyards and blind entrances, irregular arches and gables, balconies and small barred windows, crooked outside stairs and useless turrets. A modern air is given to some of the palatial residences by enclosed gardens, but there are few, gardens seeming to have been much less prized by the Latins than they are by recent comers. In other parts of the town most livable homes of all grades have multiplied apace, open all around to air, each with its palm-shaded garden and its broad verandas draped with flowering vines and hanging ferns and orchids.

In the business streets pretentious shops are close neighbors to Chinese or Japanese tiendas looking like nothing but big packing boxes open to the sidewalk, the wares kept neatly folded on shelves along the sides, while a front shelf affords repose for the cigarette-smoking proprietor or proprietress when not molested by custom.



NATIVE HOMES

The city's busy traffic, its air of life and stir suggest little of the "sweet do nothing" of the torpid east. Smart automobiles and auto trucks share right of way with countless one-pony two-wheel calesas and carts drawn by the wide-horned, small-necked, amphibious caribaos or water buffaloes.

Then men of all classes wear white duck, but the gay, flowing costumes of the Filipino women give plenty of color, to say nothing of the pretty frocks from across the seas.

The water thoroughfares present activities and contrasts not less striking than those of the land. The harbor is often crowded with liners, war vessels, transports, cutters, cruisers, sailing ships, yachts and it, as well as the river and its canals, swarms with long, quaint scows, called cascos, laden with rice or hemp, corn or cocoanuts, bananas, bread fruit, small green, ripe oranges and many other fruits and vegetables. There are fishing craft of a hundred fantastic shapes and bearing sails of umber or carmine dye.

When it comes to buildings, it is hard to credit 1901 or thereabout as the date when American architects and builders first set to work in Manila. It would seem that an Aladdin spell must have helped the work along. In no ill accord with the old Spanish churches, stands the dignified American cathedral, Bishop Brent's, and other and simpler churches neither encroah upon nor are belittled by churches of the old order.

The Manila hotel is called the completest and most artistic hotel of the east. It is young, but does not show its age. It will soon celebrate its second birthday.

There are in Manila five excellent hospitals of American make, including the Mary Johnson home and the Tuberculosis hospital in a high-lying suburb. Strange to say, there is as yet no insane asylum, a lack, as can easily be understood, that often causes peculiar hardship and suffering.

There are homelike pensions under Methodist management for girls and for boys who come as students from the provinces and who would otherwise lead but a makeshift existence. Presbyterians and others carry on helpful church activities.

Bilibid prison, as it has been evolved during the past eight years, challenges the attention, study, admiration and imitation of all lands. And in connection with it should be studied the self-governing penal agricultural settlement on the Island of Palawan, which has already proved a notable success.

ESCALTA STREET, MANILA

The army and constabulary quarters are models of their kind. The building of the Young Men's Christion association in Manila and the one at Fort McKinley, donated by Helen Gould, are perfect in their equipment. There are clubs aplenty. The stranger asks, What is this or that fine structure? The answer may be, such or such a municipal building. Yonder is one for medical research. That is the headquarters for public works. There is the plant for the public water supply, and there is the ice plant.

The Ayuntamiento, the old Spanish capitol building, is now used for the Philippine assembly and for the government offices. Its commodious hall is the center of interest, as it is there that the laws are made for the islands and their finances regulated. Eighty Filipinos form the assembly, which may be described as corresponding to our lower house. The "commission," which is at once senate and cabinet, consists of four men from the islands and five from the states, including the governor-general and the vice-governor. Several of these men are heads of departments. All bills passed in the assembly must be ratified by the commission in order to become laws. The upper chamber has the power of veto. But this function is usually exercised in the less drastic form of laying on the table questionable measures—and leaving them there.

It goes without saying that as Americans have charge of things there are schools galore. In these, throughout the islands, 600,000 pupils are gathered. Now all schools, including the parochial, the Jesuit and those of other religious orders, are under government supervision as regards the standard of scholarship. The schools are all embracing, from the university to the kindergarten, including state, church, mission, boarding, charity, industrial, trade and normal; even schools for the blind and the deaf and dumb and, by no means least, for the training of nurses.

Manila depends much for its interest and fascination upon the native nipa dwellings seen on every hand. They are scattered, keeping up the ever present note of contrast, among the modern houses, or huddled, almost touching each other, on the poorest lands or lined along miles of road in suburban barrios. Nipa is a coarse dwarf palm of which the Filipino makes anything, from a string or a basket to the house he lives in. Like all thatched construction the nipa cottage is wonderfully picturesque. As a rule it is raised on posts eight or ten feet above the often damp or marshy ground, and thus affords a shelter for chickens, goats and even pigs and ponies. When these cottages are, as is more and more the case, clean in their surroundings, and have the shade of cocoanut palms, broad-leaved bananas or plumy bamboos, with the blaze among them of a brilliant fire tree or the bloom of a lovely habiscus, the effect is of a finished picture. This is heightened at dusk as lights appear inside the unglazed windows and tiny gypsy fires are lighted under the house to cook the "unpolished" rice, with possibly a bit of cheap fish, for supper. The pot is often watched by a man and woman, wizened before their time, squatting on their heels, each smoking the perpetual cigarette. The woman is apt to be holding, always tenderly, the smallest of half a dozen nearly naked children. The man with no less care fondles a docile but spurred game cock. Fields for manly sport are slowly rivaling the cockpit with its ruinous idleness and betting. The Filipino women have always shared the passion for gambling with their men, to the hurt of the family and its earnings. Many of them are now learning embroidery. They do it well and find it even more interesting than cock fights or cards or craps.

LOOKING FROM CORREGIDOR TO CABELLO ISLAND

A visitor is lucky who comes upon one of the tidier cottages and espies a youth with scarlet trousers and bare bronze torso tumming a sort of guitar for the benefit of a nut-brown maid at the window above the stilts. She has delicate features and bright eyes and a long and strikingly graceful neck, and a mass of smooth, glossy, jet black hair hangs below her waist over her gay balloon-sleeved bodice and folded panuelo, or kerchief. One waits, half expecting to see a chorus emerge from the flowery background and break into dance or song. But, alack! such romantic illusions are rare and fleeting. The reality that stays is homely and hard and sometimes tragic.

Manila is beautiful for situation. The bay to the west is as blue as the Mediterranean and the splendor of the sunsets is beyond telling. Sometimes nothing is to be seen but luminous sky and water. Then of a sudden there appear as if just created the scalloped hills of the distant coast beyond the long low peninsula of Cavite, formerly, and still to some extent, used as a naval station. The fortified island of Corregidor, soft and dim on the horizon, stands in reality a veritable armed Titan to guard the narrow entrance of the vast bay. Close beside it the lovely mountain of Maribeles suggests an earthly paradise, but in fact it is the unfriendly abode of the Negritos, a race resembling the pigmies of Africa.

Beyond on other shores and on other islands of the vast Philippine archipelago are other races unclaimed, untamed, unchristian. Among them, most dreaded by foreigners and natives, are the fanatical, treacherous, fierce Mohammedan Moros.

As we look at the work in Manila and throughout the Philippines during the last ten years we feel that America has made here its finest mark—the finest and fairest, it is not too much to say, made by any western people in any eastern colony. But it has not done enough. Nor would it have done enough if the material benefits bestowed were immeasurably greater. Altruism has still its most potent part to play, its most immitigable demands to meet. There is need of more American missionaries, wise, consecrated, tactful. There are such men and women already at work in the provinces—teachers, doctors, instructors in manual industry and in farming—uplift workers, who are at the same time evangelists. And there are those who give themselves wholly to preaching and to pastoral work. Of all this service it would be a joy to tell if space allowed. But we owe a far larger ministry to bodies and minds, and above all to souls that consciously or unconsciously are feeling after God if haply they may find him.

SHOULD SCORE A HOME.

"A Man, My Son."

The fellow who acquires the physical strength to handle a big plow and to manage a mule; who learns to love an honest furrow; who gets the moral courage to kill grass, in spite of the shade trees that invite him, and who can be patient, realizing that he is becoming, day by day, a real man, has a thousand things more to thank God for than the fellow who hasn't the physical strength to carry a walking cane unless one end of it is in his mouth; who hasn't learned to draw a line without a straight edge to go by; who hasn't the moral courage to get out of bed before 10 a. m., and who is impatient because he thinks the "governor" is too hard on him.—Atlanta Constitution.

Eliminating Mr. and Mrs.

A correspondent of the London Daily Citizen suggests that the unnecessary and unpleasing prefix "Mr." should be eliminated from the superscription of letters. The deprivation of this prefix was one of the penalties enforced in our American colonies during the seventeenth century. The records of Massachusetts show that in 1680 Josias Plaistowe was condemned "for stealing four baskets of corn from the Indians, to return them eight baskets again, to be fined £5, and hereafter to be called Josias, not Mr., as he used to be." The Massachusetts penal code also provided for docking women of the prefix of Mrs., but there is no record of this clause having been enforced.

LIGHT BREAKS IN

Thoughtful Farmer Learns About Coffee.

Many people exist in a more or less hazy condition and it often takes years before they realize that tea and coffee are often the cause of the cloudiness, and that there is a simple way to let the light break in.

A worthy farmer had such an experience and tells about it, in a letter. He says:

"For about forty years, I have had indigestion and stomach trouble in various forms. During the last 25 years I would not more than get over one spell of bilious colic until another would be upon me.

"The best doctors I could get and all the medicines I could buy, only gave me temporary relief.

"Change of climate was tried without results. I could not sleep nights, had rheumatism and my heart would palpitate at times so that it seemed it would jump out of my body.

"I came to the conclusion that there was no relief for me and that I was about wound up, when I saw a Postum advertisement. I had always been a coffee drinker, and got an idea from the ad. that maybe coffee was the cause of my trouble.

"I began to use Postum instead of coffee and in less than three weeks I felt like a new man. The rheumatism left me, and I have never had a spell of bilious colic since.

"My appetite is good, my digestion never was better and I can do more work than before for 40 years.

"I haven't tasted coffee since I began with Postum. My wife makes it according to directions and I relish it as well as I ever did coffee, and I was certainly a slave to coffee."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Write for copy of the little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled.

Instant Postum—a soluble powder.

A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with the addition of cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly.

"There's a reason" for Postum.

J. B. Harter, chief of police at Allendale, S. C., was shot to death at Lena, a short distance from that city. A. L. Walker is confined in the Hampton county jail, charged with the killing. While the tragedy occurred on the platform of the railway station, there were no witnesses, and as Walker refused to make a statement, nothing is known as to how or why Harter was killed.

The appearance of the boll weevil in Georgia has been reported by Walter Green and F. M. Gay, Quitman county farmers, who have big plantations across the river from Eufaula, Ala. The weevil has been found in different spots and is said to be spreading fast.

How two Mecklenburg county girls cleared $233 on one-fifth of an acre by raising and selling tomatoes was told by Miss Margaret Brown, aged 15 years, to 1,500 farmers and more than 300 housewives at Raleign, N. C., in annual convention. Miss Brown said she donned overalls and tended her crop.

James Comeaux, a negro, was lynched by a mob at Jennings, La. He was taken from his cell in the jail sometime after midnight, shot to death and his body left lying at the jail door where it was found later by a night watchman. Comeaux had been arrested for assaulting A. W. Joseph, an Italian merchant, who had accidentally swept dirt on the negro's shoes while he was passing the Italian's store.

Twenty-one people were injured in a wreck of a mixed train on the Buckingham branch of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, near Breno. The train was derailed by spreading rails and the passenger coach and three freight car loadsd with lumber rolled over a 20-foot embankment. The lord high chancellor, whose position in England corersponds to that of chief justice of the Supreme court of the United States, is here as a guest of the American Bar Association, before which he will deliver an address at its annual meeting in Montreal. He was entertained at a dinner given in behalf of the association by C. A. Severance of St. Paul. His itinerary includes visits to West Point and Albany.

J. I. Scheneck, editor of the Sulphur Democrat, Sulphur, Okla., was shot and killed, and John Lindsay, the former treasurer of Murray county, is charged with the killing. Murray was hurried from the Sulphur jail to the more secure prison at the nearby town of Norman, when mob violence was threatened. Lindsay opened fire on Scheneck with a shot gun when the editor refused to "eat" a copy of his paper which contained adverse editorial comment concerning Lindsay.

Joseph D. Hulladay, editor of the Japan Advertiser of Tokio, who has arrived in Boston, Mass., says that the poor and uneducated classes of Japan are eager for war with the United States, but that the educated and aristocratic Japanese want to wait for ten years before declaring war against Uncle Sam.

Picking up loose money has grown to be such a hardship for the overworked rural free delivery carrier that the postoffice department has issued an order warning reckless citizens against leaving loose coins lying around. Hereafter coins must be tied in bundles or enclosed in envelopes whenever the patron on a rural route wants stamps from a carrier and leaves the necessary amount in the wayside box.

Bankers from many states are in Kansas City, Mo., to attend the annual meeting of the committee on agricultural development and education of the American Bankers association. It is expected forty states will be represented by about two hundred and fifty delegates. The program calls for discussions of all matters affecting the raising and marketing of the crops, good roads, better farming methods and vocational education. George Woodruff of Joliet, Ill., is to report the results of an investigation of the farm credit system in Germany, France and other European countries.

Prof. Lewis Sambon, the head of the School of Tropical Medicines in London, and a recognized authority on pellagra, who has arrived in New York City, left for Spartanburg, S. C., where he will lecture before the conference being held there to study pellagra.

The last remaining barrier at the Pacific end of the Panama canal has been blown out by dynamite. It was an intensely interesting spectacle. At exactly 9:30 o'clock an electric switch was turned on and the fifteen hundred spectators were rewarded by a wonderful sight. Hundreds of tons of mud and stone were thrown high in the air and the thunderous roar of the explosions re-echoed in the nearby hills.

That General Bravo, federal commander at Torreon, Mexico, refused to recognize the United States consular agent when he protested against the execution of six Americans in that city, is the declaration of the three Americans, Frank and Milton Chisum and Andrew O'Dell, who arrived at Piedras Negras, "constitutionalist" headquarters, from Torreon. Bravo told them: "Your government does not recognize the government of Mexico, and I shall not recognize you."

The fourth international congress on school hygiene has adopted resolutions recommending a thorough medical inspection in all public schools and the use of discarded battleships as open air schools. The congress states it is convinced that the open air school is one of the most powerful agents in the prevention and cure of tuberculosis in childhood.

The Republican congressional committee organized and outlined its general plans for the coming campaigns. Representative F. P. Woods of Iowa was elected chairman. He announced that the committee's work from now on would be in furnishing information to the voters of the country.

Mrs. Frank Storck retains possession of her husband's home in the fashionable residential section of Redbank, New Jersey, after a fight made to dispossess her, in which three persons were shot, four injured by blows, an eighth broke his ankle and Mrs. Storck herself was thrown through a window and rendered unconscious when she fell on her head on the sidewalk. Storck, a piano dealer, divorced his wife last month. She has since frustrated his efforts to force her to leave his residence here. He organized a raiding party.

Thousands of curios that had been gathered in many lands and stacked high in the apartments of Hipolito Uriate, for fifty years a Spanish consul, fed a fire kindled in lighting a cigar, and blocked the way of the aged diplomatist and his wife to safety in New York City. Uriarte was found dead leaning across a window sill, his wife, Marie Louise, mistook a window leading to an air shaft for one opening on a fire escape and then plunged four stories to her death. Mr. Uriarte was 82 years old. For fourteen years he was Spanish consul in New York City.

Miss Jessie Wilson, daughter of President Wilson, while riding near Plainfield, N. H., was thrown from her horse and lay unconscious for more than half an hour on the roadside. She is not hurt seriously.

Washington.

Congressional leaders declare that President Wilson's vigorous assertion of a definite policy toward Mexico would have the effect of staying in congress for a time at least, open criticism of the administration. Those who discussed the message agreed in the general statement that it presented a frank and full statement as to the recent negotiations with the Huerta government, and, at the same time, definitely outlined the American policy for the future. Republicans joined with Democrats in the endorsement of the president's utterances.

Without comment Frederico Gamboa, the Mexican minister of foreign affairs, presented to the standing committee of the Mexican congress all the facts in the controversy between Mexico and the United States. Senator Gamboa insists that the negotiations are not entirely concluded, but should they be, it is probable that soon the entire affair will be regarded as a closed incident. The congressmen in discussing the notes freely commended the action of the Mexican government, and that small portion of the public which is cognizant of the character of that action was loud in its praise of what is characterized as the patriotic and dignified attitude of the Mexican administration.

Secretary McAdoo has announced the apportionment as far as it had been completed of the $50,000,000 to be deposited by the government in national banks of the West and South to facilitate the movement and marketing of crops. The total amount allotted to date is $46,500,000, of which $21,800,000 goes to banks in the thirteen Southern states and the District of Columbia, and $24,700,000 to the fourteen Western states. The Southern banks have asked that their share of the funds be deposited in August and September

Bolling H. Jones was nominated by President Wilson for Atlanta's postmaster. Exactly when Mr. Jones will take charge of the office, relieving Hugh L. McKee, incumbent, is not known. After Mr. Jones' nomination has been confirmed, it will be up to him to make the bond required by the department, that bond now being one hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars, and which he will have no trouble in supplying. His commission will be sent him from the postoffice department at Washington, after which his next step will be to take charge of the Atlanta office.

CHOSE LESSER OF TWO EVILS

Theatrical Manager, Cornered, Yielded Passes When Threatened With a Distressing Affliction.

A poet with a precious scrap-book of his own writings under his arm wandered by a theater, when suddenly the idea struck him that he would like to see a play that night, so entering the place he asked for the press agent. That gentleman was out, but the manager was in. He was ushered in, and the deus ex machina inquired his business. "I would like two seats for tonight," faltered the man of verse. "An' who might you be?" asked the manager. The poet mentioned his name. "Um, yes," smiled the other, "I've heard of you, but why should I give you seats?" The bard murmured something about courtesy to the press, and added that probably identification might be necessary, so, as he had a scrap-book of his published poems, he would be glad if— But the manager cut him short, and calling out to his secretary to make out a couple of passes for that night, said: "My dear sir, I'd rather give you the whole house than read your poems!"

DEEP CRACKS ON JOINTS

P. O. Box 378, El Paso, Texas.—"My trouble began December, 1911. It commenced on me by causing a scurf-like skin and my toe joints, finger joints and lips commenced to crack and split open. My finger cracks would bleed all day long; the cracks were very deep and my thumb seemed to be cracked to the bone. My hands were so bad that I had to sleep with gloves on. The cracks in my lips would bleed often during the day and I used to put adhesive plaster across them to try to keep them closed. My toes would bleed, and I would find blood in my socks when the day's work was done. The skin around the cracks was red and inflamed. I wore shoes one size too large on account of my feet being so sore. I used to become frantic with pain at times. My hands and feet used to smart.

"I suffered agony for four months. I went to town and got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment. From the time I commenced with the Cuticura Soap and Ointment until completely cured was just nineteen days." (Signed) Jack Harrison, Nov. 19, 1912.

Revolt Suppressed.

She was giving orders at express rate, for they were married; and he, as a rule the most meek and submissive of men, was, like the proverbial worm, beginning to turn.

"Do you think," he inquired, "that you rule the whole of the universe?

"No," she snapped; "but I rule the first letter of it."

"Oh, yes, indeed. She is most kind and considerate, but she makes us know our place."

Nest on a Sheep's Back.

An extraordinary story of a starling's nest on a sheep's back comes from Bideford, England, and is told by the Pall Mall Gazette. During sheep shearing operations on Gournwood farm one of the shearers cut into a fleshy substance, and examination showed that he had cut in half a young starling, which was in a nest that had been built in the sheep's wool, and which contained two other fledglings still alive. The nest was composed of moss and twigs. For some weeks previous to the shearing the sheep, with the others, had the run of three fields near the farm.

ELIXIR BABEK A GOOD TONIC
And Drives Malaria out of the System.
"Your 'Babek' acts like magic; I have given it to numerous people in my parish who were suffering with chills, malaria and fever. I recommend it to those who are sufferers and in need of a good tonic."—Rev. S. Szymanowski, St. Stephen's Church, Perth Amboy, N. J. Good Logic.

Little Gertrude, of five summers, had been living with her grandparents for some time. One morning she asked permission to go and spend the day at the home of a friend, when grandma refused to let her go that day, consoling her by saying that she could go tomorrow. The next morning found Gertude up bright and early, happy in the expectation of the promised visit. Shortly after breakfast she reminded grandma of her promise,, when she was again told that she would be obliged to postpone her visit until tomorrow. Looking up quickly, her black eyes flashing with disappointment, she said:

"Well, grandma, I thought today was tomorrow; you said it was yesterday."—Mack's National Monthly.

Would Make It Right.

He was an ardent lover, an Irish lover and a practical penniless lover. It was St. Patrick's eve and in his hand he bore a pot of real Irish shamrock.

"They were raised on the oul sod," he said, as he presented the pot to Biddy, "raised on the ould sod of Ireland."

"Sure, now, Murphy," cried his lady in delight, "how really sweet of ye. How perfect they are and how fresh. Sure, I do believe that there's a little dew on 'em yet."

Murphy flushed slightly. "Begorra, I know there is," reluctantly confessed Murphy, "but praise heaven it'll be paid tomorrow."

Her Brother's Voice.

Little Faith was possessed of a most friendly disposition, but had not yet reached the age where she could understand the silence that may wrap itself around a wordless intimacy. In fact, she demanded speech, frequent and loving.

One night her brother was studying most assidulously his arithmetic lesson, and after calling to him several times without receiving an answer, she appealed to her father.

"George is busy," said father.

"I know," replied Faith, "but he might at least have said, 'Shut up.'"

Woman's Place.

Woman's place may be the home, but, judging from recent statistics, she seems to have deliberately ignored that fact, for there are 239,077 stenographers, 327,635 teachers and professors, 481,159 in various trades, 770,055 engaged in agricultural pursuits, 7,355 physicians and surgeons, 7,395 clergy "men," 2,193 journalists, 1,037 designers, draughtsmen and architects, 1,010 lawyers and 429,497 women in various professions.—Baltimore Sun.

PUT A KINK IN HIS PLANS

Awful Contingency Youth Had Not Foreseen In His Laying Out of the Future.

Eleven-year-old Tommy has quite decided opinions as to the duties of fathers to their little boys. The other day he was describing to his mother the sort of father he intends to be when he grows up.

"I'm going to be the best father to my boys. I'm going to play marbles with them and baseball and everything they want me to and I'll give them dimes 'most every day and tell them they can buy all the ice cream they want, and I'll get them each a pony, and well, my boys'll have lots of fun."

Tommy's mother with a twinkle in her eye said: "But, Tommy, what if you shouldn't have any little boys, what if your children are all girls!"

Such a possibility never entered Tommy's head. The suggestion was appalling. A look of blank dismay passed over the child's face.

"Gee! that would be the dickens!" he ejaculated.

WOMAN IN TERRIBLE STATE

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Bellevue, Ohio.—"I was in a terrible state before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My back ached until I thought it would break, I had pains all over me, nervous feelings and periodic troubles. I was very weak and run down and was losing hope of ever being well and strong. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I improved rapidly and today am a well woman. I cannot tell you how happy I feel and I cannot say too much for your Compound. Would not be without it in the house if it cost three times the amount."—Mrs. CHAS. CHAPMAN, R. F. D. No. 7, Bellevue, Ohio.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has remedied many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and it may be exactly what you need.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of woman—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

The people of Thorsby are forming a company for the purpose of building a warehouse.

A good investment at present would be the building of several houses to rent. Many are coming to our town to find a house and have to leave without one.

Sunday evening J. Sterling Moran spoke at the Congregational church on Y. M. C. A. work, which was very interesting.

Last Thursday night the Red Men of this town called on Mr. Armstrong to address the public on the Fraternalism of the Improved Order of Ren Men. The tribe of Thorsby entertained loyally. They furnished ice cold lemonade and a hot room. Mr. Armstrong's address was fine, and he well deserved the applauds. A good crowd of Red Men and white men were out, as well as many ladies. We extend an invitation to the Red Men to entertain us again in like manner.

BRUTAL MURDER AT LOCK NO. 12

White Man is Butchered by Unknown Parties in Camps of the Alabama Power Company.

W. M. Gray a white man whose home was in North Carolina, and who was employed as a carpenter at Lock 12, was murdered on Saturday night about 11 o'clock, in the camps of the Alabama Power Company for whom he was working.

When he was attacked by the parties who killed him he was heard to scream for help, but when others reached the scene he was dead, and the perpetrators had disappeared in the darkness.

Gray received two stabs under the left arm, and his throat was cut. The cuts were so fatal that he must have died instantly after they were inflicted.

The body of the dead man was brought to Clanton Sunday evening and embalmed, and afterward sent to his relatives in North Carolina.

Raymond Furgerson and Jesse Kannedy, the latter a woman and both negroes, were committed to jail in Clanton charged with the murder.

Chilton County Medical Society

Met at Mountain Creek on Last Wednesday and Discussed Various Ideas,

The Chilton County Doctors composing the Medical Society of this County, met at Mountain Creek and discussed matters pertaining to their profession. The Doctors had an interesting discussion in which Drs. T. J. Marcus, J. W. Maddox, J. P. Ellsberry, A. J. Hall, N. S. Johnson and V. J. Gragg, all took part, setting forth their seperate ideas as to best methods and means looking to the advancement of all interests concerned. While the doctors, in some misrepute particulars, did not agree, it was evident that the exchange of ideas had a tendency to bring them close together on points in which they all were most interested.

Mt. Creek News

And, "They Went Down Into the Water."

On Wednesday, September 3, 1913, an occurrence that would furnish the pen of a descriptial writer material sufficient to feed the hungry intellect food for thoughts sublime was witnessed here. It was the baptism of a number of persons—all adults. This simple statement is not sufficient. Men and women, who, for their past lives have simply existed without love for Christ and His teachings declared to follow, in the future, the Christ-like-life. They had been converted and they "went down into the water" and were baptized by the Rev. O. W. Greer.

There is a little pool of pure water which is fed by a never-failing little spring that seeks sunshine from its seclusion, nestled, as it is, in a pretty shaded cave where stillness and sublimity reign, renders the picturesqueness pleasing to the sensitiveness of those who love sincerity.

Into this little pool Rev. O. W. Greer baptised these persons:

Clarence Wilson, J. E. Garrett, Francis Wilson, Mrs. Francis Wilson, Miss Dinky Wilson, Nelson Abernathy, Fannie Mae Ray, Mrs. Thomas Smith, Mrs. Russ.

The quiet, earnest Christian spirit of the throng who had gathered there to witness this, the cleansing of sin and the consecration of new and good recruits in the ranks of the followers of Christ was evidence sufficient to convince an observer that the teachings of the Gospel were being observed at Mountain Creek.

Eagle is Killed At Mt. Creek

A large eagle was killed near Mt. Creek last Wednesday by Mr. W. F. Hudson. The bird was seen soaring near Mr. Hudson's home and Hudson rushed to his home, secured his gun and brought the noble creature to earth. The eagle was shown to the residents of Mountain Creek and Old Soldiers' Home.

County Singing Convention

The Chilton County Singing Convention No. 3, was Held at Bethel Sep. 6 and 7th

FIRST DAY

Opening song: Bethel, led by the President.

Prayer by Mr. Jowers. Committee on program was composed of. J. A. Rogers, J. H. Davis, J. H. Scott, and T. C. Jackson, and the secretary. Music in the forenoon was directed by: the President, J. W. Hayes, J. A. Blankinship, J. C. Jackson, J. H. Scott and the Secretary.

Dinner.

Afternoon: Elected for President for the insuing year, Prof. T. C. Jackson, Vice President, J. W. Hayes, Secretary, Z. J. Jones, Assistant Secretary, Prof. J. H. Scott.

Received report from the local singing society. The singing society at Centre Hill near Jemison asked for the next session of the Convention. The request was granted.

Directors of music for the afternoon were: J. H. Davis, H. Driver, A. T. Davis, A. D. Scott, and the venerable Rev. N. A. Dobbs.

SUNDAY MORNING

President Jackson presiding. Opening song: Holy Manna, by the president. Prayer by Rev. J. N. Scott. Directors for the morning session were: The president, Mr. Culver of Coosa, Mr. Hattaway of Shelby, four little girls of the Bethel community, T. C. Jackson, Misses Ida Scott and Lela Davis, and J. A. Blankinship. Just before noon a memorial service was held in memory of Profs. White, Walker and King. Authors of our music books were held, directed and assisted by T. C. Jackson, J. A. Blankinship, J. H. Davis, J. H. Scott, four little girls of Bethel A. T. Davis, A. D. Scott, Mr. Morris, Mrs. Driver, Misses Ida Scott, Lela Davis. Henry Sanders, Sula Jones.

Dinner. The afternoon music was directed by H. Driver, J. H. Scott, J. H. Davis and Mr. Morris, and by request Prof Blankinship directed Easter anthem.

Closing songs by the president, Benediction by Mr. Jowers, thus closed another glorious session of the convention—a success from first to last, and we feel as our worthy and honorable retiring president yields the gavel to his noble and competent young successor, that he has the most hearty thanks of the convention for his faithfullness and interest in the convention during the years he has presided over its meetings.

And in behalf of the convention we thank the good people of the Bethel community for their kind care and generous hospitality.

T. C. Jackson, President,
Z. J. Jones, Secretary.

Maple Springs

Mr. Editor:—

Please allow me room in your columns to announce that there will be a singing at this place at 2 o'clock, Sunday, September 14. Prof. Owden and a large crowd are expected to be present. All are envited to come.

Thomas M. Parrish,
Secretary.

Jemison Lodge

The Jemison Rebekah Lodge No. 42 met in order the last meeting held with both noble grand and vice grand present, but sorry that some of our most prominent members were absent on account of sickness and other causes perhaps. We will all attend the next meeting which is to be a very interesting one, as we are expecting every member and officer to be present, for the purpose of receiving a new member from some distance. Our lodge is improving nicely in membership and each member seems interested and enjoy this great work that is being carried on by the Rebekah's. Now, lady friends, all who are not members of this order are just missing the most enjoyable part of their lives, as you could be such great help in this work, and being out side can't realize your duty to your sister-hood of the world.

The Jemison Rebakah Lodge No. 42 just revived January, 1913, and one good thought is, these members are not sleepy and drowsy; they are wide-awake and at work.

A sanitary cow barn is almost completed now by the Rebakah sisters of the state and the money raised by their own efforts. The barn is for the benefit of the deceased Odd Fellow's children, so who will be willing to come in and join in such a noble work?

Well, we want to say that we are very sorry indeed that our noble grand can't be present after September. We will miss sister Roper very much.

Committee.

A Grateful Widow

Clanton, August 28, 1913

Mr. C. Reece Mullins, Agent
Volunteer State Life Insurance Co., Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir and friend:

I beg to acknowledge receipt of check for $1,000.00 in full payment of Insurance policy No. 20,560 in your company on the life of my late husband, Oscar Zeddie Robinson. I thank you and your company for the prompt settlement of this clain, after receiving the proof of death properly executed, and I will take pleasure in recommending The State Volunteer Life Insurance Co., to my friends and the friends of my husband as being worthy of all confidence, and more particularly as it is a southern company operated in the interest of the south. My husband took out this policy with you, only a little more than a year ago, and paid only two premiums a total of $63.10. I think he displayed wise judgement in taking out insurance. His death came as a shock to us all, and is another proof that we should all prepare for the future by taking ample life insurance in a good company like The Volunteer State Life, which you represent. This $1,000.00 will pay off the mortgage on my little home, and leave me a nice little bank account, which will enable me to raise my two small children, but without this I would be left helpless. Again thanking you for your promptness in settling my claim and wishing you and the Volunteer State Life Insurance Co., the success you so well deserve, I am, yours most gratefully Addie G. Robinson.

LIGHTNING STRIKES R. J. EILAND'S BARN

A telephone message received here Thursday morning of last week by C. Reese Mullins, Agt., from Dr. R. J. Eiland stated that lightning struck his barn early Thursday morning, causing considerably damage to same, and killing one of his horses. Mr. Mullins had the Dr's. barn and horses insured and left immediately for Cooper to adjust the loss. It seems to be a great pleasure to Mr. Mullins to look after his insurance business, and especially his losses. See him and insure your lives and property.

Cane Creek

Health of this community is very good at present.

Farmers are very busy pulling fodder and some are beginning to pick cotton.

Work will go hard with the boys and girls, who have just gotten out of school, but they must get at it.

The singing school taught at this place by Prof. C. N. Oden was grand success. The school closed on Tuesday, August 26th with a jolly crowd present, and some fine singing. We thank Prof. Oden very much for his work and also especially thank Miss Lizzie Oden for the valuable assistance rendered by her.

The literary school taught by Prof. J. Lee Yates closed on Friday, August 29, after a term of two months.

The new saw mill at the gap of the mountain is in full operation now.

Miss Minnie Lou Retherford has returned from a pleasant visit to her brother in Birmingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Yates visited their parents near Cooper Saturday night.

Mr. Lewis Varner has returned to his home in Coosa after a years stay in this community.

With best wishes to the Union-Banner.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY NEAR LOCK 12

Another Act of Lawlessness Follows the Horrible Murder Enacted on Saturday Night.

The report that a man was assaulted and robbed upon the highway near Tom McKee's at the Dam on Monday night was brought to Clanton Tuesday. The sheriff's officers at once telegraphed to Montgomery for dogs, and at 6 o'clock an automobile bearing the officers and dogs arrived, and were sent immediately to the place where the robbery is alleged to have occurred and put upon the track of the culprit. A chase of seven miles was interrupted by the railroad track, where the trail was lost. The automobile and dogs returned to Montgomery Tuesday night. We understand that Mr. Moore, the man who is said to have been robbed, was the proprietor of the dance hall at the dam.

Death of Mrs. Mc. D. Ruffin

Unexpected Death of a Noble and Popular Lady

At about three o'clock Friday morning death was visited upon one of the most popular and beloved ladies in Clanton, Mrs. Mc. D. Ruffin.

She had been ill for only a few days, and no one thought her illness might so unexpectedly prove serious.

Mrs. Ruffin leaves a husband, besides her throngs of friends to mourn her death.

Funeral services were held Saturday morning at the Baptist church, conducted by Rev. W. M. Olive, after which interment was made in the Clanton cemetery.

Singing Convention

The Chilton County Singing Convention will meet in special session at Liberty Hill church four miles west of Clanton, on the third Sunday, September 21, 1913. R. A. Smith, Secretary.

ATT'Y-GEN. SUES HARD COAL TRUST

McREYONLDS SEEKS TO DISSOLVE READING COMPANY.

SAYS U. S. LAWS VIOLATED

The Combination Markets 30 Per Cent of Supply of Coal—Prosecutor Asks That Stock Be Taken by Courts and Disposed Of.

Philadelphia.—Attorney-General McReynolds' first and most important attack on the "hard coal trust" was begun here with the filing of a civil suit for the dissolution of the Reading Company's control of coal mining and coal-carrying railroads—the most potential combination in the anthracite fields. The Reading Company with its subsidiary and allied corporations, including the Central Railroad of New Jersey and certain of their officers and directors, are charged by the federal government with violating both the Sherman anti-trust law and the commodities clause of the interstate commerce act, in an attempt to monopolize the production and transportation of anthracite.

The combination, controlling at the present time 63 per cent of the entire unmined deposits of anthracite and marketing about 30 per cent of the annual supply, will own or control in time, if not dissolved, the attorney-general warns, "every ton of commercially available anthracite known to exist."

The importance of the suit is emphasized with the declaration that in this case "only the law can afford relief." It is pointed out that in almost every other industry it is at least possible for a monopoly to be broken by the influx of fresh capital attracted by high profits, but against a monopoly of hard coal, the supply of which is limited, there can be no such protection.

MORE OF MEXICAN TANGLE

President Wilson's Return to Capital Starts Rumors.

Washington.—President Wilson, who returns to Washington from Cornish, N. H., is expected to meet William Bayard Hale, now en route here from a special mission to Mexico for the administration. Mr. Hale's report on conditions in Mexico since the arrival of John Lind with the peace proposals of the American government will be made direct to the president.

Unofficial reports reached Washington that Mr. Lind, who has been at Vera Cruz since the rejection by the Huerta government of the American proposals, would return to the United States within a few days. No confirmation of this could be procured at the state department.

For Automatic Stops.

Washington.—A bill to require railroads to install automatic train stops was introduced by Representative Levy of New York.

Truant Negro Caught.

Gallatin.—Sheriff J. F. Carter received a telephone message from the sheriff of Allen county, Ky., stating that he had captured the negro suspected of having assaulted Miss Lillie Hester near Bull Run, and had placed him in the Scottsville jail.

Federal Deficit Halted.

Washington.—Increased government receipts and decreased expenditures during August, as compared with August of 1912, halted the growth of the deficit of the federal treasury for the current fiscal year.

GREAT FIRE AT HOT SPRINGS

FANNED BY HIGH WIND, BUT BUSINESS SECTION SAVED.

LOSS REACHES $5,000,000

Treachery of Gale Causes Much Confusion Among Fighters in Effort to Head Off or Divert the Flames From Business Houses.

Hot Springs.—Five million dollars' property loss, 50 blocks laid waste, 2,000 people homeless, is the story of the most disastrous conflagration which ever visited this city Friday afternoon and night. The fire burned its way practically to the foot of West Mountain, sweeping a district seven to ten blocks in width from Hot Springs Mountain on the east to West Mountain, a distance of a mile and a half.

Human ingenuity and modern fire apparatus availed nothing against the resisting force of the flames, fanned by a shifting gale which caried it first in one direction and then another, threatening the entire city at times.

Hot Springs views in quiet awe such a scene of desolation as it never witnessed before. Aided by the Little Rock fire department, the local fire-fighting force battled with the flames for almost ten hours, fighting a hopeless battle at every stage, and succeeding only in diverting the course of the fire from the principal business section and the reservation.

Gov. Hays announced that he was coming to Hot Springs and would hold the National Guard in readiness to patrol the fire district if needed. This and many other offers of assistance in fire-fighting apparatus, financial aid, food and clothing have been received from all quarters. It is not believed that Hot Springs will need to avail itself of these many offers.

GHOULS WERE QUITE ACTIVE

Wholesale Robberies of Bodies in the Wreck.

New Haven, Conn.—While the Interstate Commerce Commission pursued its investigation into the fatal New Haven wreck of last Tuesday, Coroner Mix reported to the police that there had been wholesale robberies from the bodies in the wreck's debris.

Coroner Mix said that during his inquest witnesses told of men cutting fingers off of dead persons searching clothing of injured passengers to secure money or valuables.

Engineer Miller of the White Mountain Express testified he saw a man cut off a woman's finger, on which were several rings. He also saw a man strip a dead woman's hand and afterwards he saw a man lean over an injured woman and snatch away a locket.

Overdue Vessel Reaches Port.

Norfolk, Va.—More than 60 hours overdue from Savannah, the German steamer Hahenfelde, Capt. Hulst, reached this port. The steamer ran into a severe storm last Tuesday off Frying Pan Shoal and was driven 158 miles north of Cape Henry.

MANY DIE IN R. R. COLLISION

New Haven, Conn.—Twenty-two persons were killed and nearly fifty injured, some of whom may die, in a rear-end collision on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, six miles north of here. The first section of the White Mountain Express, bound for New York, speeding along at probably forty miles an hour in a thick fog, rushed by a danger signal, it is said, and crashed into the rear of the second section of the Bar Harbor Express.

Diaz Will Return.

London.—Gen. Felix Diaz purposes to arrive in Mexico before October 26, for which date the election for the presidency has been fixed. He leaves England for the continent, where members of his party will separate until instructions arrive from Mexico to call them together again.

Shriners Sail for Home.

Colon.—The visiting American Shriners sailed for home on the steamers Carthage and Turrialba, bound for New Orleans.

TO INVESTIGATE N.Y.N.H.&H. WRECK

COMMERCE COMMISSION WILL GO INTO MATTER FULLY.

LOOK INTO ROAD'S OPERATION

Coroner Refused to Make Public the Testimony of Engineer of White Mountain Express or That of the Flagman.

New Haven, Conn.—With 21 dead and five dying as the result of the wreck near New Haven of the Bar Harbor Express, the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad faces a public inquiry into the cause of the disaster by the Interstate Commerce Commission. It will be the most searching ever conducted by the commission into any railroad catastrophe.

This was announced by H. W. Belknap, chief inspector of the commission, who arrived here. Commissioner McChord will preside. Mr. Belknap said the inquiry would "get down to fundamentals" and determine what causes in the general operation and management of the road were responsible for the series of fatal wrecks which have afflicted the New Haven for the last two or three years, culminating in the most disastrous of all.

Until the Interstate Commerce Commission's witnesses tell their story the official explanation given out by the company will be the only version of the causes of the wreck available.

Coroner Mix persisted in refusing to make public the testimony of Engineer Miller of the White Mountain Express, which crashed into the Bar Harbor train, or of Flagman Murray, of the latter train, both of whom be examined in a preliminary investigation. This attitude was also taken by C. C. Elwell, chief engineer of the Connecticut Public Utilities Commission, who attended the hearing.

WILL BE NO FREE ALUMINUM

Time Considered Not Ripe for Trust Legislation.

Washington.—By a vote of 55 to 12, the senate rejected a proposal by Senator Kenyon, to put aluminum upon the free list. Senator Kenyon and those who joined him in supporting the amendment declared that the manufacture of aluminum in the United States was in the control of a monopoly—the Aluminum Company of America. The vote was accepted as a prelude to action upon another amendment proposing to free-list the manufactures of all combinations declared by the courts to be monopolies. Chairman Simmons of the finance committee announced during the debate that it was not the purpose of the majortiy to legislate on the trust question at the present time. He agreed that the Baltimore platform declared against trust-made products, but said this was not the time for trust legislation.

Envoy From Mexico.

Washington.—Developments in the Mexican situation probably will await the arrival in Washington of Manuel de Zamacona y Inclan, personal envoy of the Huerta government.

IT IS SAID HUERTA WILL QUIT

Mexico City.—That Gen. Huerta intends to quit the presidency in favor of Gen. Geronimo Trevino and become a candidate at the October elections is the statement made by a well-known Mexican close to the administration. Gen. Trevino is making his way to the capital, and little effort has been made to disguise the fact that he has been officially summoned. Just how the contemplated succession is to be brought about has not been disclosed.

General Lockout Ordered.

Dublin.—At a meeting here 400 prominent employers signed an agreement binding themselves not to employ any member of the Transport Workers' Union. This means practically a general lockout.

Son Born an American.

New York.—Mr. and Mrs. Herman Harris hurried from Paris to New York so that their son, born here, might be beyond any doubt an American citizen. They arrived with only six hours to spare.

MUCH DAMAGE DONE COTTON

CONSIDERABLE PORTION OF DETERIORATION WAS NATURAL.

BOLL WEEVIL WAS ACTIVE

Farmers in Infesetd Areas Have Given Up Attempt to Pick Them Off Plants—Picking General and Ginning Will Be Heavy.

Deterioration has been heavy to the cotton crop over the entire belt during the past two weeks. Much of this loss has been due to the natural decline of the plant with maturity. This is especially true in Georgia and the Carolinas, where the promise is still good for an excellent yield. But in the remainder of the belt natural deterioration has been augmented by heavy loss, due to the hot, dry weather, and, in infested areas, to the boll weevil.

In all of the western section of the belt and in Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama, the deterioration, due to dry weather, has been marked, and the promise of the yield has been appreciably cut. A large majority of correspondents in this territory state that the prospect has changed from the best outlook in years 30 days ago to one of the worst in many, many years. The plant is shedding heavily and young bolls are being forced open prematurely by the heat and drouth. There is almost solid unanimity of opinion that a top crop is practically out of the question.

In Mississippi, Louisiana and parts of Southern Alabama the second hatching of the boll weevill is doing great damage, and farmers have given up as hopeless all efforts to pick them from the cotton and burn them. Their damage in Texas is inconsequential.

An unusual amount of cotton is open for the season of the year, and in spite of the hot weather picking is going on rapidly, with the result that September ginning figures bid fair to break all records. East of the river there is a disposition on the part of farmers to hold their cotton for even higher prices. There is hardly a single complaint of lack of sufficient labor to gather the crop expeditiously. West of the river continued clear, open weather is desired to expedite the gathering of the crop, as it is generally acknowledged that rains would prove of small benefit in promoting further growth or fruitage.

JAPS WANT WAR WITH CHINA

Want Satisfaction for Killing of Japanese at Nanking.

Tokyo.—The assassination of Mortiaro Abe, director of the political bureau of the Japanese foreign office, has inflamed the masses, and Sunday a dramatic chapter in the history of the new Japan was written. Fifteen thousand persons gathered in mass meeting in Hibiya Park, calling for military action against China. A majority of these marched to the foreign office and clamored for admission. They demanded the dispatch of troops to China to take such measures as were necessary to obtain satisfaction for the killing of Japanese at Nanking, and, failing this, the resignation of the minister of foreign affairs, Baron Nobuaki Makino.

Hot Weather to Continue.

Washington.—Cooler weather during the present week is promised to the central part of the country by the weather bureau, but no prospect is held for relief in the East and South, and even higher temperatures are indicated for the Northwest.

Jerome Loses Fight.

Coaticook.—William Travers Jerome admitted that he had lost his fight for the early deportation of Harry K. Thaw from Canada.

Send Fleet to China.

London.—The Tokyo correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says:

"The Japanese government evidently is determined to act cautiously, but a great reinforcement of the fleet in Chinese waters is considered certain, and it is not improbable that some strategic point may be occupied.

Labor Leader Dies.

New York.—John P. Archibald, widely known as a labor leader, died at his home in the Bronx. He was 60 years old.

MAKE THE COW COMFORTABLE

Animal Should Have Good Upland Pasture and Plenty of Water—Beet Sugar Ration.

Cows should have good upland pasture and plenty of water. A woods pasture, with a stream of running water, makes a good summer pasture. Cows will graze during the early morning and late in the evening, but will seek the shade and water during the hottest part of the day.

Two quarts of wheat bran given to each cow morning and evening with an armful of some good green forage at noon, in addition to an abundance of grass, will be eaten with a relish, and if given regularly will considerably increase the yield and quality of the milk. Owing to the high price of grain many dairymen are feeding dried sugar-beet food. One-half peck of dried beets, soaked in two gallons of water for a few hours, will make a thick bucket of rich slop. This quantity, mixed with one quart of wheat bran and one quart of corn chops, is the usual ration for a cow morning and evening. On this ration the cow will keep in good healthy condition and give a large yield of rich, well-flavored milk. Dried sugar beet food is now selling at $26 per ton. It is a most excellent food for cows, also for hogs and poultry. Some dairymen feed soaked beet food alone. The cows are pastured day and night, and have two feeds of wilted fodder twice a day. Spray cows with fly repellant. One-half pint will cover 12 cows. A good formula is: Fish oil, three quarts; coal oil, one quart; carbolic acid, one ounce. Mix thoroughly. This mixture properly used will be a great comfort to the cows.

SAVE MUCH BY CO-OPERATION

Gain of About Fifty Cents Per Hundred Weight by Minnesota Live Stock Association.

The saving effected by the Litchfield (Minn.) Co-operative Live Stock association in the marketing of hogs has averaged about fifty cents per hundred weight, as compared with sales effected outside the association, says a writer in the Texas Co-Operator. If all the live stock of the state were sold on a similar basis, it would mean a saving to the producers of about $1,500,000 annually. But this figure refers to the product of live stock under present conditions only. The business of stockraising is still in its infancy in Minnesota. Next to dairying it is destined to be, probably, the largest agricultural interest in our state. Destiny so writes in the fact that the grasses and feed crops, which are the basis of all successful animal husbandry, here find their natural home, their richest development. Therefore, efficient organization among stockraisers means the saving to them not merely of $1,500,000 annually, which now goes into the pockets of middlemen, but of many times that amount when, as a stock-growing region, Minnesota shall have "come to her own."

CO-OPERATION AS A SCIENCE

Germany Goes to Work Systematically to Find Out Who Gets Money—Taught in Colleges.

Who gets the money?

They are trying to find that out over in Germany, but, incidentally, they are also trying to keep him from getting it.

Uncle Sam is struggling along with co-operation in a haphazard way, but Germany is teaching it as a business. The Germans are educating young men to take charge of co-operative organizations. They are teaching both co-operative buying and co-operative selling.

In the United States, co-operation is a venture into an unknown field, as a general thing, in Germany, it is a science that is studied in the universities and even in the high schools. Uncle Sam, when he starts a co-operative association takes a chance of getting the right man to manage it. If he guesses wrong, the whole thing is a fizzle. Germany educates young men for that business. The people of the United States are turning to co-operation more and more, but they are doing it blindly.

According to A. M. Thackara, consul general at Berlin, courses bearing upon co-operation and marketing are found in the curricula of both government-controlled and private education al institutins in Germany, writes Elliott Flower, in the Chicago Record-Herald. Even in the elementary schools the subject is touched, although it is not until the higher schools are reached that it becomes a distinct course.

The German is thorough. That is one of the things that has given him his world trade. He packs his goods better than the American, as was shown in a previous article, and that counts for a good deal. Now he has taken up co-operation, and he is just as thorough in that as he has been in other things. He is making it a part of the curricula of his colleges—training young men to become efficient managers of co-operative associations. He knows as well as anybody that the consumer pays, but he is trying to arrange it so that the consumer will not pay so much. He may not know where the money goes, but he is mightily interested in seeing that too much of it does not get away from the consumer.

HAS NO CO-OPERATIVE PLAN

Department of Agriculture's Office of Markets Recommends No Definite Form of Organization.

Numerous co-operative associations, especially in the western United States, are appealing to the department of agriculture to have the office of markets make an investigation of their particular type of co-operative enterprise. The idea apparent in their requests is that the department proposes to recommend the form of some particular organization for general adoption throughout the United States by producers' co-operative organizations.

The department has no such plans in view, but is desirous of securing information concerning all co-operative undertakings wherever they may be located, and with whatever products they may deal. It is interested also in consumers' organizations and co-operative mercantile enterprises.

At the request of the department, the civil service commission has recently held examinations for positions in the office of markets, including a specialist in co-operative organization. Sixty-four applicants satisfied the commission that they were entitled to consideration for the position. It will be some time before the commission will be able to correct these papers and make certifications to the department. After the specialist in co-operative organization has been selected and appointed, it is possible that this officer may as opportunity arises make personal observations as to the conduct and methods of some of the numerous associations in the United States to assist the department in giving the most valuable information and advice to groups of persons desiring to effect organizations.

MAKE CAPONS OF COCKERELS

Fowls Must Be Kept Growing Every Moment and Should Have Reasonably Large Range.

The very best cockerels must be selected for capons. They should be good sized, vigorous. A large frame is necessary if much flesh is to be put upon it and in breeding for capons one should select a strain that matures as early as possible.

The capons must be kept growing every moment and they should have a reasonably large range.

If confined too closely they are apt to become droopy and sick. While not particularly active they thrive better if they have a reasonably large run and they seem to take on fat better.

Too many people make the mistake of waiting until within two weeks of marketing before fattening their birds. If they are to be sold in January they should be pushed at least six weeks to get the very best results. This will produce a large, fat capon that will bring a fancy price if packed in clean, white paper in a clean box.

Sterile Chickens.

Some chickens of both sexes are absolutely sterile, that is they are incapable of reproducing their kind. When such birds are found they should be promptly killed, as they are a dead loss to their owners.

RAILROADS TOO SLOW—NEW ERA IN SIGHT

ARE we on the eve of a revolution in the system of transporting postal matter over long distances? Are the railway trains to have a formidable rival in this service? Many signs point in this direction. E. M. Morgan, New York's postmaster, is quite convinced that a new era is near. He frankly admits that carriage by trunk line railways is not meeting the pressing demands of today.

At the present time the mail cars are almost invariably integral parts of passenger trains. Their speed is restricted. Therefore the chances of materially expediting the mails upon the trunk lines are not particularly promising. What, then, can be done to meet the growing needs of business?

Every new agency that has bettered the means of written or vocal communication has increased greatly the volume of business and the number of letters. The coming of the telegraph was followed by a responsive increment in first class postal matter. In commercial practice a letter generally confirms a telegraphic order for the sake of the legal value of the record and because of the greater details which are incorporated in the communication which goes by post.

The telephone did all that the electric telegraph did but exercised its influence primarily within the cities and towns immediately concerned at first. Then as the use of the service grew and long distance telephony developed there was an extraordinary expansion of business industry within every twenty-four hours. Something had to be done to make the speedy preparation of letters possible, and the typewriter came into being. It would be difficult to estimate accurately just how much the telephone and the typewriter have done toward swelling the vast postal activity of today, but that they have outranked all other influences in this direction cannot be gainsaid.

What is capable of being traced is the bulk of the first class mail, which has grown since these two instruments of latter day intercourse have come into widespread use, and the figures are astonishing. In a period of three years the railways supplied the post office with an increase in mileage of nearly 12 per cent., this independently of the volume of the postal matter carried, and the figures have been mounting steadily since these were taken for comparison in 1910. In 1907 the railways furnished the post office 387,557,165 miles of transportation and in 1910 the total reached a mileage of 426,923,109.

This is a pretty fair indication of the part the trunk lines play in getting letters to their destinations and incidentally emphasizes the need of more rapid means of transportation for letters and registered parcels going beyond the limits of the city. Compared with the telephone service and the letter-producing typewriter, the "limited" trains as an agency of intercourse trail over the landscape, relatively speaking, as if weighted with leaden heels.

Before it is possible to appreciate what is coming in the future to make postal intercourse quicker between business centers of the country it is necessary to consider the germ of revolution as it is developing within the urban limits of big cities. Perhaps you know that there is a mail tube service here in Manhattan which has been doing effective but restricted duty for some years. This is an installation extending from the main office downtown to Harlem.

This tube is only eight inches in diameter, and mail despatched to the uppermost limits of the route must be relayed a number of times before reaching its destination. The eight-inch tube is too small to take a pouch of the regulation size and the letters must be packed in the container and taken out and again packed for forwarding in passing on from station to station. The impulse is compressed air, and the tube is utilized only to supplant the most leisurely transfer by wagons, etc. The horse-drawn vehicle is the prevailing mode of getting the mail moved from point to point. Fortunately motor vehicles will soon supplant these horse-drawn affairs and to that extent there will be a marked improvement. But this change is not the one needed most.

Some months ago Postmaster Morgan and a commission appointed by the federal postal authorities took up the question of bringing the postal facilities here up to date, and they proposed the installation of a double mail tube service which should connect the branch post offices at the two great railway terminals, the Grand Central and the Pennsylvania stations, together with a supplemental line reaching down to the main post office in the heart of the business section of New York. The proposed tubes are to be 24 inches in diameter and capable of handling the regulation mail bags. This would do away with the present loss of time in repouching and would immensely increase the hourly mail transporting capacity.

Today between the Grand Central and Pennsylvania stations the wagons run nearly the full twenty-four hours in order to carry the 4,000 or more pouches of mail involved. It is estimated that these bags have an average weight of 100 pounds and this means that 200 tons of postal matter must thus be handled and disposed of over this route every day. This of course does not represent the total of the city's service by any means and does not include the transportation of mail from downtown to and from these railway centers of shipment.

The new line would do this work speedily, would not be liable to interference by reason of blocked streets or weather conditions, and the bags would be despatched from point to point at a rate ranging anywhere from twenty-five to seventy-five miles an hour, as occasion might require. The problem before the local authorities is to decide which system of a number submitted is the one best fitted to meet Manhattan's needs.

Bids have been submitted already and the schemes are either pneumatic or electrical in their method of propulsion. All of them have been tested either practically or experimentally, and apart from their individual merits each aims to do away with existing surface wagons and to increase the velosity and the volume of the postal matter to be carried from point to point within the limits specified. In this movement toward better service New York is following in the wake of kindred efforts abroad.

The underground conduit or tube, which is pretty costly to install, is not the type generally recommended for intercity or interstate service. The majority of the installations are virtually elevated viaducts of one sort or another which can be laid over the country without any particular regard to territorial contours, most of the systems being good hill climbers and intended to follow the shortest route between points, in this feature showing a radical difference from the procedure in laying out the regulation trunk lines.

As might naturally be expected, the monorail system has been strongly urged by some of the people very much concerned in promoting rapid transit both for mail and for passenger service, and one of the most interesting of these contemplates doing the double duty of carrying people and postal matter at a rate of 200 miles an hour. The engineers have figured that this could be done at a fuel cost not exceeding three cents a mile. Whether this ambitious project will see its accomplishment within our time is of course debatable, but the elements of risk are less than most people would imagine, thanks to the stabilizing powers of the gyroscope, improvements in electrical propulsion and the metallurgical advances which make it possible to obtain lighter and stronger materials than could be had a few years ago.

About a year ago the engineering world was decidedly interested in the demonstrating performances of a small levitated railway, the climax of years of study on the part of its inventor, Emile Bachelet. Certainly that small installation did some remarkable things, and the question is, can a full-sized plant be made to run as effectively and within the limits of commercial economy?

Mr. Bachelet made a novel use of the repulsive force of certain magnetic stream lines, and his carrier or car was actually made to float in the air, thus avoiding rail friction and other associate hindrances. His purpose was to provide a means of transporting mail and some kinds of valuable express matter aggregating in unit weight, with the car, a total of about 500 pounds; and from New York to Boston he prophesied a speed in transit of quite 300 miles an hour.

TWINS IN STRANGE FEUD

Brothers Divide House and Do Not Speak to Each Other for 23 Years.

It was a grandfather's chair—a plain, old wooden "rocker"—but, insignificant as it appeared, it was sufficient cause for spoiling the best part of two lives, says an exchange. Just because of the chair Luke and Mathew Gregory, twin brothers, made for themselves an existence as queer as any recorded in the pages of fiction. Because of the chair they dwelt side by side in a house literally divided. They gave up love, friendship and social intercourse. For twenty-three years they met every day without exchanging a word. For twenty-three years they glowered at each other from opposite sides of a living room. For twenty-three years each sat in the chair every other day and read out of the same bible turn and turn about. The house was divided by actual measurement and continued so divided until it fulfilled the prediction of the scriptures and fell in reality.

Luke and Mathew Gregory were simple, hard-working miners. Each day they went to the great collieries at Wilkesbarre, labored on through the day, chatted with their other fellows and returned home at night. Yet they never had a word one for the other, despite the fact that they cooked at the same stove and ate from the same table.

The Gregorys were of Scotch birth and came to Wyoming valley with their father, John Gregory, when lads of only three years. The elder Gregory had been a miner in Scotland. With him he brought his household effects, among which were the chair. With thrift and energy the father made his way little by little. From his meager wages he saved something and through his skill was advanced step by step until he reached the position of boss of the mine. When he died, after the boys had reached the age of seventeen, the lads were well able to look after themselves. The twins had always been inseparable and the father foresaw no difficulties in leaving what he had to them share and share alike, including the one-and-one-half-story cottage.

When they celebrated their thirtieth birthday each announced to the other that he was thinking of taking a wife. They shook hands and went to bed joyfully. The brothers had no idea of parting after thirty years, and determined to pool their earnings and build a second cottage on the lot they owned next door. Of course, the household goods would be divided. Bit by bit they portioned them out without a disagreement until they came to the chair. There was nothing in the intrinsic value of the piece of furniture to provoke dispute. To one uninterested it was just a worn-out old affair, none too attractive. To the brothers that mattered not at all. It had been their father's before that. It was hallowed by countless associations. Luke felt that he ought to have it and so did Mathew. At first they joked about it, then they argued and finally quarreled. Luke came home one night and announced that the girl of his choice had promised to marry him.

"Ye maun gie me the cheer as a weddin' geefe," he told Mathew.

"That I willna," answered Mathew.

The next night came Mathew with a similar announcement and a similar request. The answer of Luke was: "I willna."

Nothing could be done. The prospective brides waited tearfully month by month. They grew at first angry, then indifferent and finally sought husbands elsewhere.

A year passed and Luke and Mathew were no nearer a solution. Then, after a discussion in black anger, Luke declared that they would divide the house and all in it and never speak again. Mathew agreed. The two brothers set to work silently. They drew a line across the center of the front walk, up the porch steps and directly through the middle of the house. The stove in the front room was on Luke's side of the house, but the stove in the dining room was on Mathew's. Where the line bisected the dining room the table was set so that each had his just portion.

A mark was drawn through the center of the cook stove and up the stovepipe. All the chairs were equally divided, but the grandfather's chair remained. What to do with that was still a problem. Finally it was decided to place it in the center of the front room. It was that it should be used by the brothers nate days. The doors were sawed in hinged so that neither should touch th of the other. Bricks and copper cook stove, fire space, oven and all grim details had been settled the br each to his own portion of the h menced the long silence. In t years that followed neither s boundary line. They cooked each on his own part of the the food to their respective ate without speaking. At was entitled to the chair his part of the house a The next night Mathe lege.

Capt. Hobson fired a big gun at Governor O'Neal last Thursday. Some of his charges were about the most cutting we have heard recently.

The commercial report issued by the First National Bank of Birmingham on September 1st estimates that the 1913 cotton crop in Alabama will exceed last year's crop by about 8000 bales.

The farmers should not be compelled to wait at the gins this season to get their cotton ginned. The number of ginneries in town ought to be able to handle the product as fast as it is brought in.

The management of the Lyric Theatre are doing all they can to make a play house for Clanton that is worthy of the popular support of the people. Help them by giving them your patronage. Nothing helps more to while away a dreary evening than a visit to a nice picture show.

In this issue of the Union-Banner will be found an extensive article by Hon. B. B. Comer who is a candidate for Governor. In giving publicity to the article we do not do so becavse we believe or support his principles; we do it because he pays us for it. We do not advocate his candidacy nor ask anyone else to do so. It is solely upon the grounds of pure paid advertising that we accept the article.

Remember the County Fair which is to be held in Clanton from October 20 to 25. Let everyone who has something of interest prepare to exhibit it. In the past Chilton has prepared about the best Fair of any County in the State. We should try to make the next one still better. Call on Circuit Clerk, M. D. Friends of Prof. W. L. Hicks, a former superintendent of the Clanton schools, will be pleased to learn of the success he is attaining as principal of the Cullman Connty High School at Cullman. He began his second year with the school Tuesday with an opening indicative of the most successful session in the history of tne school. And not only is he building up the High School; he is doing a great work for the cause of education in the entire county. Prof. Hicks is an able educator and fully competent to fulfil the duties of his position, as is evidenced by the success which is greeting him. He has the good wishes of many friends here.

On the last day of the Chilton County Institue, Mr. J. W. Moore who has for nineteen years faithfully served his county as Superintendent of Education, made his farewell address to the teachers. Mr. Moore's address was filled with reminisceness of his long term of office and expressions of gratitude to the teachers for their co-operation and support. He extended a cordial greeting to his successor and wished him unlimited success.—Educational Exchange.

Few men hold a public office as long as Prof. Moore has, and at the end of his services emerge from the duties with the consciousness of having performed them in the creditable manner which he has. He has now the confidence of the people as perfectly as he had at the beginning. No man looks at him and says he neglected his office. But we believe that in his successor we will find a man who is equally capable and willing to serve the people in the trust they have bestowed upon him.

A Letter from J. B. Jones

Raton, New Mexico.

Editor of the Union-Banner,

Dear Sir: The paper from dear old Chilton county is a source of pleasure to me to read the news of the county and state.

I noticed a criticism on R. P. Hobson's speech some time ago, and if he pictured out the results of whiskey as bad as I have seen, I doubt very much if half the people of Chilton would believe it.

There are wise men of today who have the interest of the nation at heart who are giving much thought to eugenics and criminality and it is far in advance of present conditions that exist.

I have been in Mexico once and have been working with men who have been over the greater part of Mexico and of the many, not one speaks favorably of our consulship, and our flag is hardly what we suppose, and some citizens have called on the British or German officers for protection; in preference of the officers of the U. S. And many citzens have been robbed property burned. Since the dawn of peace has been pictured in cartoons (cannot go into details). The Mexicans' cause is just but they have not the brains and means to accomplish the desired end and it terminates into plundering of property in many places.

I left Globe Ariz for Phoenix the 23, of June. Saw some cliff-dwellings which looked to be very old also passed the Roosevelt dam which is the finest piece of engineering I ever saw.

It is 284 feet high, 284 feet wide at botton, 1,080 feet across road bed, over which the wagon road crosses. The cost was $10,000,000; will irrigate 240,000 acres of land at $1.60 per acre per year, for water.

The reservoir is 18 miles long, and part extending from dam up Salt River and other up Toto Basin and the power produced at the diverson dam thirty miles below and sold to the miners in the district and Phoenix will pay for it in 15 years.

After leaving the dam, I passed through a very mountainous rocky country. Saw a cross that had been cut in the face of a rock also saw another immage on the smooth face of a rock which I presume was the work Franciscan Missionaries to represent Christ or the Virgin, Mary. It was somewhat effaced by age or imperfectly cut. After getting out of the mountains I passthrough a desert where the land is very fertile but no water; later passing through the irrigated land, I saw as fine crops as I ever saw any where.

The crops were fruits, alfalfa, corn cotton, wheat, potatoes and some other minor products.

While in Phoenix I saw many of the impliments that were used by the Spanish, Mexicans and Aytic Indias in their modes of civilization and the majority of them were very crude.

I visited one ostrich farm where there are 800 birds; first pluck the birds at the age of six months old and every eiget months thereafter and they realize $30.00 per bird per year. They begen laying at four years of age and average life is 75 years. They are ferocious and it is not safe for man to get among them uless he is on horse back.

Leaving Phoenix Wednesday over the Santafe R. R. passed through some irrigated country that was very good, then into the desert valley, 40 miles long and 30 miles wide, then into a braking volcanic country, then into a mountainous country where the strata had been worn away by ravages of time and the original foundation of granate had disentergrated a gradual and very little vegetation there, then crossed a flat country that was a bed of volcanic ash on weich sail has formed and grows good grass. When there is enough rain and between Ash-fork and Williams there is some good timber.

Thursday morning I got to the grand canyon which is 217 miles long through which flows the Colorado river ten to twenty miles wide and 6,000 7,000 feet, deep, dotted with many peaks some of which are taller than any mountains east of the Rockies and none of them so high as man's feet. While standing on the edge of it some places a man could jump off of the edge of a precipice and go 2,000 feet before striking.

The walls are composed of several kinds of rock intermingled with each other and any one that likes to see the handwork of nature will not be disappointed in going there.

I have no words that would express the grandeur and sublimity of it.

After speneing a day at the grand canyon I returnd to Williams and up to the Petrifield forest which is wonderful but in different way of the canyon.

The indications all point in some degree of the logs by water, previous to petrification and the coarse gravel and sand indicate that there was rapid and changing of curents in the water which the change took place. DARBYS FLUID
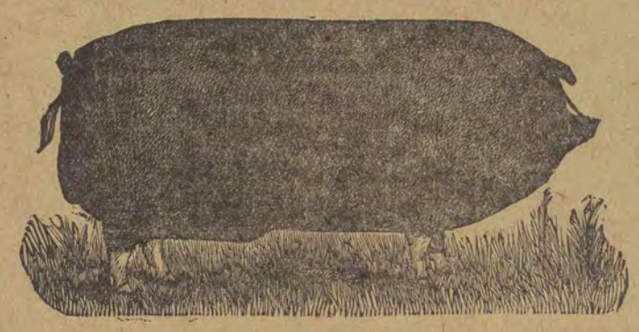
PREVENTS AND CURES



HOG CHOLERA
DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

Pen up your hogs when cholera is in the neighborhood. For each ten hogs put one quarter of a bottle of Darbys Fluid in the daily supply of water. Clean out troughs every day before watering. Do not feed slop or any liquid food. Feed moderately on chops or other light stuff. Continue this treatment for two weeks, you can then turn your hogs out;—they are insured against cholera.

READ THE PROOF.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:
This is to certify that we have used Darbys Fluid for the prevention and cure of Hog Cholera. Last summer we used it on fifty head of hogs and we lost only nine. These nine consisted of a brood sow and litter of eight pigs. We believe we could have saved the entire herd had we started using Darbys Fluid earlier.

GENTLEMEN:—
Hogs were dying of Cholera by the thousand in my neighborhood They had it all around me but I saved all mine by putting Darbys Fluid in their drinking water and not letting them have any water without Darbys Fluid in it. Its a great preventive. I keep it on hand all the time. Its good for a hundred purposes.
J. A. STANALAND, Pidcock, Ga.

DARBYS FLUID has many uses about the household. It destroys germs or bad odors about the house and purifies the air of living or sleeping rooms. It heals wounds, sores, cuts or galls on human or animal flesh. It is a fine addition to the bath for cleansing the body or feet of disagreeable odors. If used in the water for brushing the teeth it sweetens the breath. As a disinfectant for the sick-room in contagious diseases and for safe-guarding the health of the family when such diseases are prevalent in the neighborhood it is worth it weight in gold.

Superstitions That Survive.

The death of the Roman Emperor Maximus was presaged by the howling of dogs. It was in the hope of finding the stream of perpetual youth that led Ponce de Leon, the Spanish discoverer, on his trips through Florida, while De Soto was seeking for a city of gold. In Brazil the people believe that Don Sebastian, the royal hero who was slain in Africa about 1580 in a battle, will return to claim the crown. The people go out on windy nights to watch the heavens anticipating his return.

Teach Concentration.

The greatest thing that parents can do for their children is to teach them concentration of the mind as soon as their intelligence begins to bud—and that is very early. The mind of a child generally takes its bent long before the school days begin. The proper education of children begins from the cradle, and if it were pursued as it ought to be the mental force of mankind might be quadrupled in a single generation.

Wanderlust.

"I'm going to take a long ocean voyage, to nobody knows where, and come back, nobody knows when, and shall sit down by the wayside wherever I please and play with the children of the street, the little brown babies of the Orient, perhaps, or the little blue-eyed Saxons, who knows? Tis great to go as you please and come as you please, with no telegrams to send, no stress of meeting friends and missing friends, and all that."—New York Times.

Calls Upon the National Gov-rnment to Investigate the . & N. Railroad's Per-nicious Political Ac-tivities in Ala-bama.

(BY B. B. COMER.)

the People of Alabama, to the Fed-ral Congress, to the Attorney Gen-ral and to the Interstate Commerce Commission:

respectfully call your attention to facts submitted in this address, d earnestly appeal to the State and tional governments to redress the ongs herein set forth. Nothing n be more subversive of indepen-nt government than the corporate litical activities herein described d proof of the existence of which is ein established. I ask the co-oper-ion of every citizen and every arm of e State and National governments in r efforts to compel the L. & N. Rail-ad and its allied forces to withdraw eir baneful influence from the poli-s of Alabama.

Exposure in Court.

It is true that the court exposure of e political activities of the L. & N. ilroad to which reference is re-atedly made, is of several ars standing. This exposure came cause of a libel suit, not yet fin-hed, but the verity of which the ate Supreme Court has fully sus-ined in three decisions. While to-ay there is no new libel suit, yet any -ray system which could be brought, nd should be brought, to bear on its resent conduct, would show, either in rocess or in actual fact, the same onditions, viz.: The Louisville and ashville Railroad Company's attempt-ng control of the government f Alabama and its effort to regain omplete domination of the State and he people.

A Political Manager.

At all times the L. & N. Railroad has aintained in Montgomery, the seat f the State Government, a skilled po-ical manager, not for his legal serv-es, but as a political lawyer, who as charged with unsleeping care, to nip in the bud" every independence f thought or action.

How It Was Done.

Its potentiality to control was ac-omplished by financing leading pa-ers, by specious advertising, by re-aining many important citizens in va-ied employment, by the use of free asses distributed where they would ontribute most to the environment of he beneficiary, thus creating a power-ul lobby State-wide in its extent, easy of assembly, even on telegraphic no-ice—all at the expense of the people.

Foreign Made Rates.

With the above conditions as a pred-icate, the Alabama freight rates and freight rate conditions were made by a foreign traffic manager, unchal-lenged by any agency that represent-ed or acted in the interest of the people.

Local Interests Hog-Tied.

Since the beginning of State or na-tion[illegible] it has been recognized tha[illegible]eal economy demands tha[illegible]cies which contribute to [illegible]individual prosperity sha[illegible] first place. Ev-ery[illegible]he Louisville & Nash-vil[illegible] been adverse to local up[illegible]n to the extent of hog-tie[illegible]d communities and in-dustri[illegible]

[illegible]ivers and Ports.

The f[illegible]t rate conditions at every railroad [illegible]ssing of the Tennessee, of the Tombigbee, of the Warrior, and of [illegible]e Alabama, compared with any rail-oad river crossing in the world, and the freight rate conditions of Mobile compared with any freight conditions of any port in any civilized country evidence a condition which should, by the National Government, through its Interstate Commerce Commission, be declared intolerable and speedily re-lieved.

No Scruple in Its Methods.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad, great in its construction and manage-ment, impatient of control, unhesitat-ing in its purpose to dominate, regard-less of the people's rights, has written in the journals of three States its bul-lying methods of coercion, bribery, even assassination. Watterson, through the Courier Journal, charged this relentless corporation with mur-dering Governor Goebel, shoot-ing him from the window of the Kentucky capitol, just as much so as Madero and his Vice-President were shot down in the streets of Mexico. The monument on Pine street in Nashville, marking the spot where Carmack died (the courts said murdered) is traceable to its fear-ful influence.

In the recent impeachment of Judge Archbold, a member of the Interstate Commerce Court, one of the prominent articles against him showed the ugly interference and vicious environment of its power, growing out of the freight case from New Orleans to Alabama, in which the liason of the Judge and the Louisville & Nashville Company's em-ployes, attorney and witness, was shown.

An Oligarchy in Alabama.

In Alabama, this railroad has re-solved itself into an oligarchy, has tried to control the Courts, and in some instances has done so. The most dangerous thing to human rights is the control of citizens and officers in the discharge of their duties by any interest. These things are ac-complished, not for the purpose of maintaining business in its integrity, nor in the competitive reach for great-er business, but to secure an unfair advantage and to enjoy the consequent privilege of an unfair and unreasona-ble charge, which charge the people pay.

Privilege Versus The People.

A forceful example of this conflict is shown in the revolution, with its shocking disclosures, now going on at the National capital. Under the lead-ership of President Wilson, the people for the first time in many years, are beginning to reap the fruits of victory, and this American country is on the eve of breaking loose from the grasp-ing, taxing power of the greatest and most ruthless corporations the world has ever seen. Mr. Wilson, in his in-augural address declared: "The great government we loved has too often been made use of for private and sel-fish purposes, and those who used it had forgotten the people."

Mr. Underwood's View.

Mr. Underwood says: "The time has passed when the laws of this coun-try will be written for special inter-ests; when men can come and ask for legislation to convert dollars from the pockets of the masses into their own that they may grow rich."

The Campaign of 1904.

No better evidence of the pernicious activity and the debauching influence of the railroads and allied corporations need be sought, or can be found, than was shown by the conduct of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad in my election for president of the Railroad Commission in 1904. This evidence is beyond controversy. It came from the reluctant lips of this railroad com-pany itself in answers, coerced by or-der of the Court, to interrogatories propounded to it in a libel suit brought by me in the City Court of Birming-ham against this corporation and some of its highest officials and some of the leading newspapers in the State, all of which is now on record in that Court. My interrogatories were answered on behalf of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, under oath, by George E. Evans, its then Gen-eral Manager, and one of its Vice-Presidents.

Expenditures of One Campaign.

This testimony shows that the Louisville & Nashville spent in that campaign to defeat me the sum of $142,285.25. It further shows that all of the railroads in the State at that same time contributed to a further campaign fund. It was a corrupt, sordid effort to defeat me for President of the Railroad Com-mission, and to elect its can-didate on the issue forced by me in the interest of the people, viz: That Alabama should have equitable car service rules, prompt settlement of claims for damaged or lost freight, decently maintained depots and pas-senger accommodations, and the same rate of freight on 110 commodities of common production, consumption and use, which the roads had maintained in our neighboring State of Georgia, for many years, and which rates had proven constructive and remunerative both to the shipper and to the carrier. The Railroads because of their long control of every State ac-tivity, had maintained in Alabama the highest freight rate and the lowest tax rate, as compared with any State which had escaped their withering control. Recognizing that, if the peo-ple had an independent Railroad Com-mission service, an exposure of their methods would be sure, they did not hesitate at any proposition, any means or methods, which would defeat this breakaway from their control.

Details of the Conspiracy.

It appears from said testimony of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad that Walker D. Hines, 1st Vice Presi-dent, with Headquarters at Louisville, Kentucky, organized this road into a political machine from the Alabama-Tennessee line to Mobile, including all subsiduary branch lines. The said Hines was the Chief in Command, sta-tioned in Louisville, Kentucky, its Division Superintendents and other offi-cers in Alabama were his Lieutenants, with its various agents, engineers and the most efficient and intelligent of its employees as field workers. The first order issued by the said Hines was addressed to the General Manager, George E. Evans, directing him to create a strong anti-Comer sentiment in Alabama; then, after the selection of its candidate, followed orders from the said Hines to vote for John V. Smith. The said George E. Evans, General Manager, then issued directions to B. M. Starke and all Di-vision Superintendents to distribute among their men a circular letter in which a bitter attack was made upon me. It is further shown by the said testimony that circular letters signed by the said Walker D. Hines, 1st Vice President, and the said George E. Evans, General Manager, and others, were freely distributed over Alabama through the organized forces of this Railroad, attacking and harshly crit-icising me.

BRAXTON B. COMER

Hines on the Ground.

When the campaign became warm, the said Walker D. Hines removed his headquarters from Kentucky and stationed himself in Alabama and con-ducted the fight in person, issuing or-ders and commands in person and by word of mouth, direct to the "Alabama Officials" of said Road

A Far Flung Battle Line.

This testimony further shows that all of the officers of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, all of its important agents, its attorneys and its doctors, except one in Gadsden, Ala-bama, were placed by it on the firing-line, and were released from the dis-charge of their duties to the public and to the Railroad in order that they might go into this political campaign in Alabama.

To Debauch the Voters.

Never in the history of any country did a public servant, as this Railroad Company was, undertake, with more unscrupulous methods and with more effrontery, to over-awe and debauch the people and to show its mastery over the State. It hesitated at noth-ing. Through one man, as shown by his own testimony in Court, it dis-tributed $5,000.00 in Jefferson County alone within forty-eight (48) hours, just before the election, to debauch the electors.

The Perjured Frame Up.

This Railroad, through three of its high officials, B. M. Starke, Superin-tendent at Birmingham, E. A. DeFuni-ak, General Freight Agent at Birming-ham, and Jones G. Moore, President of the Birmingham Southern Railroad, procured from one of its employees, a section master in the Birmingham district, a false affidavit that he was my first cousin, that he, as section master, had done some repair work on the private track of the Avondale Mill of which I was President; that he was my first cousin and that because of this relationship, I had approached him while at work on the track and told him that when the work was fin-ished to come to the office and get the money; that he had replied that he was working for the L. & N. Railroad Company and that the money belonged to them; that I had told him that that was alright, he could take it; that his reply was that the money belonged to the Railroad and he could not take it, and that I told him if he did not take that money and all such money, he would die a poor man.

This was published in the leading evening papers of Saturday and in the morning papers on Sunday, the day before the election on Monday, and sent broadcast throughout the State under the headlining of "How the Rad-ical Candidate Had Attempted to Make His First Cousin Take Money Which Belonged to the L. & N. Rail-road and Thus Do the Railroad Com-pany."

Not a Word of Truth.

In the trial for libel the Court and jury held the affidavit false and libel-ous. The testimony showed that the man was not related to me, that I did not know him nor he know me; that the whole transaction was a frame-up to absolutely destroy any opposition which might come in their way. They were determined to elect their man, no matter how much money or what influences were necessary to debauch, bribe and control the electorate.

Debauch and Control.

Before the people, I challenged then, as I do now, their right to debauch and control the state of Ala-bama from their office at Louis-ville, Kentucky, challenged their right to arrange at their will, not only the intrastate business of Alabama, but also the interstate freight rates of Ala-bama and make their own rules gov-erning their every business with the shippers and the people of the State.

In all these contests, the freight rate comparison was made with Georgia, North Carolina and Virginia and showed great discrimination against Alabama.

The People Footed the Bill.

You, the people of Alabama, will take notice that this vast sum spent by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company to corruptly influence the voters of this State, was wrung from you as taxes or charges by making you pay passenger and freight rates sufficient to pay not only operating expenses and interest on bonded in-debtedness and dividends on stock, but an additional sum to run political campaigns in Alabama.

The methods above mentioned have continued. The insidious lobby is still at work. One hundred thousand dollars has recently been used through the press exactly like that used by the Sugar, Wool, Tobacco and other trusts, whose pernicious activities are now being developed at Washington through Congressional investigation, and against which President Wilson recently made such a strong attack regarding the "insidious lobby" car-ried on by these agencies in the Na-tional Halls of Legislation.

Senatorial Investigation.

Senator Luke Lea, from Tennessee, has introduced a resolution in the Senate of the United States, asking for an investigation of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company in Tennessee. We will request an amendment to this resolution so as to include an investigation of this railroad in the conduct of its af-fairs in Alabama. We will insist upon a Federal investigation either through this source under the direction of Congress, or through the Interstate Commerce Commission, or Attorney General, so that the people of Alaba-ma may be informed by what author-ity this interstate railroad system and its officers are permitted to take these large sums of money, acquired by freight and passenger taxes on the people, and use the same, not for the betterment of its roads, or for the payment of interest on its bonded in-debtedness and dividends to its stock-holders, but for the purpose of de-bauching and bribing the people in elections.

River Improvement Made Useless.

The selfish and arbitrary conduct of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad and other common carriers in refus-ing to allow our rivers and harbors to participate as carriers of freight, has rendered worthless the millions of dollars obtained from the National Government by our members of Con-gress and which has been expended in Alabama for the purpose of making the channels in these waterways nav-igable.

The Tennessee River, carrying more water than the Cumberland and Ohio rivers combined, and running through all of our Northern counties, crossed or touched in many places by the railroads, improved at a cost to the Federal government of eight million dollars, is denied every right of car-rier co-operation and service.

The Tombigbee and Warrior Rivers, with navigation made possible by many millions of government money, the Alabama, the Mobile, even Mobile Harbor itself, all are hog-tied as to carrier service, by a combination of railroad interests, unbelievable in its open, bullying, destructive methods.

Shall These Millions Be Wasted?

If these arteries of water traffic are to be continued to be "bottled up" then these vast amounts of money expend-ed on them is a pure waste and had better have been placed on the public highways. A thousand times better would it have been for our Representa-tives in Congress to have secured a like appropriation for post roads, for on these at least, there would have been no railroad embargo, no exposure showing how competitive boats have been stifled and competi-tive barges prohibited.

Call for a Remedy.

No people have so tamely submitted to such suppression of the usufruct of such unmeasured natural advantages improved at great cost and we call upon our Representa-tives in Congress to render us further aid in an effort to secure the perma-nent release of our rivers and harbors from this railroad embargo. And we call upon the people of Alabama to show in this campaign their emphatic refusal to permit the Government of Alabama to revert to the control of its old-time master, the L. & N. Railroad Company, a corporation of Kentucky, and its satellites in the realm of spe-cial privilege.

Extracts From Sworn Testimony.

Below will be found some of the letters attached to the said testimony of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company in said libel case:

The reproduction of all that the Court records show in said case con-cerning the pernicious activities of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad company in said election, would make this article too long. Sufficient copies of letters attached to said testimony are here given, to convince the im-partial mind of the way this foreign corporation, by unfair and corrupt methods, endeavored to control an Alabama election.

Vice-President Hines' Letter.

The following letter from the said Walker D. Hines, First Vice-President, the Chief in control of the organized fight against B. B. Comer, indicates the coercion of the Louisville & Nash-ville Railroad Company's employes in Alabama to defeat Mr. Comer, by an ill-concealed cowardly threat to reduce their wage if he was elected, and was written before the Louisville & Nash-ville Railroad Company had selected a candidate:

"February 22, 1904.

"G. E. Evans, General Manager:

"Dear Sir—Mr. B. B. Comer of Bir-mingham, is a candidate for President of the Alabama Railroad Commission. His platform is the radical and arbi-trary reduction of rates, extensive modification of car service rules and other changes in the regulation of the railroads which will very materially impair our revenues. It is important that our employes in Alabama should understand that it is not only of great importance to the Company to defeat Mr. Comer, but that their interests are also involved, because such heavy reductions as Mr. Comer avows he will make may force a reduction in wages.

"I suggest you arrange as promptly as practicable to have this matter brought up in a proper manner to the attention of our employes in Alabama, so as to insure a full appreciation on their part of the importance of work-ing in every way against Mr. Comer.

"As it has not yet been decided who is the strongest opponent of Mr. Co-mer, we cannot yet say whom our friends should support, but it seems important meanwhile to develop a strong anti-Comer sentiment.

"I suggest the particularly intelli-gent and loyal employes who are in a position to obtain information of value in the campaign be requested to watch the matter closely and report to Mr Geo. W. Jones, assistant to Dis-trict Attorney at Montgomery, any in-formation which they think would be of value as to the attitude of influen-tial persons of their community, the general sentiment, etc. Work of this character would be essentially valua-ble on the part of the loyal station agents of good judgment, as they are peculiarly in a position to know what is going on in their communities.

"Yours truly,

"WALKER D. HINES,

"First Vice-President."

Letter from Gen. Mgr. Evans.

"February 23rd, 1904.

"Mr. T. E. Brooks, Superintendent, Nashville, Tenn.:

"Dear Sir—Referring to my person-al letter of the 22nd, relative to the campaign for Presidency of the Alaba-ma Railroad Commission, I have to suggest to you that at your early con-venience you confer with the officers of the different departments under your charge and have an understand-ing with them as to the action neces-sary to place the question before the employes, agents, operators and oth-er employes along the line of road will have to be interviewed by the proper officer and time enough taken to ex-plain the arbitrary position Mr. Comer has taken and the importance to both the employes and the company of the interests involved. As the date of the election is some time off, I again ad-vise that the subject be handled care-fully as far as it may be practicable.

"Yours truly,

"G. E. EVANS,

"General Manager."

Superintendent Knox of Anniston.

"April 1, 1904.

"Mr. G. E. Evans, General Manager, Louisville, Ky.:

"Dear Sir—Your letter of March 30th, in regard to the election of Rail-road Commissioner of Alabama. I have already been advised by Col. Falkner's office that Mr. Smith was the man to support, and we are bring-about every effort to have a strong vote polled for him in every county that the road runs through.

"It is true that a large number of our white employes are not registered, and it is also true that an additional number have not qualified by paying poll tax, therefore they will be barred from voting. I have not found a single man in our employ who is going to vote against us, unless it be our com-pany surgeon at Gadsden, and I be-lieve that although he is a personal friend of Mr. Comer's will vote against him at the proper time.

"Yours truly,

"W. E. KNOX,

"Superintendent."

Orders from Gen. Mgr. Evans.

"February 24, 1904.

"Mr. B. M. Starke, Superintendent:

"Dear Sir—The First Vice-President will send you a number of copies of a printed circular, addressed to the peo-ple of Alabama, relative to the Rail-road Commission race. Copies will be sent direct from this office to agents, attorneys and surgeons. Please have copies distributed to all other em-ployes of the Company on your Divi-sion in Alabama. If you need addi-tional copies let me know how many.

"Yours truly,

"G. E. EVANS,

"General Manager."

General Manager Evans Orders a Line-Up For Smith.

"March 30th, 1904.

"Dear Sir—Please refer to my let-ters of February 22nd and 23rd rela-tive to the coming election for Presi-dent of the Alabama Railroad Commis-sion. I stated in the first letter that we were not able at this time to ad-vise who the friends of the railroad company should be asked to support in the race. I now have to advise that you make every effort to bring about strong support for Mr. John V. Smith. Those of you who have not done so, should at once communicate this in-formation to our employes and request them to vote for Mr. Smith and in all proper methods secure votes from their friends for him. It is the inten-tion to send you a list of the employes who are registered and have a vote. I understand that there are a large num-ber of white employes who are not registered. It is therefore all the more important that you make special ar-rangements by which those men who have votes will be able to cast them. Special attention should be given to this. Please acknowledge receipt.

"G. E. EVANS,

"General Manager."

Selection of Field Workers.

"March 22, 1904.

"B. M. Starke, Superintendent L. & N. R. R. Co., Birmingham, Alabama:

"Have you some one you can sug-gest work in Birmingham and vicin-ity until election day against Comer. He should of course have influence among employes as well as voters of other classes. Understand Pounds is at work. It is thought an additional man would help. Think it would be well to have some other class of em-ploye than as engineer.

"G. E. EVANS."

Employes Put to Work.

"Birmingham, Ala., March 23, 1904.

"G. E. Evans, Louisville:

"Your wire last night. After con-ference with Grubb it is thought Con-ductor Beasley and Brooks and also James working together and repre-senting the three divisions in doing so would bring about good results. Pound and Carlisle are working together as engineers. B. M. STARKE."

Then Evans wires release orders as follows:

"March 23, 1904.

"B. M. Starke, Superintendent L. & N. R. R., Birmingham, Ala.

"Telegram of 23rd received. All right. Relieve the parties so they can start in to work on the matter, say, beginning next Monday.

"G. E. EVANS."

Evans wires general orders as fol-lows to six division superintendents:

"Brooks, Starke, Knox, McKinney, Marshall, Saltmarsh. (Division super-intendents.) I assume you have made all necessary arrangements to enable employes, especially trainmen and others whose duties would take them away from their voting places, to vote on the eleventh. EVANS."

SYNOPSIS.

Comtesse Elise, daughter of the governor of the Mount, has chance encounter with a peasant boy. The "Mount," a small rock-bound island, stood in vast bay on the northwestern coast of France, and during the time of Louis XVI. was a government stronghold. Develops that the peasant boy was the son of Seigneur Desaurac, nobleman. Young Desaurac determines to secure an education and become a gentleman; sees the governor's daughter depart for Paris. Lady Elise returns after seven years' schooling, and entertains many nobles. Her Ladyship dances with strange fisherman, and a call to arms is made in an effort to capture a mysterious Le Seigneur Noir. He escapes. Lady Elise is caught in the "Grand" tide. The Black Seigneur rescues and takes her to his retreat. Elise discovers that her savior was the boy with the fish, Sanchez, the Seigneur's servant, is arrested and brought before the governor. Lady Elise has Sanchez set free. Seigneur and a priest at the "Cockles." Sanchez tells Desaurac that Lady Elise betrayed him, but is not believed. The Seigneur plans to release prisoners at the Mount. Lady Elise pleads with her father to spare the lives of condemned prisoners. Disguised as a peasant Lady Elise mingles with the people and hears some startling facts. A mysterious Mountebank starts a riot. He is arrested and locked up after making close observations of the citadel, and is afterwards summoned before the governor's daughter. The governor enters the room during the interview with the mountebank. As a miserable buffoon, the Mountebank is released by order of the governor. Desuarac overpowers guard and dons soldier's uniform. The Seigneur successfully passes guards and finds the "Great Wheel." Jacques, the jailer, forced to tread the wheel and bring up enemies of the governor. The Black Seigneur liberates the prisoners. The Seigneur again made prisoner. The Marquis de Beauvillers visits the Mount. The ladies and nobles inspect the dungeons.

He, nevertheless, insisted upon accompanying her; but, indicating the not distant door through which they had come, she professed to make light of objections, and when he still clung to the point, replied with a flash of spirit, sudden and passionate. It compelled his acquiescence; left him surprised for a second time that day; a little hurt, too, perhaps, for heretofore had their intimacy been maintained on a strictly ethical and charming plane. But he had no time for analysis; the others were drawing away to the left, into a side passage; and, with a last backward glance toward the retreating figure, the Marquis reluctantly followed the majority.

Despite, however, her avowed repugnance for that under-world, my lady showed now no haste to quit it; for scarcely had the others vanished than she stopped; began slowly to retrace her way in the direction they had taken. In the narrow route to the petit exil connected with the main aisle, a sudden draft of air extinguished her light; yet still she went on, led by the voices, and a glimmer afar, until reaching a room, low, massive, as if hewn from the solid rock, again she paused. Drawing behind a heavy square pillar, she gazed at the lords and ladies assembled in the forbidding place; listened to a voice that ran on, as if discoursing about some anomalous thing. Again was she cognizant of their questions; a jest from my lord, the Marquis; she saw that several stole forward; peered, and started back, half afraid.

But, at length, they asked about the oubliettes, and, chatting gaily, left. Their garments almost touched the Governor's daughter; lights played about the gigantic pillars, and like will-o'-the-wisps whisked away. Now, staring straight ahead toward the chamber they had vacated, my lady's attention became fixed by a single dot of yellow—a candle placed in a niche by the jailer's assistant. It seemed to fascinate; to draw her forward; across the portals—into the room itself!

How long she stood there in the faint suggestion of light, she did not realize; nor when she approached the iron-barred aperture, and what she first said! Something eager, solicitous, with odd silences between the words, until the impression of a motionless form, and two steady, cynical eyes fastened on her, brought her to an abrupt pause. It was some time before she continued, more coherently, an explanation about her apprehension on account of her father, which had entirely left her when she peered through the window of the guard-house.

"You thought me, then, but a common assasin?" a satirical voice interposed.

"My father hates you, and you—"

"My Lady has, perhaps, a standard of her own for judging!"

Unmindful of ironical incredulity, she related how she had been forced to take refuge in the wheel-house; how, when Sanchez had seen her, alarmed she had fled blindly down the passage; waited, then hearing them all coming, at a loss what else to do, had opened the wheel-house door; run into the store-room! What she had seen from there, disconnectedly, also she referred to; his rescue of the others; his remaining behind to bear the brunt—as brave an act as she knew of! Her tone became tremulous.

"Who betrayed me?" His voice, bold and scoffing, interrupted.

She answered. It was like speaking to some one in a tomb. "The soldier you bound gave the alarm."

From behind the bars came a mocking laugh.

"You don't believe me?" She caught her breath.

"Believe? Of course."

"You don't!" she said, and clung tighter to the iron grating. "And I can't make you!"

"Why should your Ladyship want to? What does it matter?"

"But it does matter!" wildly. "When your servant accused me that day in the cloister I did not answer nor deny; but now—"

"Your Ladyship would deny?"

"That I betrayed you at Casque? Here? Yes, yes!"

"Or at the wheel-house when you called to warn the soldiers?"

"You were about to—to throw yourself over!" she faltered.

"And your Ladyship was apprehensive lest the Black Seigneur should escape?"

"Escape?" she cried. "It was death."

"And the alternative? My lady preferred to see the outlaw taken—die like a felon on the gallows!"

"No; no! It was not that."

"What then?" His eyes gleamed bright; her own turned; shrank from them. A moment she strove to answer; could not. Within the black recess a faint light from the flickering candle played up and down. So complete the stillness, so dead the very air, the throbbings of her pulses filled the girl with a suffocating sense of her own vitality.

"I spoke to my father to try to get your cell changed," she at last found herself irrelevantly saying; "but could do nothing."

"I thank your Ladyship! But your Ladyship's friends will be far away. Your Ladyship may miss something amusing!"

"I did not bring them—did not want them to come!"

"No?"

Her figure straightened.

"Perhaps, even, they are not aware you are here?"

"They are not, unless—"

"Elise!" From afar a loud call interrupted; reverberating down the main passage, was caught up here and there. "Elise! Elise!" The whole under-world echoed to the name.

"I promised to meet them at the guard-house," she explained hurriedly. And hardly knowing what she did, put out her hand, through the bars, toward him. In the darkness a hand seized hers; she felt herself drawn; held against the bars. They bruised her shoulder; hurt her face. The chill of the iron sent a shudder through her; though the pain she did not feel; she was cognizant only of a closer view of a figure; the chains from him to the wall; the bare, damp floor—then, of a voice low, tense, that now was speaking:

"Your Ladyship, indeed, found means to punish a presumptuous fellow, who dared displease her. But ma foi! she should have confined her punishment to the offender. Those stripes inflicted on him, my old servant! Think you I knew not it was my Lady's answer to the outlaw, who had the temerity to speak words that offended—"

"You dream that! You imagine that!"

The warmth of his hand seemed to burn hers; her fingers, so closely imprisoned, to throb with the fierce beating of his pulses.

"I do not want you to think—I can't let you think," she began.

"Elise!" The searchers were drawing nearer.

She would have stepped back, but the fingers tightened on her hand.

"They will be here in a moment—"

Still he did not relinquish his hold; the dark face was next to hers; the piercing, relentless eyes studied the agitated brown ones. The latter cleared; met his fully an instant. "Believe!" that imploring wild glance seemed to say. Did his waver for a moment; the harshness and mockery soften on his face?

"Elise!" From but a short distance came the voice of the Marquis.

A moment the Black Seigneur's hand gripped my lady's harder with a strength he was unaware of. A slight cry fell from her lips, and at once, almost roughly, he threw her hand from him.

"Bah!" again he laughed mockingly. "Go to your lover."

Released thus abruptly she wavered, straightened, but continued to stand before the dungeon as if incapable of further motion.

"Elise! Are you there?"

"There!" Caverns and caves called out.

"There!" gibed voices amid a labyrynth of pillars, and mechanically she caught up the candle; fled.

"Here she is!" Coming toward her quickly out of the darkness, the Marquis uttered a glad exclamation. "We have been looking for you everywhere. Did I not say you should not have attempted to return alone? Mon Dieu! you might have been lost!"

CHAPTER XXVI.

A New Arrival.

Thrice had the old nurse, Marie, assisting her mistress that night for the banquet, sighed; a number of times striven to hold my lady's eye and attention, but in vain. Only when the adorning process was nearly completed and the nurse knelt with a white slipper, did she, by a distinctly detaining pressure, succeed in arresting, momentarily, the other's bright strained glance.

"Is anything the matter?" My lady's absent tone did not invite confidences.

"My Lady—" the woman hesitated; yet seemed anxious to speak. "I—my Lady," she began again; with sign of encouragement from the Governor's daughter, would have gone on; but the latter, after waiting a moment, abruptly withdrew the silken-shod foot.

"The banquet! It is past the hour!"

An instant she stood, not seeing the other or the expression of disappointment on the woman's countenance; then quickly walked to the door. Nor, as the Governor's daughter moved down the long corridor, with crimson lips set hard, was she cognizant of another face that looked out from one of the many passages of the palace after her—the face of a younger woman whose dark, spying eyes glowed and whose hands closed at sight of the vanishing figure!

The sound of gay voices, however, as she neared the banqueting hall, perforce recalled my lady to a sense of her surroundings; at the same time a figure in full court dress stepped from the widely opened doors. An adequate degree of expectancy on his handsome countenance, my lord, the Marquis, who had been waiting, lover-fashion, for the first glimpse of his mistress that evening, now gallantly tendered his greetings.

"My Father Hates You, and You—"

Seldom, perhaps, had the ancient banqueting hall presented a more festive appearance. Fruits and flowers made bright the tables; banners medieval, trophies of many victories, trailed from the ceiling; a hundred lights were reflected from ornaments of crystal and dishes of gold. On every hand an almost barbaric profusion impressed the guests with the opulence of the Mount; that few could sit in more state than this pale lord of the North, or few queens preside over a scene of greater splendor than their fair hostess, his daughter!

With feverish semblance of spirit, she took her place; beneath the keen eyes of his Excellency responded to sallies of wit, and only when between courses the music played, did her manner relax. Then, leaning on her elbow, with cheeks aflame and downcast eyes, she professed to listen to dainty strains—the sighing of the old troubadours, as imitated by a group of performers in costume on a balcony at one end of the hall.

"Charming!" The voice was the Marquis'; she looked at him, though her eyes conveyed but a shadowy impression. "You have quite recovered from your trip to the dungeons?"

"Quite!" With a sudden lift of the head.

"The dungeons?" His Excellency's gaze was on them. "I understand," looking at Elise, "you had a slight adventure?"

The glow on her cheek faded. "Yes." She seemed to speak with difficulty. "It—was too stupid!"

"To get lost? Say, rather, it was venturesome to have attempted to return alone."

"Just what I said to the Lady Elise!" broke in the Marquis. "And to have left us at a most interesting moment!"

"Interesting?" The Governor's steel-gray eyes regarded the speaker inquiringly.

"We were about to visit the Black Seigneur!"

"Ah!" A look flashed from his Excellency to his daughter; her glance failed to meet it.

Yet paler, she turned over-hurriedly to the Marquis. "What is that air they are playing now?" His response she heard not, was only conscious that across the board, the eyes of her father still scrutinized; studied!

At length, however, the evening wore away; a signal from his Excellency, and of one accord they rose and crossed to the star-illumined cloister adjoining. There at the entrance, my lady, who toward the last had listened with an air of distraction, hardly concealed, to her noble suitor's graceful speeches, held back, and, as the others went in, quickly effected her escape and hastened to her own apartments.

"At last!" She threw back her arms; breathed deeper. "Ah, mon pere, you are hard—unyielding as the iron doors and bars of your dungeons!" She pressed her hand to her forehead. "And I can do nothing—nothing!" she repeated; stood for a moment motionless and then mechanically moved toward the bell-rope at the other end of the chamber. But the hand she started to raise was arrested; through the slightly opened door to the adjoining apartment, she heard voices; words that caused her involuntarily to listen.

"I have made up my mind to tell her ladyship, Nanette!" The old nurse was speaking, in tones that betrayed excitement and anxiety. "It is, to say the least, embarrassing for me—your coming here! Yes, the daughter of Pierre Laroche, who emigrated to the English Isles! Who has always shown disloyalty for the monarchy at home!"

My lady, surprised, drew nearer.

"At least, aunt, you are frank!"

"I must be! Under ordinary circumstances, I should be glad; of course, the child of my dead sister ought to be welcome."

"So I thought," dryly, "when I stopped off a few days ago to see you, on my way to Paris."

"If you had let me know, it is I who would have gone somewhere, near by, to have seen you!" was the troubled reply. "His Excellency—what would he say if he knew? Pierre Laroche, who has been called friend of privateersmen, perhaps even of the Black Seigneur, himself! I should have gone to his Excellency at once and asked if he objected, only you begged me not, and—"

"Were you so anxious to be rid of me?" quickly.

"I shouldn't speak as I do now, perhaps, only—"

"Only?"

"Your conduct, since you have been here—"

"What do you mean?" The other's tone had a sudden defiant ring.

"It is not seemly for a girl of your age and condition to be out alone so late, nights!"

"I just went down into the town to get something," was the careless response, "and the sands looked so attractive—"

"That's no excuse! And now," the old nurse's voice showed a trace of embarrassment, "we've had our visit, and you had better carry out your plan of going to Paris."

"You want me to leave here—at once?" The girl drew her breath sharply.

"Perhaps it would be as well."

"You treat me as if—I were a spy!" angrily.

"I don't wish to do that," returned the woman in a constrained tone. "But now, after so many years of service with her ladyship! And her mother, the former lady of the Mount! If I should incur the Governor's displeasure—" the words died away. "If I can be of any help to you, if you need assistance—money—"

"Money!" Nanette's derisive laugh rang out; was suddenly hushed by the tinkling of a bell!

"Her ladyship!"

Caught the Answer, Which Came in Tones Deep and Strong.

Antiquity of Rheumatism.

It may not greatly console modern people, but a paper read at the Paris Academy of Science last week established the fact that rheumatism "was as common among our ancestors of the polished stone age as it is at the present time." Researches made by Dr. Marcel Badouin of a neolithic burial place at Vendrest left no doubt that thirty backbones among one hundred skeletons showed the effects of this disease. The skeletons of the women showed that the left side was the more often affected, while the men seem to show the effects on the right side. Dr. Badouin's paper concluded that the affection which nowadays is called osteoarthritis difformans is the oldest known disease. It has been found in the cave of a bear at Ariege, the oldest quaternary stratum, and also among the most ancient Egyptians and prehistoric Nubians.

"Yes. My wife insisted on m stopping it."

"She feared for your safety?"

SUFFERED AWFUL PAINS

For Sixteen Years. Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Moretown, Vermont.—"I was troubled with pains and irregularities for sixteen years, and was thin, weak and nervous. When I would lie down it would seem as if I was going right down out of sight into some dark hole, and the window curtains had faces that would peek out at me, and when I was out of doors it would seem as if something was going to happen. My blood was poor, my circulation was so bad I would be like a dead person at times. I had female weakness badly, my abdomen was sore and I had awful pains.

"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used the Sanative Wash and they certainly did wonders for me. My troubles disappeared and I am able to work hard every day."—Mrs. W. F. SAWYER, River View Farm, Moretown, Vermont.

Another Case.

Gifford, Iowa.—"I was troubled with female weakness, also with displacement. I had very severe and steady headache, also pain in back and was very thin and tired all the time. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I am cured of these troubles. I cannot praise your medicine too highly."—Mrs. INA MILLSLAGLE, Gifford, Iowa.

Wail From French Jurymen.

In France, as well as in England, jurymen have their grievances. The latest can easily be remedied. The French minister of justice has received an address signed by citizens figuring on the Paris jury lists, protesting against the bare appearance of the courts where they have to sit. They point out that if—tired of looking at the judges, counsel, witnesses and other parties to a suit—they turn their eyes upon the walls, nothing but an inartistic paper meets their gaze. In order to relieve this deadly monotony they beg that a print of Prudhon's famous picture, "Justice in Pursuit of Crime," may be hung in each court.

Haste Unnecessary.

"Hurry up that order!" said a traveler in a railroad eating house down south. "I'm afraid I'll miss my train!"

"Yas, sah, boss!" the waiter answered as he hurried off.

After what seemed an almost interminable wait to the traveler, he returned with the food. As he set it down he asked:

"Is you de gentlemans what feared he'd miss de train?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"Well, you needn't be feared ob dat, sah, no mo'."

"Good! Is it late?" the traveler inquired.

"No, sah, it's done gone!" was the waiter's affable and reassuring response.

794,006 BALES OF NEW CROP GINNED

COMPARED WITH 830,935 ON UP TO SEPTEMBER 1, LAST YEAR.

RESULT OF EARLY MATURITY

Farmers Exerting Themselves in An Effort to Beat the Boll Weevil.

Washington. — The greatest quantity of cotton ever ginned in the season prior to September 1 was reported by the census bureau when it was announced 794,006 bales of the growth of 1913 had been put out from the ginneries throughout the South.

The heavy ginnings for the first period are the result of an early maturing of the crop and an effort by farmers to beat the boll weevil in the opinion of census bureau statisticians.

All states reported an increased ginning for the period over last year's totals for that time with the exception of Texas and North Carolina. Last year to September 1 there had been ginned 5.4 per cent. of the entire crop; in 1911 the quantity was 5 per cent.

Figures compare with 793,935 bales last year and 353,011 bales in 1910, round bales included in the report are 7584, compared with 7434 for last year. Sea island bales include 430 compared with 232 last year. Ginnings by states to September 1 are:

DEMOCRATS ARE DEEEATED

Republicans Victorious in Fight for Congressman in Maine.

Portland, Me.—Speaker John A. Peters, republican of Ellsworth, was chosen to fill the congressional vacancy in the Third Maine district by a plurality of 553 over Mayor William A. Pattangall, democrat, of Waterville, with Edward M. Lawrence of Lubec, progressive, a poor third in the race.

The returns in this special elections from all but a small island plantation gave: Peters, 15,106; Pattangall, 14,553; Lawrence, 6,487.

The vote for president in November was: Wilson (democrat), 14,692; Roosevelt (progressive), 13,236; Taft (republican), 7,159.

The election, made necessary by the death of Forest Goodwin, the republican representative from that district, as fought out on national issues with speakers of national prominence stumping the district for the republican, progressive and democratic candidates. The voters responded to the appeal in larger numbers than voted at the last presidential election.

Republican leaders were jubilant over the success in view of the fight waged by the national administration to capture the district.

Mr. Pattangall, the democratic candidate, gave out the following statement:

"From the returns which I have received I should judge that Mr. John A. Peters was elected to Congress from this district by a plurality of 300 to 400 in a total vote of about 35,000."

ALL WANT TO NAME THE BABY

Advice Heaped in Profusion on Keepers of Big City's Zoological Gardens.

"The arrival of a baby animal or bird of any kind from a hippopotamus to a canary at either of the city zoos gives people all over town a chance to spread themselves in the matter of names," said a New York park keeper.

"Everybody wants the honor of naming the baby. Letters come from all parts of the city, and from the surrounding country suggesting names that the writers think appropriate. Patriotism runs high among our correspondents. If they had their way half the animals in the park would be called 'Abe' Lincoln, and a large part of the other half 'Teddy' Roosevelt. Regardless of the sex of the youngster, these two presidential appellations are urged upon us.

"Classical and Scriptural names also have their advocates. Hercules and Plato in particular are proposed.

"Of all the ladies of antiquity Niobe seems to have first call. Once in a while a writer of a sentimental turn of mind suggests a more modern romantic name. Out of consideration for the animal fancy names are taboo to start with. To call a beast of the jungle Violet or Queenie is enough to shame the most docile of infants into a reversion to type."

ECZEMA ON HEAD AND FACE

Reedy, W. Va.—"My baby boy when three weeks old took the eczema on the head and face. It broke out in pimples and first they looked like blisters and a yellow water would run from them. His head was perfectly raw and his hair was all gone. Everybody said he would never have any more hair. As the sores spread his hair came out. The breaking out itched so badly that we had to keep gloves on his hands to keep him from scratching his head and face. It caused disfigurement. He couldn't rest at night it burned and itched so badly.

BLIND SPELLS FOR A LONG TIME

Mrs. Largen Tells of Her Experience and How She Finally Came Out All Right.

Elkwood, Ala.—Mrs. Mattie Largen, of this town, writes the following letter for publication: "My health was very bad for a long time, on account of womanly trouble. I suffered a great deal, at different times, with headache, and pains in the bottom of my stomach, and had blind spells.

All of this made me so weak, I could hardly sit up. I tried treatment after treatment, but they did me no good.

Just as soon as I commenced taking Cardui, the woman's tonic, my health got better, and now I can do all my housework.

I will never be without Cardui in the house, and will recommend it to every lady that I can, for it has done me so much good, and I know it will do the same for others, if they will give it a trial."

The reason Cardui has attained such wonderful success in the treatment of diseases peculiar to women, is that it acts specifically on the womanly organs. It contains purely vegetable ingredients, of real medicinal merit, and in a safe, gentle way, helps build the womanly constitution back to health and strength.

Cardui is being successfully used by thousands of women every day. You won't regret giving it a trial.

KEY WAS UNDER DOOR MAT

Important Information for Which Conductor of Indianapolis Car Held the Passengers.

The South East street car was hurrying on its way toward the end of the line. Near the ten hundred block the single line branches out into a switch. The cars slow up and the passengers, generally known personally by the conductor, often have time to exchange pleasantries as the cars pass. A German woman was on the car coming downtown the other day. As the car slid on the switch and started to pass the other she got up excitedly and waved toward the car headed for the end of the line.

"Oh, Charlie! Oh, Charlie!" she shouted at a youth on the other car, evidently her son, on his way home. Charlie did not catch the signal at first and the cars gathered speed.

"Charlie! Charlie!" came the voice, this time more insistent. Then Charlie looked around and saw the other car going off the switch, with the woman still waving excitedly.

The motorman was aroused by this time and thinking that the summons was urgent, stopped the car and Charlie jumped off and made a beeline for mother.

She met him at the door. "I just wanted to say that the key is under the mat at the back door!" she yelled. And Charlie jumped off, waved at his conductor and caught his car amid the cheers of the other passengers.—Indianapolis News.

Banana Eaters.

Americans used to be called a nation of pie eaters. Today a more appropriate term would be a nation of banana eaters. The United States takes more than two-thirds of the bananas shipped to the handlers in the world.

Part of this pre-eminence in banana consumption is due to geography; the source of supply on the Caribbean is almost at our doors. Part is due to accident; a Boston skipper introduced the American public to this tropical fruit while it was still unknown in Europe. Whatever reason one may choose to give, the United States is the world's chief banana market, and though the use of this fruit is increasing abroad, the American boy remains the Jamaica grower's best friend.

Taking Calomel Means Staying Home for the day—Take Dodson's Liver Tone and Save a day's work.

If an attact of constipation or billiousness hits you, there's no need to take a dose of calomel and spend at least a day gettngi over the effects of it. Alred Drug Co sells the liver tonic, Dodson's Liver Tone that takes the place of calomel and starts a lazy liver without any bad after effects. Dodson's Liver Tone does all the good that calomel ever did, yet it is absolutely harmless to young people and old. It is a pleasant tasting vegetable liquid that will relieve constipation or sour stomach or other troubles that go along with lazy liver, without restriction of habit or diet. You don't leave off any of the things you regularly do when you take Dodson's Liver Tone.

Alred Drug Co. sells Dodson's Liver Tone and gives it a personal guarantee. They say, "a large boltte of Dodson's Liver Tone sells for 50 cents, and we will hand any person back his 50 cents if he tries a bottle and doesn't say that it does all that calomel ever does and does it pleasantly. Get the genuine Dodson's Liver tone and if you are not pleased with it we will give your money back with a smile.".

Lupus Worst Form of Skin Disease

Here is a Home Treatment that Overcomes even Worst Cases.

Blood Disorders are Banished by S. S. S.

A tiny pimple spreads to the side of the face and often covers the cheek and bridge of the nose. It is very destructive to the glands of the skin. No external treatments will overcome it as the cause of lupus is from impurities in the blood supply. The only known method of cure is to get the blood supply under the control of S. S. S., the famous blood specific. Its action is quite remarkable and has direct influence upon the network of small blood vessels and glands in the skin.

From the fact that S. S. S. is purely a botanical preparation, it is accepted by the weakest stomach and has great tonic influence in all the digestive organs. It is certainly a wonderful blood medicine, and is prepared direct from native materials gathered by the experts of the famous Swift Laboratory. Not one drop of minerals or drugs is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and insist upon having it. And if you desire skillful advice and counsel upon any matter concerning the blood or skin, write to the Medical Department The Swift Specific Co., 183 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga. Do not allow some zealous clerk to larrup the atmosphere in eloquence over something "just as good" as S. S. S. Beware of all substitutes. S. S. S. is what you need.

Check a cough or cold in the lungs before it develops a serious case. BALARD'S HOUSEHOLD SYRUP is an effective remedy for all soreness or congestion in the lungs or air passages. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

REV. F. M. WOODS DIES SUDDENLY

Aged Baptist Minister Passes Away Saturday Morning at his home at Maplesville

The Reverend Francis Marian Woods, one of the most prominent ministers of Chilton County died at his home at Maplesville at an early hour Saturday morning. His death came as a surprise, he having been in apparently good health for several days. On Friday night before his death he had closed a most successful revival meeting at his home church. Rev. Woods was well known in this county, having been engaged in the ministerial work here for 37 years. Up to the time of his death he was doing active pastoral work serving at Maplesville, Stanton, Plantersville and Billingsley Baptist Churches.

He was born in Darlington, S. C., March 3, 1846, and was married to Miss Sophia Gallaway of Montevallo Dec. 21, 1874. He served in the illustrious 10th Alabama Regiment during the Civil War, and at the time of his death was a member of the Odd Fellows, Woodmen of the World, and a Shriner.

Rev. Woods served for years as Pastor of the Clanton Baptist Church, and during his service here he enjoyed the purest love and reverence of the entire citizenship of the town. His many friends here learn of his untimely death with the deepest regret, and extend to his bereaved family their heartfelt love and sympathy.

Interment of his remains took place at Montevallo Sunday conducted jointly by the orders to which he belonged.

County Health Officer's Report

To the Honorable Probate Judge and Commissioners of Chilton County:

Gentlemen:—

I beg to submit my report for the month of August. As required by law, I inspected the county jail and found it to be undergoing repairs. I have no recommendations to make.

I visited the poor house and found same to be in good condition, otherwise than in need of screening, which I recommend should be done immediately.

All the doctors in the county, who are in active practice, have reported births and deaths except the following: Dr. W. E. Kay, Maplesville, Ala., and Dr. John L. Kincaid, Jemison, Ala.

The vital statistics are as follows:

Births, white 53, colored 7; total 60.

Deaths, white 15, colored 3, total 18.

The following cases of infectious diseases were reported, and have been properly looked after: Six cases of typhoid fever, and two cases of diphtheria.

Respectfully,
V. J. Gragg,
County Health Officer.

Marbury Schools Open Session.

The Marbury School opened Monday. The faculty includes Miss Mary Alice Craig, Miss Ruth Rebecca Hanson, Miss Mary Elizabeth Buford, Miss Rebecca Sandlin, Edward O. Moffett and the Rev. O. W. Greer. The Marbury school ranks among the first in this section as an institution of learning, having first-class buildings, church facilities and general surroundings. The promoter of the institution, Hon. D. H. Marbury, knowing the inadequacy of the average common schools has succeeded in his efforts to bring the school up to a high standard, and education, religious intellectual and musical, the languages are all combined and taught in an effectual manner.

County Farmers Union Meeting

The Chilton County Farmers Union will meet with Culp local No. 804 at Fairview, 8 miles south-west of Clanton on Sept. 18th and 19th, 1913. Several speakers will be with us and all are invited to come and be with us. All who are coming by rail notify W. O. Durbin, Clanton, Route 3.

Beat Eleven

Health here is very good at present.

Crops are bad in this section.

I want some information from anybody who can give it to me.

I want to know if it is lawful for eneligible voters to help call an election on the people. If not we will see about Beat 11.

Gentlemen, this is old John. I still stand firm and want to do what is right if I know it. I ask for the officers to look good on the stock law petitions that are going to be sent up for stock law in Beat 11, and see that none but legal voters have a say in ordering an election on it. Times are hard enough without it in this country. I ask for information from anybody. I will close hoping to hear from someone in the next paper. Jno. S. Dennis.

Teachers Passed Examination

In the last State teachers' examination for Chilton County which was held last July, the smallest percentage of the applicants ever recorded were successful. Out of a total of 35 who made application for certificates, only eight were granted. Following are the names of the successful ones: Arthur A. Teel, Howard L. Foshee, F. B. Williams, Jas. T. Vinson, Horace W. Davis, Jno. H. Anderson, Buford Lawrence. Colored, Calvin Peeples. Six of the successful ones were former teachers and were only applying for a renewal of their license.

FOURTH CLASS POSTMASTER EXAMINATION

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1913.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces that on the date named above an examination will be held at Verbena, Ala., as a result of which it is expected to make certification to fill a contemplated vacancy in the position of fourth class postmaster at this office at Verbena, Ala., and other vacancies as they may occur at that office, unless it shall be decided in the interests of the service to fill the vacancy by reinstatement. The compensation of the postmaster at this office was $564.00 for the last fisical year.

Age limit, 21 years and over on the date of the examination, with the exception that in a State where women are declared by statute to be of full age for all purposes at 18 years, women 18 years of age on the date of the examination will be admitted.

Applicants must reside within the territory supplied by the post office for which the examination is announced.

The examination is open to all citizens of the United States who can comply with the requirements.

Application forms and full information concerning the requirements of the examination can be secured from the postmaster at Verbena or from the U. S. Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

Applications should be properly executed and filed with the Commission at Washington at least 7 days before the date of the examination, otherwise it may be impracticable to examine the applicants.

Music at Old Soldiers' Home

An entertainment, consisting of music and recitations was given to the Old Soldiers at the Home in which Miss Sinestine Haltermann, as violinist, and Mrs. Jeff Falkner, as pianist, and Misses Lucie Simpson and McCord both recited. The two last mentioned young ladies were both very entertaining in their dialect and literary efforts.

Miss Haltermann is an accomplished violinist and seems to be at ease in both classical and music of familiar measure. Her movement, time and control of the violin is with that exactness and precision which convinces one of musical culture that the young lady is a musician of rare talent. W. P. T.

Notice to R. F. D. Patrons

Carriers Not Required to Pick up Loose Coins in Mail Boxes.

The attention of Postmasters at Rural Delivery Offices and of rural carriers is again directed to the fact that carriers are not required to collect loose coins faom rural mail boxes. Patrons should inclose coins in an envelope, wrap them securely in paper, or deposit them in coin-holding receptacle, so they can be easily and quickly taken from boxes, and carriers will be required to lift such coins, and when accompanied by mail for dispatch, attach the requisite stamps. Carriers who lift coins not so inclosed, wrapped, or deposited will do so purely as a matter of accommodation and not by any direction or requirement of the department.

Backing Up the Purchaser

IF we didn't have an eye to the future, and if we didn't care what you or anybody else was going to think of us, we could sell engines and other machines for much less money, but we could not put IH C quality into them. The kicks would start coming in right away, and soon there would be no market for I H C engines.

I H C engines stand for everything that is opposed to such a policy. The I H C way is to build always for the respect and good will of the American farmer, and to that end it has been successfully working for many years. The dealer who sells you an I H C engine expects on its merits to do business with you again. The purchaser of an buys security and safety with it. He banks on the many years of square dealing and the reputation back of all I H C machines. He knows it is the best engine bargain because it gives him efficient service in all kinds of farm work—pumping, sawing wood, spraying, running repair shop, grindstone, cream separator, etc. He knows that I H C responsibility for it lasts as long as the engine is in service on his farm.

I H C oil and gas engines operate on gas, gasoline, naphtha, kerosene, distillate, and alcohol. Sizes range from 1 to 50-horse power. They are built vertical, horizontal, portable, stationary, skidded, air-cooled and water-cooled. I H C oil tractors range in size from 6-12 to 30-60-horse power, for plowing, threshing, etc.

Look over an I H C engine at the local dealer's. Learn from him what it will do for you, or write for catalogues to

The L. & N. and the People

We have from time to time called on the people to co-operate with us in our constructive policy of developing the soil of the state along practical lines.

Many of the people have availed themselves of the services afforded by our experts. Such excellent results have followed that we are planning to enlarge the scope of the work. We want to know the individual needs of the people, so that we can meet and supply them.

The L. & N. is determined that its service in all departments shall meet the requirements of the people. Not only that, but the L. & N. plans for the future, seeking to anticipate the requirements of the people, so that it can be on hand first with the best service.

We have interested capital in the development of the territory; we have purchased and contracted for double tracks, track extension and rolling stock; we have built up a corps of loyal employees to serve the traveling and shipping public; we maintain a standard of transportation unexcelled by any railroad anywhere.

It would seem, as a selfish proposition, that we would be content now to go ahead and rake in the profits resulting from this work. That would be the hand-to-mouth way of operating a railroad. If we did that, the roadbed and equipment would depreciate, the territory would remain undeveloped, business would stagnate, and in a few years we would be without traffic.

The people have demonstrated willingness to take advantage of the work of development in which we are engaged. We hope to continue that work, and from time to time to extend it and enlarge the scope.

The L. & N. is a permanent property. It will be operated for years to come, to afford transportation facilities to future generations. This being true, it must be maintained upon the same high plane of excellence which has characterized its management in the past.

If this is done the people will prosper and the L. & N. will have freight and passenger traffic. We are, therefore, determined to co-operate with the people, and believe that the people will continue to co-operate with us.

We ask the people to think about these things, so that they will get a correct understanding of the larger functions of a railroad.

You don't save money when you buy cheap or big-can baking powder. Don't be misled. Buy Calumet. It's more economical—more wholesome—gives best results. Calumet is far superior to sour milk and soda.

NOT WORKING FOR ART'S SAKE

Violinist Certainly Had No Mistaken Idea as to His Ear for the Melody.

The Blue Forest orchestra had just finished an ear-piercing melody on the front lawn of "Berry Inn."

One of the guests approached the violinist and somberly inquired:

"Did you play by note?"

"Niver a note do I play, sir," replied Mr. Hennessey, mopping his fevered brow with a handkerchief of sanguinary hue.

"Ah, by ear, then?" said the summer boarder, with a smile of gracious interest.

"Niver an ear helps me," responded the other, returning his handkerchief to his capacious pocket.

"Indeed! May I ask how you—what you do play by, then?" persisted the inquirer.

"By main strin'th, be gorry!" said Mr. Hennessey, with a weary air, as he plunged his ancient instrument into its green bag; "an' it's mighty dry wurrk an' that's no mistake."

Japanese Courtesy.

A country where courtesy is a business, and business but a gentle avocation, reflects its peculiarity in the most trifling details of conduct. Such a country is Japan and such a detail recently came into notice when a city electric bureau of Tokyo asked the patrons on its street car lines how they preferred to be addressed when it was necessary to urge them to "move up." Out of the 2,719 suggestions sent in the Independent selects and translates six, as follows:

"Those not getting off, to the middle, please!"

"The middle is more comfortable!"

"I'm sorry, but all move on by one strap!"

"There's a pretty girl about the middle of the car!"

"A pickpocket has just come on board!"

The municipal authorities frowned somewhat upon the last three suggestions, but the conductors will be taught to use some of the other forms.

Is it possible that the Japanese hope to enjoy an efficient traction service on such terms? Apparently they hope to, and we pass along the Japanese idea as a helpful hint to the gentlemen who jerk a gong on the hear of our own street cars.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

LATE NEWS OF THE WORLD TERSELY TOLD.

SOUTH, EAST, NORTH AND WEST

Notes From Foreign Lands, Throughout the Nation and Particularly the Great South.

Southern.

Bent upon their first peaceful invasion of the South, thousands of Union veterans arrived to attend the forty-seventh annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic and allied organizations at Chickamauga, Ga. In honor of the occasion, Chattanooga, Tenn., is in gala attire. Survivors of the Union army are greeted with the same cordiality shown the United Confederate Veterans whose annual reunion was held in Chattanooga last May.

With the doomed woman sitting stolidly in her chair in the Jenkins county court house at Millen, Ga., staring blankly and unbelieving at the 12 jurors who had just pronounced her guilty, Judge F. A. Saffold, chief of counsel for Mrs. Edna Godbee, sentenced to imprisonment for life for the killing of Mrs. Florence Godbee, the bride of her divorced husband, on August 18, announced immediately after passing of sentence that he will ask for a new trial.

The government lock and dam at Mayo's bar, Georgia, in the Coosa river, now nearing completion, is threatened by a sudden rise of the river. The high water is endangering the dam, which is not yet completed, and the government engineers fear that the pressure of the waters will cause the dam to burst and sweep away the expensive construction which has, during the last two years, cost Uncle Sam $237,000.

A boiler explosion on the United States torpedo boat Craven, off Tybee, resulted in the death of Chief Water Tender McCaffray and Water Tender Milton and serious injuries to Chief Machinist's Mate Swinn, Water Tender Laughton and Oiler Gabbitt. The Craven was steaming into Savannah, Ga., under a good head of steam when the accident happened.

William Clark, a prominent farmer and landowner, living near Moultrie, Ga., was shot to death by his nephew, Fulton Crosby. Trouble has been narrowly averted for some time between the two, it is said, owing to a dispute concerning a land line which separated the plantations of the two parties. This ill-feeling culminated in the killing of Clark.

General.

One hundred Americans, including a number of women and children, refugees from Torreon, are reported to have fallen into the hands of rebels while proceeding overland to Saltillo, Mexico. The authorities at Saltillo decline to take the responsibility of sending a force to their rescue. The report comes from an official source at Saltillo. The American embassy has been advised.

Sensational stories are current regarding the conference between the government officials and mine leaders at Johannesburg, South Africa, which resulted in a settlement of the gold mine strike on the Rand on July 5 last. Some of the labor leaders assert that the ex-premier and the minister of the interior, mines and defense were compelled at the point of a revolver to sign the agreement.

The postal employees of London, England, connived at the theft of the $625,000 pearl necklace which mysteriously disappeared July 16 between Paris and London, was established by evidence presented at a hearing in London.

One negro was killed and another is believed to have been fatally wounded by a posse of citizens near Tamms, Ill., following the negroes' attempt to force a merchant of Tamms to accept a bill which had been raised from one to five dollars.

Governor Sulzer's transactions in Wall street from June 27, 1910, till they ceased—at least so far as one of the New York City brokers was concerned—on July 14 last were described under oath by Melville D. Fuller, who said he was Sulzer's broker, in a hearing held by the nine impeachment managers appointed by the assembly of the state of New York.

A death from bubonic plague occurred at Martinez, Cal., according to reports received by the state board of health from Dr. J. D. Long of the United States marine hospital service in San Francisco. At the same time a message was received by the board from its secretary, Dr. W. F. Snow, now in Washington, D. C., stating that the federal government had decided to appropriate $40,000 additional to fight the disease. The body of the Martinez victim was examined by Dr. D. H. Curry of the federal laboratory service in San Francisco.

The United States team won the Palma match with a score of 1,714, at Camp Perry, Ohio. The team from the Argentine republic was second with a score of 1,648, nine points ahead of Canada's score of 1,675. Sweden made 1,484 and Peru 1,465. The shooting was on the 800, 900 and 1,000 yard ranges. The scores are considered good, as a strong north wind blew in the face of the shooters. The winning score was six points below that made by the United States team last year, when it captured the prize in Canada. The Argentina shooters were highly complimented.

With the arrest of Rev. Hans Schmidt, assistant rector of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church, New York City, charged with the murder of Anna Aumuller, a domestic, the mystery surrounding the finding of parts of the dismembered body of a girl in the Hudson river was solved. Schmidt confessed.

Several lives were lost and much property destroyed by a cloudburst in Goldfield, Nev. Goldfield is located in a basin with the Malahal range to the south and two deep gulches striking the east and west sections of the town. Within an hour these gulches were roaring rivers, and all houses in their path were swept away. The dead are Mrs. L. E. Carmo and child, a laundress, two unidentified persons whose bodies were seen going down the gulches, but were not recovered.

"Big Tim" Sullivan, the former powerful East Side politician, who has been ailing mentally for a year, and who disappeared ten days ago from the home of his brother, Patrick H. Sullivan, in New York City, was killed by a train on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. Larry Mulligan, step-brother of the missing politician, identified the body of a man killed by a New Haven train at Pelham Parkway on August 31 as that of the missing East Side leader. Identification of the body was brought about by a policeman who knew Sullivan.

Harry Kendall Thaw, fugitive from Matteawan, is on American soil, after one of the most exciting days in his career. Thrust unexpectedly over the Canadian border, despite the writ of habeas corpus demanding his production before the king's bench in Montreal, he was for three hours a free man and during that time drove madly in an automobile for fifty futile miles through the hills of Vermont and New Hampshire. Near noon he ran into the arms of a New Hampshire sheriff and was taken to Colebrook, where he retained counsel to resist extradition.

German's ambition to maintain a a squadron of airships as an adjunct to the navy met a rude check in the destruction of the L-1 in a hurricane in the North sea. The loss of life is estimated at from thirteen to sixteen.

An all-steel train probably saved a score of lives when the Pennsylvania flyer, New York to St. Louis, was ditched by a raised rail near Wylie's Station, four miles west of New Madison, Ohio. Thirty-five persons were injured, three, it is believed, fatally. Running at a terrific speed to make up lost time, the fast train struck the defective rail about fifty feet from the approach to a small steel bridge. The engine hit one side of the bridge, tore it from its foundation and fell with it half a dozen feet to the creek bed.

Alexander M. Thackara, consul general at Berlin, Germany, has been selected for promotion to the post of consul general at Paris. President Wilson will send the nomination to the senate with others, which, administration officials say, will be promotions based solely upon the merit system regardless of politics. Dudley Field Malone, third assistant secretary of state, submitted to the president a long list of consular nomination. They will be required to take the regular examination and will be graded according to their merit

Washington.

The cost of living on June 15 was approximately higher than the average between 1890 and 1900, more than three per cent. higher than it was a year ago and nearly fifteen per cent. higher than it was two years ago. Investigations of retail prices in 40 cities conducted by experts of the bureau of labor show prices practically at the same level as last November, when the high records of the last quarter century were reached. Fourteen articles of food were investigated. Every one except sugar showed a marked advance; bacon, which led in the soaring, went up 128.5 per cent.

Senor Emanuel Da Zamacona, former Mexican ambassador to the United States, who is supposed to be charged with the task of reopening the negotiations between the United States and the Huerta administration for a peaceful solution of the troubles in Mexico, arrived, with Senor Algara, charge d'affaires of the American embassy. Senor Da Zamacona did not reveal the character of his mission. He maintained that he had come to the United States on "private business."

Proposed advances of five per cent. in freight rates on all commodities except grain and coal will be submitted to the interstate commerce commission by the fifty-two railroads operating in the East. There will be a carload or more of the tariffs filed by all railroads in Eastern classification territory. The proposed changes will be based on the present first class rate between New York and Chicago, the increase being five per cent. flat. Upon the request of the commission the railroads will hold up the changes until the commission shall have had opportunity thoroughly to investigate them.

News that Dominican gunboats were shelling the city of Puerta Plata, endangering American lives and property, caused hurry orders to go from Washington to the cruiser Des Moines, which had been preparing to sail from Guantanamo, Cuba, for Santo Domingo since reports of the latest revolution there were received several days ago. The cruiser has coaled and sailed directly for Puerto Plata. In the meantime communication between Puerto Plata and the outside world had been broken, and no word had come to the state department.

SURVIVORS OF BLUE ASSEMBLE IN DIXIE

SECOND INVASION OF SOUTH VASTLY DIFFERENT FROM 50 YEARS AGO.

CHATTANOOGA IS CROWDED

"Yanks" Are Entertained in "Johnny Reb" Homes — Excellent Program.

Chattanooga, Tenn. — Held for the first time in real Southern territory and in close proximity to some of the most famous battle fields of the Civil war, the Forty-seventh annual national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, was officially opened with a reception at the Hotel Patten. At the reception, the veterans who wore the blue were welcomed to Dixie by the citizens of Chattanooga.

The second invasion of the "Sunny South" evinced a far different spirit than that which actuated the northerners a half century ago. This time their mission is one of peace and friendship. The old animosities are forgotten, and on the reception committee, which welcomed the parts of the country, were many men of prominence in the Confederate army.

Not only is this the red letter encampment of the G. A. R., because it is the first meeting south of the Mason and Dixon line, but the present year also marks the semi-centennial of the battle of Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge, all within a short distance of this city. In fact, the exact anniversary of the battle of Chickamauga falls on the last two days of the encampment, September 19 and 20. Adam Foust, president of the Chickamauga Survivors' Association, has issued a call for all survivors of the battle, whether they fought under the Stars and Stripes or the Stars and Bars, to assemble on the battlefield on Sept. 20, when appropriate exercises commemorative of the battle will be held. This time "Johnny Reb" will meet "Yank" with a handclasp and a smile, rather than with the loaded musket and bayonet as in '63.

Because of the limited hotel accommodations, the homes of private citizens have been thrown open. Most of the arriving visitors had secured their accommodations several weeks ago and they are being conducted to their places of residence for the week with the utmost despatch. The same plan of caring for the vast crowds as was used during the reunion of the United Confederate Veterans last May is being pursued in administering to the wants of their one-time enemies. Many prominent Confederate veterans have served on the various committees and the success of the encampment, which is already assured, is due in no small measure to the work of these veterans, who have thrown themselves into the task of entertaining the men who once faced them on the battlefield. The encampment will, in a way, be a reunion for the veterans of both the North and South.

SHIPWRECKS SHOW DECREASE

Hurricane Warnings Issued by United States Weather Bureau Given Credit.

Washington. — Hurricane warnings issued by the United States weather bureau have resulted in marked decreases in shipwrecks in recent years, despite the increase in shipping, according to the department of agriculture, which called attention of mariners to the fact that the season was now at its height.

The bureau's latest efforts to provide ample warning of the approach of tropical storms have been through wireless reports of wind, weather and other conditions from vessels plying in the gulf and Carribean waters and from the bureau's land stations in the West Indies.

"During the last 35 years," the statement says, "about 88 per cent. of the storms have occurred during August, September and October, September showing a slightly greater number than any of the others."

SAVED FROM ARABS BY NEW YORK SKYSCRAPER

THE REV. JAMES C. HANKS, missionary, stepped from the gangplank of the Atlantic Transport liner Minneapolis in New York, took a surface car over to Broadway, went to Twenty-third street, stared up at the lofty height of the Metropolitan tower, and laughed.

If you had been close enough you perhaps would have noted that it was a queer, mirthless little laugh. Then the Rev. Mr. Hanks went over close to the stone rise of the great building and patted it. He had reason to. It was that building that had saved his life three months before as he sat in a tent in the middle of the Arabian desert with thirty murderous Arabs squatting on the ground around him and monotonously whetting the long knives with which they would cut him into small pieces. Could you blame him for a feeling of friendliness for that cold, ruthless granite which he caressed?

Missionary Hank tells it thus: "I had been working among them for three years—the desert Arabs," he began. "I'd learned their language and their customs, and I was practically one of them, riding and pitching my tent and working with them like a brother. And they were brothers worthy of the name, those wild, free men to whom honor is the first consideration. New York could take many a lesson from them in morals and in respect toward women.

"One night we pitched camp after a hot day's ride, and as darkness fell we were suddenly aroused by a courier from another of our camps with the news that the Aneza, a warlike and murderous tribe, had attacked and carried off several women and children.

"That was a signal for all our able-bodied men to ride to the other camp and try to recover the kidnaped women and children. In five minutes the beat of the hoofs of the ponies had died out in the dark, and I was the only man left in our camp.

"I crawled into my tent and went to sleep. It must have been near midnight when I was awakened by the sound of hoofs. I imagined our own men returning and paid no attention until the flap of the tent was laid back and five strange Arabs entered. Each held a long knife, and before I could roll off my blanket these knives were forming a circle within an inch of my throat. I lay still.

"Silently more and more men entered the tent, all with the long desert knives. I knew then they were the Aneza. They had learned of the departure of our men, and had slipped into the camp to steal in their absence.

For a time not a word came from the lips of this ferocious desert band of marauders, bent upon pillage and murder. Stealthily they crept about the tent examining our luggage. They broke open my chest and tumbled out upon the blanketed ground the few treasured books I possessed, the trinkets I had saved as mementoes of my journeys through the wild regions, a few gifts that served to remind me of pleasant memories among the tribes in which I had passed months of pleasurable labor.

The gaudy trinkets of American manufacture they pounced upon like children turned loose in a toy shop. They were quick to appropriate extra blankets, boots and a couple of saddles. But all the while I could have no doubt from their men, and I doubted not their actions when my nationality and my mission should be discovered.

"One huge black fellow seemed to be the leader. Then, for the first time, in the flare of a torch he carried, they seemed to notice that my skin was white. In an instant the discovery created the greatest excitement. Several lunged forward with their knives, as though to cut it short right there, but the chief waved them back. ert for all the attention they bestowed upon me. The search over, they gathered around more closely. Meantime it is needless to say I was frightened. I knew the ferocity of these wild

All this time but little attention had been paid to my presence. I might be a native of the desactions that they were hunting for gold. They were convinced the party was well supplied with money and proposed to have it. They were determined on that score, and they held life worthless.

"I did not know then, though I learned afterward, that they had seen but one white man before. That man never has come out of the desert. He was slain as a sacrifice. It looked as though I was about to share his fate.

"The chief addressed me in Arabic, and was surprised when I answered him in the same tongue.

"'We must kill you,' he said, 'but there is no hurry. We shall wait.'

"As though acting on the suggestion, the thirty black fiends squatted in a semi-circle about me and fell slowly and deliberately to sharpening their knives.

"'There is no hurry,' the chief said again. 'We must do so before the coming of day, that is all.'

"Then in a flash it came back to me that I had heard from men of our own tribe that the Aneza were sun worshippers, and that it was the greatest of all religious crimes among them to commit murder when the sun—their god—was in the ascendancy. Like a shot it came to me that if I could delay the execution until sunrise my life would be saved. But how?

"The hope seemed futile. I wondered what time it was. I knew it was after midnight. As I lay on my blankets, watching those hideous black faces that were doubly black and grotesque in the weird flame of the torches, I began to work my hand slowly toward my pocket where I kept my watch. I got it out and dropped my eyes to the face. In the gloom I could make out the hands pointing to 2 o'clock. It was nearly three hours to sun-up. There was not the ghost of a chance of holding them off until then.

"But, just the same, I kept trying to figure it out in my mind—to devise some plan to that end. And meanwhile I began to witness the services that were to precede my death. Squatting there with their black legs crossed that grim semi-circle of fiends began to rock slowly back and forth from the hips, humming a strange, uncanny, minor monotone. Out in front the big chief led them. It was the Aneza sacrifice prelude, so to speak. And I was to be the sacrifice.

"I tell you, it got into my nerves. I don't think I am a natural coward, but half rythmically, keeping time, as it were, to the beating chant of those voices and the sway and swing of the black bodies, I heard my teeth begin to click.

"I glanced over my shoulder to the other flap of the tent. As I did so the Arab chief seemed to divine my thought, for at a motion of his hand, the semi-circle moved forward a couple of feet closer and, squatting again, went on with the gruesome ceremonies. There was no chance of escape by flight, that was certain.

"But never for a moment did I stop thinking; struggling to drag an idea out of the confusion in my brain. And all the time the Aneza went on whetting the knives and crooning and swaying.

"Half an hour, then an hour went by. I counted the minutes, for I knew they measured the time left me yet to live. And then, suddenly, I turned cold. My heart leaped and something filled my throat. It was the idea I had been combing my brain for, and it was a chance, ever so faint, perhaps, but still a chance.

"Across the tent, not ten feet distant, was my trunk with my stereopticon lantern, and my slides—slides I had made of New York city, of the Metropolitan tower and Broadway, and all the other sights of home. Could I but—! I must! Speaking in Arab, I addresesd the chief. Before the time came to make the sacrifice I had something to show them—something the like of which they had never seen. Would they like to see it?

"Breathless, I awaited the answer. There was silence; then it came. The chief would like to see. I pointed to the trunk. They brought it to me. I unpacked the lantern and set it up, the long knives were following me not two inches away the while. The side of the tent was the screen. I lighted the lantern and dropped in the first slide. Across the circle of light floated in color the great Metropolitan tower. As it did so the muttering murmur of the death prelude wavered and died out.

"There was a silence; then sharp words of mystery, or wonder, of—fear. Working swiftly, I killed the exterior of the tower and shot into its place a view of its interior, then another and another. I followed with pictures from its top—pictures of the river, of Broadway below, of motor cars tearing along with no visible means of locomotion, of the loom of giant skyscrapers in the distance, of huge bridges across the East river, of steamboats and liners running out of the harbor, of Miss Liberty on Bedloe's Island and of the marvelous tangle of Coney Island.

"The death prelude was forgotten. The fear gave place to an ever-growing wonder. The semi-circle leaned forward, a mass of peering, crowding black heads and black shoulders; caught, lost, enmeshed in the spell of the old magic lantern.

"I alone, I believe, remembered the present. My murderers were too engrossed, too astounded by what they saw, to remember. But I prayed only that the pictures would hold out; that the spell would not fail. It was a trying time. Afterward I found I had bitten half through my lip, but at the time I felt nothing. I dared not pause to glance at my watch, but still I held them there as the minutes dragged to hours.

"At last the final picture went into the lantern. For a desperate instant I felt my heart go down. What could I do? Would they remember if I repeated? Would they—— But before I could complete the thought in through the canvas entrance of the tent there stole a thin, golden thread. It crept across the floor and rested on the face of the black chief. It was the sun!

"With a short cry the chief jumped to his feet. The others followed, talking excitedly. For a moment they glanced at me, but I sprang to the flap of the tent and tore it back.

"'The day!' I shrieked in Arab, and at the cry they fled pell-mell from the tent and beyond the camp to their horses."

The Rev. Mr. Hanks stopped and smiled.

"When they were gone," he said, "I sat down on the ground and cried."

HUMOR OF BAD WRITING.

Sheridan's writing was a scandal to his schoo and puzzled the town. He once wrote a "pass" to Drury Lane, and the doorkeeper stopped its bearer and immediately pronounced it to be a forgery, because he could decipher it! To make matters worse, Sheridan was also uncertain in his spelling. A "which," a "where," and a "whether" in his hands, for instance, were as often as not deprived of their "aiches," and a "thing" was to him always a "think" and nothing more.

The atrocious writing of celebrities recalls the claim once made on behalf of Baron Bramwell that he wrote three hands: "One which he alone could read, another which his clerk could read and he couldn't, and a third which nobody could read," and the last-named was his usual style.

Lord Curzon, when a young man at college, once found his bad handwriting stand him in good stead. Writing two letters, one to a relative, the other to a chum, he encloses them in the wrong envelopes. It chanced that in the second letter he had made some uncomplimentary reference to his relative, and on discovering the mistake he had made he awaited developments with anxiety. There presently came a letter from the uncle. "I have tried to decipher your epistle," it ran, "but your writing is so atrocious that I cannot make head or tail of it. However, I guess the drift of it to be that you need some money, you rogue, so I enclose a check."

Bad handwriting is not always a handicap in life. The late Lord Goschen once said that his father attributed the foundations of his fortune to the fact that he was abliged to found a firm because he wrote such a bad hand that no one would take him for a clerk. Of Goschen himself, Mr. Arthur Elliot records that "his handwriting got steadily worse, and in his latter years he might have spelt as he chose. At length his script became undecipherable, even by himself. He could not, when speaking in parliament, make out what it was that he had put on paper, and he thus came in later days to abandon almost entirely his old practice of making notes."

Professor Blackie had a peculiar "fist." An elderly compositor on the Scotsman, however, knew nearly all about the professor. One night there was a particularly difficult manuscript from the professor. It was put before the expert, with an inquiry as to whether or not he could set it. "I could not do that," said the veteran from Inverary; "but if I'd ma pipes here I could play her."—Tit-Bits.

AMBER AS A MEDICINE.

The ancients employed amber as a medicine, and it is still prescribed by physicians in France, Germany and Italy. Several chemists in Paris keep it constantly in stock. It has been worn by ladies and children from time immemorial as an amulet, sometimes carved into "amphorae," and has been pronounced of service, either taken internally or worn around the neck. Callistratus gave the name of chryselektron to amber of a clear golden color, which, worn around the neck, cured ague, ground up with honey and rose oil it was a specific for deafness and with Attic honey for dimness of sight. But to come to more recent times, Perera says in the third edition of his "Materia Medica," published in 1853, that amber was not even then employed as a medicine in this country, but that "it was formerly used in chronic catarrhs, amennorhoea, hysteria, etc., and was given either in the form of a powder, in doses of ten grains to a drachm, or in that of a tincture, a formula for both of which is contained in some of the European formularies.—Family Doctor.

JUST MEANNESS.

"I wish I had Rockefeller's money."

"Would the possession of Rockefeller's money make you happy?"

"I don't know. I was thinking how unhappy it would make Rockefeller."

HIS CLASS.

"If the dachshund were the king of dogs, what kind of a class would he be in?"

"I suppose, a sort of squatter sovereignty."

Women Avoid Operations

When a woman suffering from some form of feminine disorder is told that an operation is necessary, it of course frightens her.

The very thought of the hospital operating table and the surgeon's knife strikes terror to her heart, and no wonder. It is quite true that some of these troubles may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but thousands of women have avoided the necessity of an operation by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This fact is attested by the grateful letters they write to us after their health has been restored.

These Two Women Prove Our Claim.

Cary, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely staighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and was fat and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your medicine."—Mrs. Hayward Sowers, Cary, Me.

Charlotte, N. C—"I was in bad health for two years, with pains in both sides and was very nervous. If I even lifted a chair it would cause a hemorrhage. I had a growth which the doctor said was a tumor and I never would get well unless I had an operation. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I gladly say that I am now enjoying fine health and am the mother of a nice baby girl. You can use this letter to help other suffering women."—Mrs. Rosa Sims, 16 Wyona St., Charlotte, N. C.

Now answer this question if you can. Why should a woman submit to a surgical operation without first giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial? You know that it has saved many others—why should it fail in your case?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

THE UNION
AND BANNER.

Published Every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton County, Alabama.
UNION PUBLISHING CO.
W. M. WYATT, Editor.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.00.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

Business is picking up—with those who advertise in the Union-Banner.

George B. Ward won a decisive victory for the Presidency of the City Commission of Birmingham.

The cotton season is getting on in full blast now. The combined output of the four gins in Clanton last Saturday was more than two hundred bales.

The passage of the Tariff Bill in Congress means that Oscar W. Underwood will soon enter the Senatorial race in Alabama. Snch an action on his part will mean an instant settlement of many minor uncertainties and probable possibilities that have so far infested the campaign.

Though severely injured by the untimely death of its President, Dr. Jas. K. Powers, the State Normal school at Florence opened on September 10th with a good; enrollment and the strongest body of students that have applied for admission in the history of the institution. Prof. W. R. Harrison is acting President.

CORN CLUB PRIZES.

Some weeks ago it was stated in the columns of The Union-Banner that no prizes would be given in the Corn Club movement this year. This assertion was slightly wrong and misleading, owing to a misunderstanding of Mr. T. E. Williams, by the Editor. Mr. Williams did not state that there would be no prizes awarded to boys of the corn club in Chilton County. They will continue to receive prizes from the County, and the County Fair, and in fact from all sources that have heretofore given prizes.

But it is not with these former prizes that Mr. Williams has to do. What he had reference to was the new movement instituted at the last teacher's institute, the purpose of which was to add additional prizes to those already pledged. He wanted to state that the teachers movement could not get their affairs arranged for giving prizes this season, but that in no way alters or changes the prizes which are offered by the County or any other party.

The teachers of the County aim to add their strength to the prize movement and help to create a greater interest in the Corn Club movement. But they were organized a little too late to get up prizes for this years work. They will be on time next year, and will add their prizes to those of the County Fair, and the County Commissioners, and when all these agencies get their prizes lined up we predict some "tall" hoeing and plowing among the boys in order to capture them.

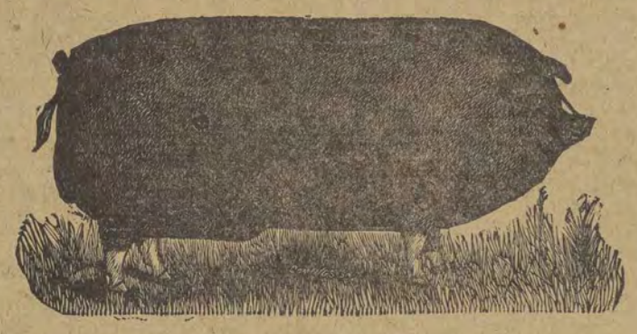
DARBYS FLUID
PREVENTS AND CURES



HOG CHOLERA

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

Pen up your hogs when cholera is in the neighborhood. For each ten hogs put one quarter of a bottle of Darbys Fluid in the daily supply of water. Clean out troughs every day before watering. Do not feed slop or any liquid food. Feed moderately on chops or other light stuff. Continue this treatment for two weeks, you can then turn your hogs out;—they are insured against cholera.

READ THE PROOF.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:
This is to certify that we have used Darbys Fluid for the prevention and cure of Hog Cholera. Last summer we used it on fifty head of hogs and we lost only nine. These nine consisted of a brood sow and litter of eight pigs. We believe we could have saved the entire herd had we started using Darbys Fluid earlier.
GANTT BROS. STORE CO., Little River, Ala.

GENTLEMEN:—
Hogs were dying of Cholera by the thousand in my neighborhood They had it all around me but I saved all mine by putting Darbys Fluid in their drinking water and not letting them have any water without Darbys Fluid in it. Its a great preventive. I keep it on hand all the time. Its good for a hundred purposes.
J. A. STANALAND, Pidcock, Ga.

DARBYS FLUID has many uses about the household. It destroys germs or bad odors about the house and purifies the air of living or sleeping rooms. It heals wounds, sores, cuts or galls on human or animal flesh. It is a fine addition to the bath for cleansing the body or feet of disagreeable odors. If used in the water for brushing the teeth it sweetens the breath. As a disinfectant for the sick-room in contagious diseases and for safe-guarding the health of the family when such diseases are prevalent in the neighborhood it is worth it weight in gold.

A Letter From Mr. J. B. Jones

length, though the greater part of them are broken up into short pieces and ends are almost smooth. One log forms a bridge across a small canyon or gulch twenty feet deep; log lies diagonally across and measures 44 feet between points at which it rests on sides of canyon and more than sixty feet of upper part lies on west bank total length 111 feet, and a coating of sand stone still ancheres and at base is 4 feet in diameter but thickness of incrustation of sand stone not exactly known and at the summit 18 inches in diameter and the whole of it was once deeply imbedded in sand stone.

Petrification is the rotting of wood in water containing silicates in solution and as the particles of wood decay it is replaced by silicaths and the body apparently is changed to stone. The various colors are due to iron and magnese. Near the forest is the remains of the old Aztec building and mesa which covered near an acre of ground and on faces of the rocks on the bluffs east and west of the old building are the hieroglyphic writings and crude pictures, which I presume related their domestic history. One drawing (carved picture) resembled the sun, another very large drawing resembling the human head with ferocious looking teeth and eyes which might have represented to them the adversary of man. One picture like the stork of the present day. One picture I think was a snake partly in coil, head near a man's leg. Another, two grown goats and eleven small goats. At a rough guess I would say there were two thousand marks and pictures on the rocks.

Of the part of Arizona I passed there is hardly one acre in cultivation to the twenty thousand acres I saw. The most pregnant expression that I heard describes Arizona is: more rivers and less water; more cows and less milk; more heat and less fuel; see further and see less than any state in the union.

I passed within 40 miles of an old extinct volcano and it was almost a solid bed of lava extending to the railroad and some places further away from the place where it was thrown out. I spent Saturday night and Sunday in Albuquerque, however found nothing startling there. Arrived in Santafe Sunday night and spent Monday looking thro' the Museum and other places of historic note. The Museum and School of American Archaealogy is in the Old Palace of the Governor's and to be preserved for ever as a monument to the Spanish founders of civilization of the south-west. There are different rooms holding the relics of the different tribes, also paintings and pictures of their old ruined landscape of the mountains and canyons in their surrounding country. There are cases and shelves containing their crude implements of domestic use, and also implements of war. Of the many things are the ancient pottery and clay rests on which pottery vessels were shaped. Also stone implements such as motars, metates, smothing stones cooking stoves, pigment stones, plugs prayer-plume holders, arrow shaft smoothers, grooved axes and hammers; one of the axe-heads over a foot in length: another is perhaps the largest aboriginal axe-head ever found. It is a foot long, seven inches broad and four inches thick. Case also contains two bell stones which give a musical sound when struck, which was probably used in their ceremonies. Another case contains bones that have been cut into various shapes for forks, sewing needles and uses in that line. The Palace (museum building) contains the historical room in which Lew Wallace wrote the latter part of Ben Hur at the time he was governor of New Mexico.

I went into the San Miguel Church which many date the foundation back to 1541. Upper portions of the walls were destroyed by the Indians in 1680; rebuilt by De Vargas in 1695. Father Juan DeJesus killed by Indians in 1680 is buried under the floor, also De Vargas who died in 1704, and many other noted persons of the Catholic faith who lived many years ago are buried under the church. The church contains an image of Christ; Mary, the mother of Christ, Joseph and many other things in that line. Also a bell that was cast and hammered in Spain in 1356 and weighs 780 lbs. I saw what is considered the oldest house in the U. S., that was inhabited by white man, it was the residence of Judean Chief Tiguex 1540, now Santafe, N. M. Coronado with 1,100 men in 1540 made this his headquarters till he returned to Mexico in 1543. There is one old deserted dilapidated chester of building where the pottery etc. has been excavated, and indications show that there has been three distinct races or tribes that have inhabited it.

There is one district Pajarita Park near Santafe that it is claimed that if all the cliff dwellings were placed side-by-side one story high, it would make a row of buildings one hundred miles long—Judge McPhee.

There is one room in the Museum which contains specimens that illustrate the culture of the Pajaritans. J. B. JONES.

ACTS ON THE LIVER

Dodson's Liver Tone Livens Up the Liver—Is More Than a Mere Laxative.

Calomel was for years the only known medicine that would stimulate the liver. But calomel is often dangerous, and people are not to be blamed for being afraid of it.

Within the last few years many medicines have been put out to be used instead of calomel, but their effect is on the bowels—not on the liver. Alred Drug Co. says that the only real liver medicine to actually take the place of calomel is Dodson's Liver Tone, a mild, harmless vegetable liquid that Alred Drug Co. recommended to take the place of calomel and which gives prompt relief in cases of constipation, biliousness and sluggish liver.

So confident are Alred Drug Co. that they give their personal guarantee with every 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone. You can be sure that you are getting Dodson's by asking at this store if they are giving you the medicine they personally guarantee to refund money on if unsatisfactory.

SYNOPSIS.

Comtesse Elise, daughter of the governor of the Mount, has chance encounter with a peasant boy. The "Mount," a small rock-bound island, stood in vast bay on the northwestern coast of France, and during the time of Louis XVI. was a government stronghold. Develops that the peasant boy was the son of Seigneur Desaurac, nobleman. Young Desaurac determines to secure an education and become a gentleman; sees the governor's daughter depart for Paris. Lady Elise returns after seven years' schooling, and entertains many nobles. Her Ladyship dances with strange fisherman, and a call to arms is made in an effort to capture a mysterious Le Seigneur Noir. He escapes. Lady Elise is caught in the "Grand" tide. The Black Seigneur rescues and takes her to his retreat. Elise discovers that her savior was the boy with the fish. Sanchez, the Seigneur's servant, is arrested and brought before the governor. Lady Elise has Sanchez set free. Seigneur and a priest at the "Cockles." Sanchez tells Desaurac that Lady Elise betrayed him, but is not believed. The Seigneur plans to release prisoners at the Mount. Lady Elise pleads with her father to spare the lives of condemned prisoners. Disguised as a peasant Lady Elise mingles with the people and hears some startling facts. A mysterious Mountebank starts a riot. He is arrested and locked up after making close observations of the citadel, and is afterwards summoned before the governor's daughter. The governor enters the room during the interview with the mountebank. As a miserable buffoon, the Mountebank is released by order of the governor. Desuarac overpowers guard and dons soldier's uniform. The Seigneur successfully passes guards and finds the "Great Wheel." Jacques, the jailer, forced to tread the wheel and bring up enemies of the governor. The Black Seigneur liberates the prisoners. The Seigneur again made prisoner. The Marquis de Beauvillers visits the Mount. The ladies and nobles inspect the dungeons. Elise visits the Seigneur.

CHAPTER XXVI.—(Continued.)

For a few moments the Governor's daughter, now standing in the center of her apartment, heard no sound from the other room; then a timid footstep approaching the door was followed by an indecisive rap.

"Your ladyship rang?" inquired Marie, turning a half-guilty glance on her mistress.

"Yes! Did I hear voices, as I came in?"

"Did your Ladyship? I mean I was going to speak to your Ladyship. It's my niece!" suddenly. "On her way to Paris!"

"Your niece!" The Governor's daughter looked at the other. "And you—are pleased?"

"Your Ladyship—" The woman flushed.

"Of course, though, you must be! She is out there? Show her in!" quickly.

"But—"

"At once!"

"Very well, my Lady!" Marie's manner, however, was depressed as, stepping to the threshold, reluctantly she beckoned.

Erect, with mien almost antagonistic, Nanette entered and stood before the Lady Elise. The latter did not at once speak; for a few moments the observant brown eyes passed in quick scrutiny over her visitor; noting the aggressive brows; the broad, strong face; the self-assertive pose of the well-developed figure. A woman to do —to dare!—What?

"You wished to see me?" Nanette first spoke. Marie lifted an expostulatory hand. What bad manners, thus to dare! But my lady did not seem to notice. "You are from one of the islands?" she began.

"Yes."

"Say 'my Lady'!" broke in the old nurse. "I trust your Ladyship will pardon—"

"Never mind, Marie!" with a quick gesture. "Your aunt tells me you are on your way to Paris?"

"Yes—my Lady!" with the slightest hesitation before the last two words. "To seek a situation as lady's maid!"

"When are you leaving?"

"Tomorrow morning, your Ladyship!" interposed Marie quickly.

"So soon?" My lady continued to address the girl. "You have had experience?"

"No, my Lady!"

"Then how can you secure what you wish?"

"How? At least, I can try!"

"To be sure! You can try." My lady's eyes fell; she seemed to be thinking. "Still, it may be difficult; Paris is far away. And if you should fail," her fingers tapped nervously on the chair, "we are very busy at the Mount just now," she added suddenly, directing her glance full upon the other, "and there may be something here—"

"Here! Your Ladyship will keep me here!"

Marie made a movement as if to speak, but her niece intercepted her.

"I will do my best, my Lady!"

"Very well! Then shall you have a trial!"

"Your Ladyship!" interposed Marie.

The Governor's daughter got up quickly. "I am very tired, Marie, and wish now to be alone! You need not remain—I shall not want you again tonight."

The old nurse murmured a dejected response; turned away.

"I thank your Ladyship. The girl's last look was one of indubitable satisfaction ere she followed her aunt from the room.

My lady stared after them. "'Daughter of Pierre Laroche! Friend of the Black Seigneur!'" Marie's words continued to ring in her ears. She threw herself into a chair; sat long very still, her eyes bent straight before her, on either cheek now a bright spot of color.

CHAPTER XXVII.

A Stroll on the Strand.

"You are in a hurry, Monsieur Beppo?" arms akimbo, Nanette, standing in an embrasure of the rampart, called out to the Governor's man as he passed by.

"Ah, Mistress Nanette," Beppo stopped readily enough, "I didn't see you at first."

"Because you have more important matters to think of," she laughed, showing her strong white teeth.

The fat old man looked pleased; a few days before, Nanette had flashed a radiant smile at him from her casement, and, ever since, he had been inclined to regard her with favor.

"Not more important, but duties that must be attended to! The wedding hour draws near." The island girl half turned her head; a shadow seemed to pass over the bold, sunburned features. "And her ladyship gives tomorrow a riding party for her guests—a last celebration before she is led to the altar. I am on my way now to arrange about the escort."

"A riding party!" Nanette spoke quickly. "You mean on horseback?"

"How else?" said Beppo. "It is a pastime her ladyship has always been very fond of, even as a child. In those days," not without an accent of self-importance, "it was my privilege—"

"Do they ride far?" interrupted Nanette with ill-suppressed eagerness.

"To the old Monastery St. Ranulphe; an imposing ruin of tenth century architecture, my dear," he added pompously.

"And where is it?"

"Off the Paris highway, some ten miles from the Mount."

"Ten miles? And the country is beautiful? Not open; sandy, like the shore?"

"It partakes of a rugged grandeur."

"With forests around?" quickly.

"Yes," indulgently. "You like forests, Mistress Nanette?"

"When they are thick and wild—"

"Then would you like these!"

The girl asked no further questions; yet still Beppo lingered, his glance seeming loath to withdraw from this exuberant specimen of vigorous young womanhood. "Which way were you going, good Mistress Nanette?" he asked finally. "On second thoughts, I have a little time to spare and will walk along."

Nanette looked down from the rampart toward the sands and the shore, did not answer, and, more insinuatingly, Beppo repeated his proposal. Nanette started.

"La, Monsieur Beppo! I—I'm afraid it wouldn't do. There's my aunt," tossing her head, "that careful of me! Won't even let me go walking on the beach alone! Do you ever go walking on the beach, Monsieur Beppo?" she inquired suddenly, regarding him with an eloquent look.

"I—it has not been my custom," he murmured. "But," the fishy eyes growing brighter, "with you—if I might accompany you—"

"Oh, I didn't mean that! Oh; no! Of course not! And I couldn't think of it. My aunt—"

But when a few moments later, she turned, to walk quickly away, the round and shining face of Beppo, watching her disappear, wore not the look of a man who had allowed himself to be rebuffed.

Out of his sight, Nanette's expression changed to one of somber thoughtfulness; it lingered as she entered the palace, with free swing, mounted the steps to her mistress' apartments; was still there, when she took a bit of embroidery from a table and seated herself at the window of an antechamber, bent over her task. Soon, however, she stopped, to sweep abruptly cloth and colored silks from her lap to the floor, and, leaning forward, her firm, brown hands clasped over her knees, she seemed to be asking herself questions, or weighing some problem.

"Yes; it is our only chance." In her eyes a steady glow replaced the varying lights, and, getting up with a sudden air of determination, Nanette crossed the room to where, near the door, stood a small desk. Glancing quickly around, she seated herself and, reaching for paper and pen, wrote carefully and somewhat laboriously a few words. She had finished and was contemplating the result of her eager efforts when a hand at the door caused her to dash down the pen and spring to her feet. As her aunt entered, Nanette took a few steps forward, and, bending to pick up her work from the floor, turned partly away and thrust the paper into the bosom of her gown.

"I came to tell you supper is ready," said Marie quietly.

At the table with her aunt the girl's manner was subdued and deferential; she observed the nicest proprieties, and bestowed on the other's slightest word a meed of attention calculated to soften the old woman's attitude and suspicions. And possibly succeeded; or, it may be, Marie's own conscience had begun to reproach her; for a number of days had passed and nothing had as yet occurred to justify the early apprehensions she had entertained. Under the circumstances the meal was a little prolonged; the first shafts of twilight had entered the courtyard and had begun to steal into the narrow chamber with darkening effect, ere of an accord the two women pushed back their chairs.

"It gets dark early," said the girl, "or time has passed quicker than I thought. Perhaps it was what you were telling me of the former lady of the Mount. She must have been very beautiful!"

"She was," answered the woman; "and as good as beautiful!"

"Heigh-ho!" Nanette sighed; through the window watched the shadows that like dark, trailing figures seemed creeping up the ancient wall to caress and linger on green leaves of vines, bright flowers and other living things. "But I suppose she had everything she wanted." The girl stirred restlessly. "What sort of a man is Monsieur Beppo, aunt?"

"Beppo?" Recalled as from a long train of recollections, the woman did not seem to notice the abruptness of the inquiry. "Oh, he is an old and faithful servant. For almost as many years as I have been here," with an accent of pride, "has he served at the Mount!"

"And his moral character, aunt?" demurely.

"Monsieur Beppo has a reputation for piety, no doubt deserved!" returned the woman, with an accent of surprise. "At any rate, he seldom misses a mass. But why do you ask?"

"Because I met him today and he invited me to walk with him this evening."

"He did?" Marie's mouth grew firmer. "And you?"

"I didn't exactly know how to refuse! he—looked so old and respectable! I thought, too, you wouldn't mind and—I'm glad you think so well of him, aunt."

In the gathering gloom the listener's face seemed suddenly to grow graver; her eyes, which had returned to the girl's, expressed once more doubt and misgiving. With her glance lifted upward, however, Nanette did not seem to notice this quick change. A star—faint forerunner of a multitude of waiting orbs—peeping timorously down from above the gray, gaunt mass of stone, alone absorbed the girl's gaze and attention.

"Where were you thinking of going?" after a silence of some length the older woman asked.

"I don't recall that Monsieur Beppo mentioned," was the low-murmured response. "But, of course, aunt, if you object—"

"I do not know that I do," said the other slowly. "Only," as if the thought had suddenly come to her, "what were you writing at her ladyship's desk when I went to call you?"

"Writing?" Nanette regarded her blankly. "I don't understand you, aunt."

"Weren't you writing something that you hid in your dress when I came?"

"No!" The girl looked full at the other; denied point-blank the accusation. "Now that you speak of it, I believe I did step to the desk," she answered glibly, "to look at some ornament; but as for writing, or daring to, I should not have presumed."

A low discreet rap at the door interrupted, and, with a whispered "There he is now!" Nanette cut short further argument by rising.

"She is not telling the truth!" For some time the woman stood looking down in gloomy thought after the two had gone. "What does it mean?" Moving to a peg, she took down a shawl. "What can it mean?" she asked herself again, and, wrapping the garment about her head and shoulders, left the room.

Half an hour later, at Beppo's side, on the beach, Nanette measured her steps to his; listened to the old man's platitudes, and even turned a not unwilling ear to sundry hints and innuendos of a tenderer nature. The girl was in her most complaisant mood, and, in his role of discreet gallant to young and blooming womanhood, the fat factotum strove to make the most of the opportunity. He sighed; bethought him of a sentimental tale, and carped of the beauty of the moon, then gilding the edge of the Mount's high towers! She answered; looked; but soon her eloquent glance swerved to the sands, dotted by desultory seekers of cockles, or belated stragglers from the shore, and fastened itself on a jutting point of the Mount.

Near it, before a large rock of peculiar shape, a man was engaged in that common nocturnal labor of the locality, digging! As the couple drew near, quickly he raised his gaze; almost at once let it fall; engrossed in his work, continued to toss the sand and stood over it searchingly. But when they had gone by, once more he straightened, and, at the same time, the girl looked back. Stalwart, black-bearded, a sailor by his dress, the fellow made a sign, and, apparently any doubt as to who he was vanished from Nanette's mind; for from the fingers of the free hand she held behind her, something fluttered to the beach.

Leaning to his implement, the man regarded the paper, but not until the girl's low laugh was heard, as she and Master Beppo vanished in the darkness, did he step forward and secure it.

"So! That was it!" Breathless, indignant, Marie, standing in the black shade of one of the Mount's projections, watched the fellow read and regard carefully the message in his hand; then tearing it, crumple the bits and thrust them toward his pocket as he walked off. "Brazen huzzy! But her ladyship shall know; and if she doesn't pack you off, bag and baggage —Eh? What is that?" And springing forward, the woman pounced upon something that lay on the sand.

"It Gets Dark Early," Said the Girl.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The Hesitation of the Marquis.

The day of my lady's riding party dawned; in the east a tender flame burned, and, vanishing, left the heavens an unbroken blue. Shoreward the mists rolled up, until only in the neighborhood of the forts did the white, soft vapor linger. On the Mount itself sunshine held sway; it radiated from the fortifications, "cuirass of the rock," and gleamed on the church, "tiara of its majesty." It warmed a cold palace of marble; looked in at its windows, and threw bold shafts to lighten dark nooks and corners.

But my lady, mistress of the Mount, seemed not to feel its beneficent touch; standing in the full glow and looking from her casement she shivered a little. Already was she dressed, and her habit of dark green, fitting close, served to accentuate the whiteness of her cheek which general absence of color, in turn, made the more manifest certain dark lines beneath the restless, bright eyes.

"Your Ladyship!" After knocking in vain, Marie had entered the room and set down the small tray she carried. "There is something your Ladyship ought to know!" with an air of excitement.

The Governor's daughter half turned. "What now, Marie?" she said sharply.

"It's about Nanette!" My lady made a quick movement of annoyance, impatience. "I did not tell your Ladyship, but I was averse to having her remain here. Your Ladyship does not understand, of course, and—"

"I do understand," said my lady unexpectedly. "And—you need not explain. I overheard you talking with her that night of the banquet!"

"Your Ladyship!" startled.

"And I heard you speak of her father, Pierre Laroche, friend of the Black Seigneur."

"And engaged her—after that!"

"Why not? I could watch—and I have! But you were wrong, Marie." My lady's manner was feverish. "Your suspicions were ridiculous. There has been nothing—nothing! And day after tomorrow is the wedding celebration, and the next day, he, the Black Seigneur—" She broke off abruptly.

Had Marie been less wrought up, less excited, less concerned with the information she had to impart, she could not have failed to notice the odd break in her young mistress' voice; something unusual, almost akin to despair, in her manner. As it was, that which weighed on the old nurse's mind precluded close observation of the other.

"But something has happened, my Lady!" the woman half stammered.

"Comment!" The girl turned to her sharply. "What? Explain, Marie!"

Disconnectedly, the woman launched into a narration of the events of the night before; my lady listened closely, with an interest and excitement she strove to conceal, half turning so that the other saw no longer her face.

"And here," ended Marie, extending a crumpled fragment of paper, "is a piece of the note she dropped on the beach. The man tore it up, but in thrusting the bits of paper into his pocket this fell out, and, after he walked away, I picked it up myself from the sand. I can't read, as your Ladyship knows, and there isn't much on it—only a word or two! But it may tell something."

My lady's face was now composed; the hand she extended, steady; for several moments she regarded the fragment.

"What does it say?" asked the woman anxiously. "Is it—is it important?"

Her mistress did not at once answer; twisting the bit of paper in her fingers, stood as if in thought, and the old nurse repeated her question.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Church Music.

Music has long been notoriously a provoker of discord. Once in my news-hunting days I suffered the ignominy of a scoop on a choir rumpus, and I thereupon formed the habit of lending an anxious ear to rumors of trouble in choir lofts. The average ladder-like Te Deum, built up for the display of the soprano's vocal prowess, has always struck me as an unholy thing. I even believe that the horrors of highly embellished offertories have done much to tighten pursestrings and deaden generous impulses. The presence behind the pulpit of a languid quartette praising God on behalf of the bored sinners in the pews has always seemed to me the profanest of anomalies. Nor has long contemplation of vested choirs in Episcopal churches shaken my belief that choir music should be an affair of the congregation.—Meredith Nicholson, in the Atlantic.

Value of Prayer.

"Grandma."

"Yes, Marjorie."

"You know I just believe a whole lot in prayer."

"Why, I'm glad to hear it; that's a good little girl."

"Yes, I prayed the other day that auntie wouldn't be cross with me for breaking her little hand mirror."

"And was she?"

"No. She thought it was Uncle John who broke it, and I didn't tell her any better."

Rheumatism Is Torture

Many pains that pass as rheumatism are due to weak kidneys—to the failure of the kidneys to drive off uric acid thoroughly.

When you suffer achy, bad joints, backache too, dizziness and some urinary disturbances, get Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy that is recommended by over 150,000 people in many different lands.

Doan's Kidney Pills help weak kidneys to drive out the uric acid which is the cause of backache, rheumatism and lumbago.

Quaint Critic.

George B. Luks, the painter, said to a critic in his New York studio: "Your criticism is at any rate original and amusing, my boy. It reminds me of the colored laundress in the Uffizi Gallery. "When this colored laundress visited the Uffizi, her mistress led her up to Correggio's masterpiece. 'There, Hannah, what do you think of that?' she said. Hannah, shaking her head lugubriously, stared a long while at the pictured angels whose white robes were all yellowed by time, and then, with a sigh and a disapproving shake of the head, she said: 'De saints is de last folks to put up wiv bad laundry work.'"

WASN'T WORTH THE LIVING

Was Mrs. Bowling's Conception of Life at One Time—Thinks Differently Now.

Loveland, Ky.—"When I first wrote you, I was feeling so miserable, that life wasn't worth living." So writes, in a recent letter, Mrs. Anna Bowling, of this place.

"I was in bad shape, my left side hurt so, at times, I could hardly bear it, and I could not lie on that side at night, at all. I also had another serious symptom of womanly trouble.

I finally decided to give Cardui, the woman's tonic, a trial, so I purchased a bottle, and by the time I had taken it, I felt better in every way, so I got another bottle, and it straightened me out entirely.

I feel as well now as I ever did in my life, and I can be safe in saying that Cardui is the best medicine on earth for women. I had little faith in it before I commenced taking it, but now I would not exchange it for all the other medicines."

Are you one of those poor women sufferers, who feel that life is hardly worth the living? Have you that everlastingly tired, nervous, worn-out, headachy feeling? If so, get a bottle of Cardui and begin taking it today. No doubt it is the very medicine you need.

Efficiency.

The modern method of accomplishing two things at once in the performance of a man's household duties was recently illustrated by a North Cambridge young man. This young man was industriously mowing the large lawn in front of his house by pushing a mower in front of him with the same industry he was giving his baby a ride by dragging the baby carriage behind him with the other hand.—Boston Journal.

GROWING STRONGER
Apparently, with Advancing Age.

"At the age of 50 years I collapsed from excessive coffee drinking," writes a man in Mo. "For four years I shambled about with the aid of crutches or cane, most of the time unable to dress myself without help.

"My feet were greatly swollen, my right arm was shrunken and twisted inward, the fingers of my right hand were clenched and could not be extended except with great effort and pain. Nothing seemed to give me more than temporary relief.

"Now, during all this time and for about 30 years previously, I drank daily an average of 6 cups of strong coffee—rarely missing a meal.

"My wife at last took my case into her own hands and bought some Postum. She made it according to directions and I liked it fully as well as the best high-grade coffee.

"Improvement set in at once. In about 6 months I began to work a little, and in less than a year I was very much better, improving rapidly from day to day. I am now in far better health than most men of my years and apparently growing stronger with advancing age.

"I am busy every day at some kind of work and am able to keep up with the procession without a cane. The arm and hand that were once almost useless, now keep far ahead in rapidity of movement and beauty of penmanship."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Write for copy of the little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled.

Instant Postum is a soluble powder.

A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with the addition of cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly.

"There's a reason" for Postum.

Practical Fashions

CHILD'S DRESS.

A frock suitable for linen, pongee, gingham, pique and simple serge or challie. A tuck at each shoulder, front and back, produces a central panel. The closing is at the left side of the front. A three piece skirt completes the dress. The neck is cut out in square outline and the sleeves may be long or short, as desired.

The dress pattern (6304) is cut in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. Medium size requires 2 yards of 36 inch material, with ¾ of a yard of 27 inch contrasting goods to trim.

To procure this pattern send 10 cents to "Pattern Department," of this paper. Write name and address plainly, and be sure to give size and number of pattern.

LADY'S THREE-GORED SKIRT.

There is a bit of fullness at the waist line in this pretty skirt which is particularly effective. A stitched tab holds it in place. This and the cut-off corner on the front gore is the only trimming with the exception of the buttons and loops. A skirt of this description is especially suitable for wear with separate blouse. And suitable material such as ratine, whipcord and serge will make up effectively.

The lady's three-gored skirt pattern (6338) is cut in sizes 22 to 30 inches waist measure. Medium size requires 3¾ yards of 36 inch material.

To procure this pattern send 10 cents to "Pattern Department," of this paper. Write name and address plainly, and be sure to give size and number of pattern.

Varied Causes of Suicide.

Causes of suicide vary. In the Oriental patriotic and religious reasons present themselves. In the west the causes are of a more personal nature. There are many classes into which cases may be divided. For example, the lonely, the sick and incurable, the unemployed and financially embarrassed, victims of nervous diseases.

Domestic Frankness.

Feder (taking a tablet)—The doctors get pepsin from the stomach of a hog. Did you know that?

Mrs. Feder—Yes. And it goes back to the same place!—Puck.

Might Work.

"How's things in New York?"

"Our policemen are getting too fat to catch anybody. The chief is experimenting with a scheme to mount 'em on motor rolling skates."

Injured by Sulphurous Acid.

English scientists have found that more than a million tons of sulphurous acid are discharged into London's atmosphere every year, mainly by the combustion of illuminating gas, to the injury of the city's stone buildings.

Unwise Kindness.

Occasionally a man gets by with a tremendous bluff simply because his friends are kind-hearted and hate to spoil a beautiful specimen of self-esteem.

DR. R. A. ARMISTEAD'S FAMOUS AGUE TONIC SHOULD BE IN EVERY HOME.

Spottsville, Ky., Sept. 9th, 1898.

ARMISTEAD'S TONIC is THE ONLY TONIC. The life of our five-year-old boy Newton was saved by Armistead's Ague Tonic after all other remedies had failed and two physicians had given him up. He had been having violent spasms for two days and nights and we were unable to break the malarial fever until we began administering this Tonic. You can always find Dr. R. A. Armistead's Ague Tonic in our medicine chest.

(Signed) M. F. HOWE,
Agt., L. H. & St. L. Ry.

What Dr. R. A. Armistead's Ague Tonic has done for others, it will do for you. It has been on the market continuously for over forty years and is recognized as the greatest Chill and Malaria remedy ever known. 50c and $1.00 bottles. Pleasant to take—perfectly harmless. PECULIAR LIVE STOCK FARM

Canadian Has Pleasant Possibilities in His Proposed Raising of Black Foxes.

Probably few, if any, men in this province have started a black fox farm at less cost than Robert Rowley, proprietor of the Laurentide preserves at Lake Edward, says a Quebec correspondent of the Montreal Gazette. While up at Roberval Mr. Rowley heard that a man there had four young pups, part red and part black. It is said that nobody wanted to buy the animals, though the price was about $10 or so a head. Mr. Rowley gave the man his price. The next morning Mr. Pridman, manager of the black fox ranch of Lieutenant Governor Wood of New Brunswick, who had been scouring the country for young stock, saw the foxes and immediately went into the hotel and in front of every one present offered Mr. Rowley several thousand dollars, but was refused. When the villagers realized the offer some of them almost collapsed on the spot and the place has been fox crazy ever since.

Mr. Rowley is also purchasing a pure black dog fox at a very small sum and will cross it with the litter which he got so cheaply. He expects to have a litter of pure black foxes next spring.

What Can Be Done About This?

"Here's an item," observed Rivers, who was looking over the newspapers, "to the effect that the king of Sweden raises prize dogs on his farm."

"I suppose he uses them," suggested Brooks, "to drive his Stockholm."

After which the rattle of the typewriters broke out afresh with great violence.—Stray Stories.

THE BEST TREATMENT FOR ITCHING SCALPS, DANDRUFF AND FALLING HAIR

To allay itching and irritation of the scalp, prevent dry, thin and falling hair, remove crusts, scales and dandruff, and promote the growth and beauty of the hair, the following special treatment is most effective, agreeable and economical. On retiring, comb the hair out straight all around, then begin at the side and make a parting, gently rubbing Cuticura Ointment into the parting with a bit of soft flannel held over the end of the finger. Anoint additional partings about half an inch apart until the whole scalp has been treated, the purpose being to get the Cuticura Ointment on the scalp skin rather than on the hair. It is well to place a light covering over the hair to protect the pillow from possible stain. The next morning, shampoo with Cuticura Soap and hot water. Shampoos alone may be used as often as agreeable, but once or twice a month is generally sufficient for this special treatment for women's hair.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

MARRIED AT COURT HOUSE

The things that are not expected always happen; and sometimes those things that are expected mysteriously come into sudden reality. We will not state in which of these classes the incident we are about to relate falls, but it did happen—that is the significant fact in the case. And it was at the court house, and on a rainy Thursday of last week Mr. T. E. Williams and Miss Margaret Wood were quietly married. None witnessed the ceremony except those who caught on to the secret in time to get to the Probate Judge's office before it was pronounced. And that was a fair sized audience, for nothing can attract a crowd to the court house quicker than the news that a wedding is about to take place there.

Both Mr. Williams and Miss Wood are very prominent young people, and are well and favorably known. For some time each of them have been engaged in teaching in this vicinity, and have always made a large number of friends among their associates, all of whom will gladly extend to them their best wishes and congratulations.

A Family Reunion

On Friday morning, September 19, 1913, the children of Mrs. Leila A. Williams began to assemble at her home two miles west of Clanton from the various parts of the country; James Toy, from Jacksonville, Fla., where he is assistant pastor of the First Baptist Church; Jerome O., from Athens, where he is pastor of the Baptist Church; Harvey, from Maplesville, where he has a position in the Union State Bank as Cashier; and Greely, from Thorsby, where he is a pupil in the new Baptist School. The others were near home.

Perhaps the main feature of the day was the coming of two brides. James Toy was on the 16th married to Miss Laurie M. Smith of Milledgeville, Georgia. Ernest was on the 18th married to Miss Margaret L. Wood of Verbena. The two couples spent the night of the 18th at the Exchange at Montgomery, and arrived home at 10:26 on morning of 19th.

Mr. J. T. Williams and wife will sail from Seattle, Washington on October 7th for Canton, China, where they will spend their lives as Missionaries.

Mr. Ernest Williams and wife will make their future home with his mother; Ernest looking after the farm and spending part of the time in the store.

So by eleven o'clock, eight sons, two daughters, five daughters-in-law, and seven grandchildren had assembled at their mothers side to spend a few hours. Mr. and Mrs. Wood, father and mother of one of the brides, Wallace, a brother, and Pearl, a sister, were also present. Of course the fatted calf had been slain and everything good that a mother could prepare had been prepared for a great dinner. The wedding feast—the reunion banquet—at home was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The afternoon was pleasantly spent about the home that had been happily arranged for the occasion. In the evening James Toy read from God's word, the 19th Psalm; and Jerome led the prayer. There were five vacant chairs—one for father, sister, brother, and two little grandchildren. We were sad to mention these, but rejoice to know His good blessings upon us.

Soon the family sang "Abide with me," and parted to meet again we know not where or when.

J. H. Jordan Killed by Train

Life Crushed Out by Two Cars on the Ocampo Railroad

On last Thursday a slight accident happened on the railroad which runs from Ocampo to Lock 12, resulting in the almost instant death of a white man named Jordan. Mr. Jordan lived in the north and was employed in the crew that operates the branch road for the Alabama Power Company.

He was a brakeman, and while engaged in coupling some cars two of them came together in some unexpected way and caught him between them. His body received several cuts, which proved fatal in a very short while after the accident happened. Both his arms were cut entirely off, one at the shoulder and the other below the elbow. The same cause that cut his left arm made a fearful wound in the left side immediately under the arm. A large gash was cut along the spinal column also.

His remains were brought to Clanton Thursday night, and taken in charge by an undertaking company from Birmingham, who embalmed the body and sent it to his relatives in the north for burial.

WARNING TO THE FARMERS

As the North and West have failed to raise hay and corn this season from drought, I recommend that each farmer prepare well and sow about two acres in oats to each horse, as corn is now more than $1 per bushel wholesale. If the farmer has pleuty of corn for his own use so much the better; it will only enable him to help the unfortunate one who has to buy the corn, and help to keep the South's money here.

It is my opinion that corn will sell for more than $1.50 per bushel before another crop is made, so the oats will tide the man over that would otheawise have to buy the high priced corn and help the man who has plenty by allowing him to sell some.

I also recommend that each farmer sow some clover for hay and pasture. It is now time to sow. I have made arrangements with Alred Drug Co. at Clanton and W. E. Thomas at Jemison to keep the seed on hand. Bur clover, if sown in bur, needs no inoculation. Inoculation dirt may be had at the following places: J. N. Dennis' farm three miles south of Clanton, P. T. Hinkle's farm 2 miles west of Clanton, from my place 1 mile north of Clanton, and my place 5 miles east of Jemison. I think we can supply everyone that want[illegible] oculation.

[illegible] only a few of the c[illegible] confronting us, and the g[illegible] portunities afforded us. It [illegible] to us." What shall we do?

Mr. W. P. Thompson left on Wednesday to attend as a delegate from Alabama to the Conservation Exposition. He worked in Knoxville during the years 1859-60 and has not visited there since he entered the Confederate Service.

Talk about pulling teeth; Dr. Coburn, son of merchant Coburn, "yanked" 13. That ominous number from his papas jaws, and the "old man" still lives to "close down" on watermelons with commendable regularity.

Mr. Sims, the cotton gin man, says: "Business is fine, and, so is the supply of cotton furnished me."

Miss Lucie Simpson and Miss Zula Coburn are off on another school term; the former goes to Birmingham and the latter to Tuscaloosa.

Postmaster Gray has had new steps placed at the post office entrance—thanks.

Cotton in this vicinity is better—more of it than growers expected three weeks ago. Some of the farmers are holding off for better prices.

Card of Thanks

We desire to thank our friends for their kind and loving consideration of us in the loss of our husband and father, and especially do we wish to thank the citizens of Maplesville and the vicinity. Time alone can reveal how our hearts go out to you.

Clanton High School Notes

By Hoke Pipes and Dorcas Maddox

This space will be filled every week by a composition from the 8th, 9th and 10th grades of the Clanton High School.

School is now well organized, and all the pupils are striving hard to go to the top of their class.

The pupils of the 9th and 10th grades have not received their desks yet, but hope to have them in a few days.

Cupid appeared in the 10th grade last Friday and seriously injured Mr. W. C. Edwards; although we hope to see him well again in a few days.

Miss Grace Williams of Route 3 started to school Monday.

Miss Bessie Davis entered school Monday with much delight to the boys and girls.

"Green," the school janitor of the C. H. S., while working on the bell in the tower the other day heard some music and began dancing. His foot slipped from the bell platform and in an instant Green landed on second story; he burst through three platforms and also through the ceiling. He only complained of a sore head.

Mr. Jean Wyatt, who has been on a long trip to the north west has started to school. He wrote a composition the other day and gave us a full description of Yellowstone Park, and other interesting parts of the west.

Mr. Oliver Mullins, the brightest pupil of the 9th grade explained how plants have pneumonia.

Mr. Wesley Adams, another bright pupil of the 9th grade says that he discovered the steam engine.

Mr. Edgar Teel was late at school the other day; this was his reason: "I lost a nickel this morning while coming to school; after finding my nickel I looked for the interest, which he found after getting to school.

A pupil in the 8th grade made a flying trip to Mr. Pickens room one day last week.

Mr. Oscar Jones is getting better looking every day, say the girls. He not long ago had his hair shaved off, and now it is rapidly growing and making a warm cover for his head this winter. The cold spell this week gave him a bad cold.

Quite a large number of pupils are taking music and there is a great many more to start.

The W. and W. music class has organized a chorus class; Mr. Pickens and others are members of it.

Wanted! A Sears & Roebuck catalogue; will pay a reasonable price.

Izora Callen.

The Clanton High School is trying to get a microscope. It will not be long before we will be up-to-date.

The girls are having a fine time playing whip-cracker.

Mr. Pickens has court every few days. Some of the boys are always getting in trouble.

Mr. Wesley Adams, a prominent boy in school is now news-boy for the Birmingham News; Who would have thought it?

Miss Mary Davis, one of the old pupils of the Clanton High School was a visitor here Monday.

Mr. Willie Edwards is no tight wad; he is loving all the girls that love him; he loves only one—"C."

There has not been many jokes this week, as we are all busy studying.

The boys will soon have a base ball team organized; then we will be ready to play with any team (2nd 9) in the county.

Look out for more next week; will after this week give the court proceedings.

Cotton Ginned to September 1

A Remarkable Increase Over the 1912 Crop

There were 212 bales of cotton counting round as half bales, ginned in Chilton County from the crop of 1913, prior to September 1st, as compared with 7 bales ginned prior to September 1st, 1912.

The above statistics were furnished us by Mr. J. D. Sims, who is the local government agent for Chilton County in compiling statistics and reports on the cotton crop. These reports will be furnished from time to time during the cotton season.

West Chilton

Mr. P. E. Thomson, V. D. M., a native of Illinois, lectured in the western part of the County the 4th and 5th, inst. He is one of the finest young men we ever met, polished, refind, lovely, and an eloquent speaker. He lectured first on some of the good things the Creator had prepared for His people; that those people now clothed with Christ's righteousness were in Jehovah's sight white as Jesus; every sin covered; Bible holiness pure and simple. He closed his lecture with the most beautiful story we ever heard, saying: "He and a number of friends decided to climb one of the mountains near Cripple Creek, Colorado, on the 4th of July for a Bible study. When they started up the mountain, shrubery and flowers grew along the way, cattle were grazing; the ascent became steeper; finally their path became extinct and they had to retrace their steps, thus typifying the Christians early experience. Finally finding a plain path, they started up again. The top seemed near, rugged rocks were in their way, and while the top did not seem to get nearer, finally they stood on the last rock and there before them was the summit; the scene before them was indescribable. Looking at a great distance Mountain tops were numerous; covered with the beautiful snow in bright sunshine. Then in coming down the mountain they missed their way; darkness came on. That was the valley of the shadow of death. Soon they found themselves in a cemetery, but when they had passed out of it they only had a recollection of the cemetery, typifying after the resurrection. Then right before them lay the city of Cripple Creek with her bright lights welcoming them home; heaven."

Those I. B. S. lectures use all the subjects of our ministers of the past and present, not ignoring any, but their explanations wonderfully classify those subjects. Anyway that appeals to reason and intelligence, a gospel of hope. The burden of their lectures is forth in one of our Sacred Harp music book compositions, "Reverential Anthem." "Worship the Lord in the beauty of Holiness; fear before Him all the earth; let the heavens rejoice and the earth be glad before the Lord; for He cometh to judge the world with righteousness and the people with his truth."

In conclusion we wish to say hurrah for Mr. Bice on the high school question.

Citizen.

ALABAMA GOOD ROADS ASSOCIATION

The Seventeenth Annual Session of the Alabama Good Roads Association will meet in the city of Mobile on November 20th, 21st and 22nd. This will undoubtedly be the greatest gathering of good roads advocates that has ever assembled in the southern States. Invitations and requests have been sent to the Governors of Louisiana, Mississippi, Florida and Alabama to attend the Convention and also to appoint at least 100 delegates to attend the Convention, within 100 miles from Mobile to represent these adjoining states. It is expected at least 1,000 delegates will come from all parts of Alabama. Mr. J. A. Rountree who has been the Secretary of the Association for the past seventeen years, reports that more enthusiasm is being aroused in the Mobile meeting than any state convention that has ever been held in the history of the Association. More responses from good roads advocates and acceptance of distinguished speakers than has ever been known. There seems to be wide-spread desires to visit Mobile at this season of the year, as well as to attend the Convention.

In Memoriam

Died at his residence near Pleasant Grove early in September after being in a feeble state of health several months, Mr. John Washington Wright. He came to Chilton from Coosa county several years ago. He lived to an old age. He leaves a wife and several children to mourn his loss. He was a highly respected citizen; a good man; quiet kind and neighborly. His funeral was attended by a large number of his friends; was conducted by Rev. R. M. Honeycutt.

Death is a cruel reaper; he spares neither old age or blooming youth. Oh! the heart sending wail of sorrow from the fall of man in Eden's beautiful garden until now caused by death. Will it ever cease? Yes, the time is coming when there will be no more death. The loved ones will come back again. They are now quietly sleeping in the grave. Creation is groaning now, but the beautiful light of the great deliverance is gilding the hill tops. The glad note of the church's resurrection is now sounding throughout the earth. Then follows the resurrection of all the dead billions of our race.

"Then he'll banish sin and sorrow,
And triumph o'er the grave;
When from death on that glad morrow,
Earth's ransomed hosts he'll save."

Then cheer weeping ones, this roseate picture is not mere fancy but rests on the great sacrifice of our Savior. Alas, Mr. Wright is gone; no one can fill his place. Friends do sympathize with the bereaved. Then how much greater is the sympathy of a loving creator? As He sees His creatures in sorrow and death, but the consumation of His great plan will be so glorious and beautiful until we can say at the grave of Mr. Wright in the language of the poet:

"The sun-beam of life as it sets, Paints a rainbow of peace on the grave."

His Friend.

INDEPENDENCE DAY IN MEXICO CITY

NOTHING OCCURRED TO MAR THE HOLIDAY SPIRIT.

MANY VOLUNTEERS IN LINE

President Huerta Addresses Joint Session of Deputies and Senators. Amicable Relations With United States Expected.

Mexico City.—In spite of the rumors which dealt impartially with attacks upon Americans, an army uprising and the assassination of the president, Independence Day came and went with nothing to mar the holiday spirit.

Politically, the great event was the reopening of congress and the reading of the president's message. But without doubt Gen. Huerta was moved less by that than by the spectacle of thousands of students, citizens and soldiers doing him honor as he stood on the balcony of the National Palace reviewing the great parade, the feature in which public interest centered.

More than 4,000 volunteers and students, ranging in age from 12 years upward, had their taste of militia discomfort, standing for hours in drizzling rain and plodding through muddy streets.

They bore the hardships manfully, however, marching proudly between immense lines of onlookers whom the rain failed to daunt, through the principal business street, past the palace and to various points where they disbanded.

It is estimated that close to 10,000 marchers passed in review. They included a thousand of Blanquet's veterans, who did hard service in the Zapata country, regular and volunteer cavalry and infantry, rurales, mounted and foot police, artillerists, cadets and hospital corps. Next to the students and volunteers who received the most enthusiastic applause were several ambulance automobiles filled with white-gowned young women of the Red Cross hospital service.

In his message to the joint session of deputies and senators, President Huerta promised to spare no efforts to bring about the unrestricted election of president and vice-president of the Mexican republic next month, declaring that it would constiute the greatest triumph of his career to turn over the office to his successor with the country at peace, as he hoped to do.

Gen. Huerta said the strained diplomatic relations between Mexico and the United States had caused the Mexican nation to suffer unmerited affliction and had retarded the pacification of the country. Nevertheless, he hoped for an early solution of the differences between the two nations and to see Mexico and the United States once more united in bonds of friendship.

James M. Sullivan, the new American minister to the Dominican republic, is a Brooklyn lawyer and the man who secured the confession of "Bald Jack" Rose in the famous Rosenthal murder case.

SCHMIDT A COUNTERFEITER

New York.—The discovery of a counterfeiters' den which Hans Schmidt, priest and confessed slayer of Anna Aumuller, admitted was fitted up by him to make spurious money, led the detectives, Coroner Feinberg and other visitors to his cell in the Tombs to express the opinion that Schmidt is sane and that further investigation will develop that counterfeiting was only one of his "side line."

Duel From Automobiles.

New York.—Gunmen, said by the police to be members of rival gangs, engaged in a revolver duel while seated in two automobiles standing on upper Broadway, just as a nearby theater matinee crowd swarmed into the street.

Iron Company Bankrupt.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Beaver Dam Malleable Iron Company of Beaver Dam, Wis., filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, giving estimated liabilities at $500,000 and assets at $650,000.

SULZER LOSES IN FIRST CLASH

IMPEACHMENT COURT OVERRULES CHALLENGE OF 4 SENATORS.

PROCEEDINGS ARE ATTACKED

Fight for Additional Charges Against Accused Executive Will Be Made in Assembly on Thursday. Arguments Made.

Albany, N. Y.—Counsel for William Sulzer lost the first skirmish in a legal battle they began Friday, at the second session of the high court of impeachment, to prevent the accused executive from coming to trial. Their objections to permitting four senators to sit as members of the court were overruled.

They next attacked the validity of the impeachment with a motion to dismiss the proceedings, but failure to complete their argument when adjournment was taken until Monday precluded a decision in the matter.

Meanwhile Gov. Sulzer formally conceded that he had no right to exercise the functions of chief executive pending the determination of the impeachment. This he did in a letter to Lieut.-Gov. Glynn, turning over a request for the extradition of a prisoner, and explaining he had taken such action because of recent decisions of the supreme court that the "executive functions should be performed by yourself as acting governor."

After striving futively from noon until 7:20 o'clock to obtain enough anti-Sulzer votes to insure the passage of additional impeachment charges, Majority Leader Levy moved that the assembly recess until next Thursday. The motion was adopted amid shouts of joy, and members who had been imprisoned in the chamber for hours dashed for trains and their homes.

WHOLESALE KILLING PLANNED

Slayer of Anna Aumuller Reveals Gruesome Scheme.

New York.—Hans Schmidt, most picturesque and versatile criminal who has fallen into the hands of the police if years, astonished Inspector Faurot's detectives by unfolding a plan he had conceived for wholesale killings in New York City. With no variation from his customary ecclesiastical manner, the self-confessed murderer of Anna Aumuller calmly informed the detectives that he had intended to execute old persons, cripples, persons suffering from incurable ailments and "all who found this world a hardship." He proposed to execute the selected victims either by shooting, poisoning or dissection, which he declared to be the easiest forms of death.

Discuss Currency Bill.

London.—Discussing the American currency bill in its financial columns, the Daily Telegraph forecasts a possible invasion of the banking field here by American banks.

ADMITS MANUFACTURERS' AID

Denies, However, They Spent $60,000 in His District.

Washington.—The house lobby committee abandoned work on its report long enough to hear former Representative Charles E. Littlefield of Maine. Mr. Littlefield frankly told the committee that his views on labor legislation coincided with those of the manufacturers, and that early in his congressional career he gladly accepted their aid.

Treaty Is Signed.

Constantinople.—The protocol of the treaty defining the Turko-Bulgarian frontier provides that the new frontier line shall begin on the Black Sea at the mouth of the River Pasova, immediately north of the town of San Stefano, 25 miles above Midia.

Reduction in Naphtha.

New York.—The Standard Oil Company of New York announced a reduction of one-half cent per gallon on all grades of naphtha for export.

DIGGS-CAMINETTI ARE SENTENCED

FORMER GETS TWO YEARS, LATTER 18 MONTHS AS WHITE SLAVERS.

FINES ARE IMPOSED ON BOTH

Diggs Draws $2,000 and Caminetti $1,500—10 Days' Stay Granted. Appeals Will Be Taken for Both.

San Francisco.—Two years in the federal penitentiary on McNeil Island, Washington, and a fine of $2,000 is the sentence imposed on Maury I. Diggs, former state architect of California, because of his flight to Reno with Marsha Warrington, a Sacramento girl. Eighteen months in the same prison and a fine of $1,500 was the penalty given his friend and companion, F. Drew Caminetti, son of Anthony Caminetti, United States commissioner-general of immigration, for a like offense. Caminetti eloped with Marsha Warrington's friend, Lola Norris.

The usual motions for a new trial and for arrest of judgment were denied. Judge Van Fleet granted, however, a stay of execution for ten days, during which the defendants will be out on bail fixed at $15,000 and $10,000, respectively, while their counsel are perfecting an appeal to the United States circuit court of appeals for a writ of reversible error, which if granted would entail new trials.

In designating the prison where sentence should be executed Judge Van Fleet of the United States district court first named San Quentin penitentiary, a state institution. When objection was made to San Quentin, where Diggs and Caminetti would associate with housebreakers, highwaymen and pickpockets, he amended the sentence to read McNeil Island, subject to the concurrence of the attorney-general, which he did not doubt he should obtain.

Diggs and Caminetti seemed unconcerned when sentence was pronounced. A few minutes later they laughed and chatted with the newspaper men over their plight.

MEXICAN SITUATION IS SAME

Little Importance Attached to Huerta's Message.

Washington.—So far as the Washington administration is concerned, it became known, no move is contemplated in the Mexican situation at present. The elections of October 26 now are waited with keen interest, and the next step in the policy of the United States is likely to make its appearance thereafter.

Administration officials read long excerpts of Gen. Huerta's message to the Mexican congress, published here, but no formal comment was made. It is understood that the administration does not attach much importance to the document, though there are passages in it which did not pass without careful notice.

GOVERNMENT FILES A BRIEF

"Labor Dynamite" Cases Will Be Heard During October.

Chicago.—The government's brief giving reasons why the judgments of the federal district court at Indianapolis in the cases of the 28 convicted "labor dynamiters" should be affirmed was filed in the United States circuit court of appeals by Federal Attorney Charles W. Miller of Indianapolis. The date for hearing the cases will be set at the October term.

Looks Into Tobacco Trust.

Berlin.—A petition requesting an investigation into the alleged relations of the tobacco trust with the German cigarette industry was sent to the secretary of the interior by a national association of business men.

Scottish Rite Meeting.

Philadelphia.—The final session of the tenth annual meeting of the Supreme Council, Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite Masons, northern jurisdiction, was held.

COTTON IS HELPED AND HURT BY RAIN

IMPROVED GROWTH MAY OFFSET DAMAGE TO GRADE.

PICKING HAS BEEN CHECKED

Heavy Precipitation Drove Pickers from Field, but Much Cotton Open—Farmers Are Selling Freely.

Memphis.—The heavy rains that have fallen over the cotton belt during the past fortnight have done good and harm to the cotton crop. It seems to be a matter for the future to decide whether the benefit will be greater than the damage, with the frost date sure to play an important part in deciding this matter. In Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and to lesser extent in Texas and Alabama, damage has been done the grade by recent heavy rains. Picking has been checked for the time being, but with clearing weather having been resumed, and with lots of cotton open and labor, generally speaking, plentiful, indications are that the crop will be very rapidly gathered.

The rains have been of benefit in stopping premature opening and helping the young bolls to mature. Some new growth is noted in many states, but in most sections of the belt late frost date will be necessary to mature this growth. Should the date of killing frost be, say a week or more later than the average, indications are that the yield would be greatly increased by the addition of considerable top crop. This state of affairs applies only to bottom and heavy, rich lands, as cotton on hill lands is, as a general thing, too nearly dead to be improved by the precipitation.

Boll weevils have been extremely active with the wet weather, and their ravages have greatly reduced the prospective yield in infected areas.

Present prices are proving attractive to farmers all over the belt and most of them are rushing their product to market as fast as ginned. A few are holding for higher prices, but this number is comparatively small.

CHIEF JUSTICE CULLEN.

Chief Justice Cullen will sit as the presiding judge at the impeachment of Governor Sulzer of New York.

TEXANS LYNCH BAD NEGRO

He Had Killed Two White Men and Had Wounded a Third.

FRANKLIN, Texas.—Will Davis, negro, was lynched after he had shot and killed Rufus Hodges, aged 30, and Tom Reussian, 27, and badly wounded Will Maxwell on the Reussian farm, 10 miles north of Franklin. Hodges was killed first, following a dispute, and Reussian and Maxwell were shot when they went to avenge Hodges death. The negro was captured by a posse and hanged to a tree.

Thaw's 11 Lawyers Meet.

Concord, N. H.—Eleven lawyers from four states and the Dominion of Canada are in Concord and more are supposed to be on the way here to help Harry K. Thaw resists the efforts of the state of New York to obtain his return to the Matteawan Asylum.

Lind Stays at Vera Cruz.

Vera Cruz.—Indirect efforts are being made from the Mexican capital to induce Mr. Lind, President Wilson's representative, to return to Mexico City.

Tornado Does Damage.

Prince Frederick, Md.—Leaving in its wake a trail of wreckage, a tornado swept across this town and during the brief two minutes that it lasted did damage that will reach into thousands of dollars.

Liner Hits Ferryboat.

New York.—The Old Dominion liner Hamilton collided with a Pennsylvania Railroad ferryboat off Cortlandt street in the North river late Tuesday. After the collision both vessels went to their docks. No lives were lost.

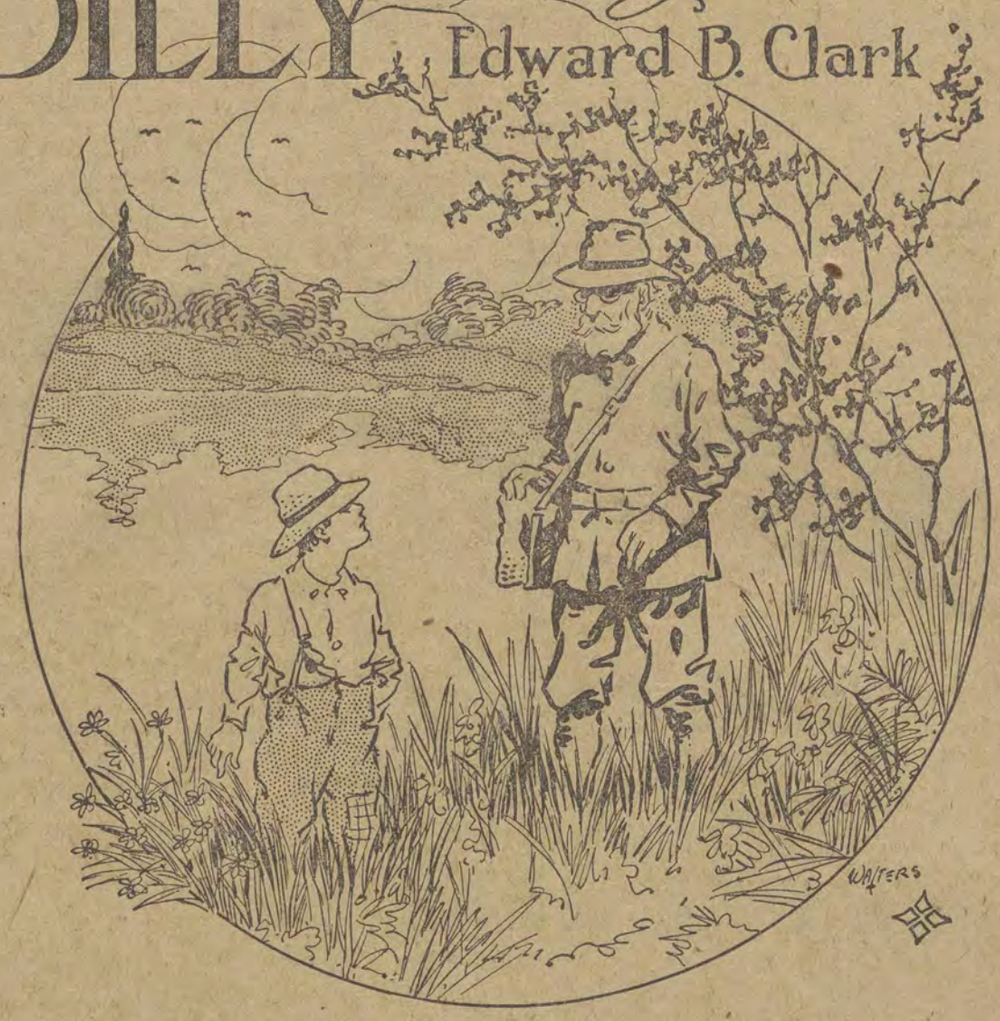
WISE BILLY

by Edward B. Clark



"WISE BILLY," they called him up Bowmanville way. He was called this in derision, for Wise Billy was witless. There were some of the Bowmanville people who wouldn't have it that Billy was entirely witless, and it was in the expression of this belief these people showed that they were to be classed with the wiser ones.

Wise Billy had been hit on the head when he was nothing more than a toddler and it was the blow that set his mind groping for things that it could never fully grasp. Bowmanville, while it is a part of a great city, has green fields and great forests yet untouched by the ax of nature's tyrant. Billy roamed the fields and threaded the forests. Like Little Hiawatha he learned of the birds and the squirrels their secrets. They were playmates that never made sport of his mental shortcomings. He loved them and they loved him. The streams beyond the little stream which farther on in its course becomes the Chicago river, were the haunts of bobolinks. It was there that the Italian bird catchers hired by the big city dealers were in the habit of setting their traps to catch rollicking Robert of Lincoln that he might be cooped up in a 7 by 6 cage to pine away a few brief summer months for the supposed pleasure of someone whose ideas of liberty did not include bird and beast.

One afternoon the Italians set their traps all over the meadow with a captive bird in the lower compartment. The men went to a hedge by the roadside to watch results. They saw a boy start on a keen jump across the meadow. His feet were winged. Before the trappers could realize what was up the lower door of the first trap in line was open, a bobolink was freed and the trap itself was a crushed mass of wire and sticks. They tried, but they could not catch this greyhound of a lad. He liberated twelve birds and smashed twelve traps, and then shot into the Budlong woods. It was Wise Billy who had done this turn for his bobolink friends.

Wise Billy's father and mother sent him to school. The teachers did not want to receive him, but he was quiet and he showed shortly that impression could be made upon his disordered mind. He knew more about the pictures than he did about the words, but in the course of a year or two he wrote sentences disjointedly. It was poetry that Wise Billy loved, especially the poetry in which the words sang of birds and trees and flowers. It was an inspiration to hear Billy repeat Bryant's "Bobolink" and the "Lines to a Waterfowl." There was a place in his heart seemed to speak to some little sound section of his muddled mind.

Wise Billy reported at the school one morning that he was going to be a poet. He stood at his desk and made the announcement out loud. The pupils laughed and laughed. The teacher tried to look kindly, but there was a bit of merriment in her face. "I'll bring some verses and show you," cried Billy. He was keenly alive to ridicule, witless though he was.

Wise Billy had found a friend. He was a man who tramped the field with a round box in which he put leaves and flowers and with an opera glass through which he stared at birds. Billy had come across the stranger near the river's edge just west of the Budlong wood. The man was picking marsh marigolds. Billy told him he would show him where there were some prettier ones if the man would promise not to pick them. The stranger seemed struck by this appeal from the boy with halting tongue and vacant eye. "You're a second edition of Ralph Waldo Emerson, my boy," said he a little quizzically.

"They're pretty by the water," said Billy, "and the wind whispers to them and they tell me what the wind says."

"You're a poet," said the man with the box. "I wouldn't pick your flowers now were they the real gold they seem to be, but I'm after birds, too."

"Bang 'em and put 'em in a box?"

"No, just look at them."

"I'll show you lots," said Billy.

The man came to the meadows often after this and met Billy. The lad knew where the lark finch, where the vireo placed its paper-lined home and where the oriole swung its cradle. He showed all his treasures to the man who was willing to look and to spare. One day Billy brought some papers to his botanical-ornithological acquaintance. "They're poems," he said, "like what the man with the gray beard wrote about bobolinks and like what the man Shakesomething said about the yellow swamp flowers."

Billy's naturalist friend took the manuscript. Rhythm there was none; the spelling would make a lexicographer weep, but there was poetry. The boy said in essence that the marigold didn't die because he thought of it all the year through, and thinking of things "makes 'em live."

One of Billy's schoolmates had trapped a shore lark. The bird sings as it soars, and in that respect is like unto the lark that "at heaven's gate sings." Billy had fought a good fight for the trapped lark when the trapper was taking it homeward, but a crowd of schoolmates who regarded the larks as fair prey made numbers carry the day.

One day Billy and the stroller afield were tramping the meadow that edges the Bowmanville road that runs along and crosses the rustic bridge over the north branch of the river. They heard shouts and turning saw that a building facing the road was on fire. It was a frame structure with the two upper stories occupied by families. It was on the ledge of the front window of the upper apartment that the caged lark which Billy had tried to save had been imprisoned for several days. The man and boy started for the scene of the fire. The building was a furnace. "Everybody's out," called a man in the crowd that had gathered.

Billy, the witless, looked up. He saw the lark in the cage. The stairway was burning. He eluded a detaining hand and dashed into the entrance and up the stairs. A man jumped after him, but it was too late. He was driven back. In less than a minute the people with staring eyes saw the boy appear at the front upper window. His form was framed with smoke and flame. They saw him fairly tear apart the cage that held the lark. In an instant the bird was free and went soaring heavenward singing.

There was a crash; a floor had given way. A little later a crowd had gathered round the dead body of a boy. The school teacher and Billy's naturalist companion were looking down on the face that the flames had left untouched.

"He wanted to be a poet," said the teacher.

"Wanted to be?" said the tramper of the fields.

"Wanted to be? His whole life was a poem and his death was a song."

BARN SWALLOW, CHIMNEY SWEEP AND KING BIRD

By JULIE ADAMS POWELL.

When the King bird arrives in the early spring with his bride from the south, he guards her most jealously, and fights most pugnaciously all others of his kind who come near.

Noted for his fighting nature, the King bird is entitled to his royal name, and is also called the tyrant Fly Catcher, and from his epicurean love of insects, he is known again as the Bee Martin, although far removed from the Martin family, being really one of the Fly Catchers.

He possesses no noble qualities, as without provocation he often allows "his angry passions" to rise, and makes bold and aggressive attacks on the crow, and often chases away from his field the less offensive small birds. Very like the Indians of the western plains, the King bird never likes to meet a foe in open warfare, preferring to swoop down upon some unoffending neighbor, giving him a peck in the back of the head, and then our King bird turns like a flash to his resting place.

The King bird is about eight and a half inches in length. His upper parts are grayish slate color; on his head is a concealed orange red crest. The under parts are white, washed with gray on the breast. The tail is black, tipped with white. The nest is built at the end of a branch of some low tree, several feet from the ground, and is a compact structure, composed of leaves, string, weeds, grass, fine rootlets, bark and hair. The number of eggs are generally five, and they are creamy white, spotted with dark brown and purple gray.

I suppose that every boy who reads this paper has seen the Barn Swallow, but how many have seen the bird at work building her nest? Some day if you hide away inside the barn, and keep very quiet, you can witness this very interesting performance.

One day last summer I was out on a farm, and in the barn I heard a great chattering and chirping, and discovered the Barn Swallow were building. As the male of most bird families does not assist his mate in this work, I concluded that it was "he" who was doing the chattering, while the little housewife carried the mud and straw of which the walls of the house were built. Most of the time he was inside the half-finished nest giving advice, while she worked.

There were three nests under way, and they were round in form and the mud and straw were firmly and smoothly plastered together, and the inside of a finished one was lined with soft feathers from the chicken yard.

These birds are very graceful, and they go about in colonies, flying low over the meadows and fields while on the lookout for the insects on which they feed.

The male and the female Barn Swallow are marked alike. The upper parts are steely blue throat, upper breast and forehead are chestnut rufous in color, and the under parts are washed with the same, shading to a buff. The tail is very slender, and deeply forked. The female is slightly smaller than the male, and her coloring is paler. She raises two broods of young in a season, from the four to six eggs at a sitting, which are white with spots of purplish brown.

The Chimney Swift is more commonly called "The Chimney Swallow," whereas it is no swallow at all, being more nearly related to the humming birds than to the swallows.

These birds congregate about my home in small flocks, and in early morning and late afternoon may be seen rapidly sailing over the housetops, where they build their nests in unused chimneys. Their nests are composed of twigs glued together with a gummy secretion of the birds' salivary glands.

When the Swift flies, his movements are more suggestive of the bat than those of a bird, as he darts hither and thither, and it is often perplexing, at dusk, to distinguish the two.

These odd birds cling to the sides of the chimney, and to rough places, assisted by their spine-like tails, and are never seen to alight on the ground, because they would be unable to arise again, on account of their long wings and short feet. Their song consists of a rolling twitter, which is quite pleasant to hear.

The Chimney Swift is about an inch shorter than the English Sparrow, but its long wings make it appear larger. The male and female are marked alike, being of a deep, sooty gray. The tail is even, and has very elastic and sharply pointed quills, beyond which the wings extend an inch and a half. The feet have exceedingly sharp claws.

In country houses, during the summer, I have heard the roar, like distant thunder, of a flock of these birds rising from one of the large chimneys, in the early morning.

The Swift lays from four to six pure white eggs.

Stomach Overworked.

Eating between meals is a habit usually left over from childhood. Growing things need nourishing in small and frequent doses. Grown-ups merely require to repair the waste of the body—and the stomach is a comparatively small organ. Undoubtedly in many bodies it is kept stretched and in the same condition of an abused piece of rubber. How can it do its work?

Quiet English Parish.

The tiny parish of Clannaborough, North Devon, England, a little village, has a population of only 42, so that baptisms, marriages and burials are not very frequent. The other week the first marriage ceremony for 15 years took place, but even then the couple were not parishioners, the bride coming from St. Austell, the bridegroom, whose home is at Exmouth, being the rector's brother-in-law.

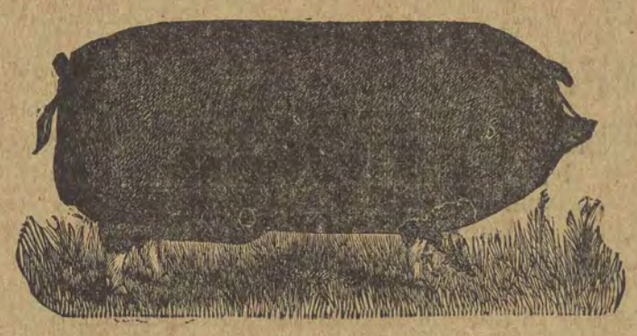
DARBYS FLUID

PREVENTS AND CURES



HOG CHOLERA

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

Pen up your hogs when cholera is in the neighborhood. For each ten hogs put one quarter of a bottle of Darbys Fluid in the daily supply of water. Clean out troughs every day before watering. Do not feed slop or any liquid food. Feed moderately on chops or other light stuff. Continue this treatment for two weeks, you can then turn your hogs out;—they are insured against cholera.

READ THE PROOF.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:
This is to certify that we have used Darbys Fluid for the prevention and cure of Hog Cholera. Last summer we used it on fifty head of hogs and we lost only nine. These nine consisted of a brood sow and litter of eight pigs. We believe we could have saved the entire herd had we started using Darbys Fluid earlier.
GANTT BROS. STORE CO., Little River, Ala.

GENTLEMEN:—
Hogs were dying of Cholera by the thousand in my neighborhood. They had it all around me but I saved all mine by putting Darbys Fluid in their drinking water and not letting them have any water without Darbys Fluid in it. Its a great preventive. I keep it on hand all the time. Its good for a hundred purposes.
J. A. STANALAND, Pidcock, Ga.

DARBYS FLUID has many uses about the household. It destroys germs or bad odors about the house and purifies the air of living or sleeping rooms. It heals wounds, sores, cuts or galls on human or animal flesh. It is a fine addition to the bath for cleansing the body or feet of disagreeable odors. If used in the water for brushing the teeth it sweetens the breath. As a disinfectant for the sick-room in contagious diseases and for safe-guarding the health of the family when such diseases are prevalent in the neighborhood it is worth it weight in gold.

The LADY of the MOUNT

SYNOPSIS.

Comtesse Elise, daughter of the governor of the Mount, has chance encounter with a peasant boy. The "Mount," a small rock-bound island, stood in vast bay on the northwestern coast of France, and during the time of Louis XVI. was a government stronghold. Develops that the peasant boy was the son of Seigneur Desaurac, nobleman. Young Desaurac determines to secure an education and become a gentleman; sees the governor's daughter depart for Paris. Lady Elise returns after seven years' schooling, and entertains many nobles. Her Ladyship dances with strange fisherman, and a call to arms is made in an effort to capture a mysterious Le Seigneur Noir. He escapes. Lady Elise is caught in the "Grand" tide. The Black Seigneur rescues and takes her to his retreat. Elise discovers that her savior was the boy with the fish. Sanchez, the Seigneur's servant, is arrested and brought before the governor. Lady Elise has Sanchez set free. Seigneur and a priest at the "Cockles." Sanchez tells Desaurac that Lady Elise betrayed him, but is not believed. The Seigneur plans to release prisoners at the Mount. Lady Elise pleads with her father to spare the lives of condemned prisoners. Disguised as a peasant Lady Elise mingles with the people and hears some startling facts. A mysterious Mountebank starts a riot. He is arrested and locked up after making close observations of the citadel, and is afterwards summoned before the governor's daughter. The governor enters the room during the interview with the mountebank. As a miserable buffoon, the Mountebank is released by order of the governor. Desuarac overpowers guard and dons soldier's uniform. The Seigneur successfully passes guards and finds the "Great Wheel." Jacques, the jailer, forced to tread the wheel and bring up enemies of the governor. The Black Seigneur liberates the prisoners. The Seigneur again made prisoner. The Marquis de Beauvilliers visits the Mount. The ladies and nobles inspect the dungeons. Elise visits the Seigneur. Lady Elise engages Nanette, daughter Pierre Laroche, friend of the Black Seigneur, as maid. Nanette plans the release of the Black Seigneur.

CHAPTER XXVIII.—(Continued.)

"This note might have been intended for some admirer!" said, at length, the Governor's daughter slowly.

"He looked more like an old privateersman!" murmured the woman. "And there may be some plot—some plan!"

"Privateersman!" The girl's manner underwent a change; she shrugged her shoulders. "What could they hope to do at the Mount! You are imaginative, Marie!" lightly. "Nanette is good-looking, and what little is here would seem to signify a rendezvous. There may be no great harm in that."

"I am sorry, my Lady, to seem to think ill of my own kin," muttered the woman dejectedly, "but—"

"Think no more of it! You have done your duty. Now leave the matter to me, and—thank you, Marie!"

When, however, the old nurse had gone, all pretense of lightness faded from the face of the Governor's daughter, and, opening the bit of paper, once more she scrutinized it swiftly, intently.

"Tomorrow—Monastery St. Ranu—" she read. "Yes; it must mean St. Ranulphe—where we are going. And where Beppo knew we were going! Beppo, she went down on the beach with!" Again she studied the fragment, striving to make out a word that had been blotted and was almost illegible. She frowned as she endeavored to decipher it. "Lady E." She gave an exclamation. "That refers, of course, to—But why?" She kept asking herself the question. "Why?" she repeated, when suddenly the brown eyes widened—changed; a new light shone in their depths. "It must be they intend to—what else?"

The sound of horns—signal for the party to gather—broke upon the air, and, nervously crushing in her palm the piece of the message, she stepped to the table, to the untasted breakfast. Like one in a dream, who yet feels the need for haste, she poured out the coffee; with unsteady hand raised the cup and drank; started to serve herself again; as if forgetful of the impulse, paused.

"And I?" she said with deeper breath. "To ride to the ambush they have so cleverly planned? Allow myself to be taken prisoner by these desperate men? No; no; I could not! And yet—" A trampling of horses' hoofs in the court below interrupted. "They are ready to start!" Uncertainly she lifted her head; looked around her; then mechanically stepped forward and left the room.

A scene of animation greeted her in the court, alive with lords and ladies, for the most part already in the saddle and waiting.

"Hail to Diana, who will lead us in the forests!"

"Fair nymph, let us away!" and the Marquis extended his hand.

With a seemingly merry nod she acknowledged their greetings; put out a foot, and lightly sprang to her place on the back of the nervous thoroughbred. But ere giving the signal to start, the girl's glance swung around to a window opposite, where stood an austere figure, imperturbably looking down to watch them ride off.

"Au revoir, mon pere!" Her voice rose with an odd, unusual thrill. "Au revoir!" she repeated, when a mistiness in her eyes suddenly blurred sight of him, and she tightened the reins. Yet hesitating to go, her gaze cleared, and swerving, was abruptly arrested by another and more interested spectator, who, partly concealed by flowers and plants, peered with anxious expectancy from her own balcony. As Nanette's eyes met those of the Governor's daughter, they wavered half guiltily; suddenly became steady, held by something—a flash of impelling intelligence in the other's gaze. A moment or two, my lady continued to regard the girl; then touching her horse, wheeled sharply, and set a pace downward not easy to follow.

At the base of the Mount they were met by a numerous guard bright in holiday trappings, and, under the care of the commandant, with flourish of horse, the party swept gaily from sands to shore.

"A gallant company, Monsieur le Commandant!" observed the Marquis to the officer in charge, as they reached the green line at the yellow basin's edge. "Now if we were to meet an enemy—"

"He would find us prepared, my Lord!" the officer declared.

"True!" And the nobleman complacently touched the jeweled hilt of his own blade, accompanying the action with a tender glance at the Lady Elise.

She, however, a little ahead, appeared not to hear; spoke suddenly to her horse, and, as they swung from the sward, started at a brisk gallop down the road. Laughing, the others came after, lords and ladies first; behind, with tumult and clatter, the commandant and his men. As they advanced, on either side the way thick trunks of moss-grown monarchs uplifted their gnarled and hoary branches, to meet overhead; through leafy interstices bright flashes of sunlight shot downward, danced on fine garments and accoutrements, and then whisked elfishly away. In dim recesses finches and sparrows sang; beyond, murmured streams and rivulets, while at the feet of the riders, gay restless flowers nodded, as if in accompaniment to the glad music of the morn.

"Small wonder his Excellency should have desired to add this fair principality to his own!" muttered the Marquis, looking around. "Of the seven forests of Brittany, none will compare with this, the Desaurac woods. What think you, Elise?" spurring his horse near his betrothed's. "Are you not taken by its beauties?"

She looked at him with a start; since leaving the sands she had not spoken, and now, tugging at the reins, only said abruptly: "My saddle! I believe it is loose."

"Loose!" repeated the nobleman. "Careless lackeys! Let us see!" And grasping the bridle of her horse, pulled in his own, and drew both animals to a standstill at the side of the road.

As he dismounted to examine straps

The Sound of Horns—

and fastenings, the others dashed up; my lady lightly motioned them on. "We'll soon overtake you! Don't wait!" Unquestioning, they obeyed; though the commandant, to whom a few moments later she delivered a similar injunction, brought his men to a halt and proffered his services. Whereupon the Marquis repeated the girl's words more sharply; reddening, the officer wheeled and started to ride on.

"I can't find anything wrong here!" Puzzled, the Marquis straightened.

But her eyes were directed ahead and she pointed with her whip to a break in the woody barrier to the right—a path that, springing from the roadside, seemed to plunge into the very heart of the labyrinth.

"Look! the short cut!—that would bring us half an hour before them to the ruins! Let us take it!"

A light seemed suddenly to break on her companion, and he sprang airily to his saddle. "As my Lady wills!" gallantly.

"Then call to the commandant, and tell him we'll meet them there!"

The Marquis obeyed, and, without awaiting answer, or demur from the officer in charge of the guard, the girl flicked her horse and sent him over a low bush into the narrow way.

Fairly in the path, she rode fast, and pressing hard behind, my lord soon found reason for doubt as to the advisability of that route, and a suspicion of regret at his own assent to the departure from the main thoroughfare. As their surroundings grew wilder and the slender green figure flitted more and more recklessly before him, he even ventured to voice his misgivings—advise greater care. A shake of the fair head was all he received for answer and, regardless of the increasing roughness of the way, she continued to sweep on, now uphill, then down, avoiding by a quick turn one obstacle here, leaping another there! From a black ambush, a branch like the arm of a Titan reached out to seize, but adroitly she swayed from its grasp and only the twigs and leaves touched lightly the bent figure.

My lord, however, they struck sharply, and at the sudden smart and a quick realization of falling behind, frowningly he drove his horse harder. The tete-a-tete he had naturally expected from her request to pursue the lonelier way promised now not to materialize; the idea that she was fleeing, he pursuing, possessed him. The forest, a tangle of shrubs and strange creepers, was the scene of the idyl; she, a sprite of the greenwood, danced illusively through the maze. At length when my lord had begun to grow weary of vainly endeavoring to overtake her, fate favored his efforts; brought to a standstill, at the edge of a torrent, the object of his pursuit.

"Are you mad, Elise?" A shadow on his brow, the Marquis rode down.

She made no reply; regarded only the water.

"I hope it is not in your mind to attempt to cross," he went on, a shade of petulance in his accents.

She urged her horse forward; it stopped.

"Elise! I beg of you! It is dangerous; better go back, and around!"

But the girl set her red lips, raised her whip, and brought it down hard. The animal sprang into the foam; breasting the current, it slipped once or twice, recovered, and, after an effort, managed to reach the bank opposite. My Lord—less blithely than he had first embarked on the adventure—followed; the cold waters surged around, and he almost expected to be swept away. At length, however, chilled by the icy touch of the torrent and somewhat more out of humor, he found himself on the other side. Near the top of the bank, where the Governor's daughter had now the grace to await him, he rejoined her, disapproval on his face, reproach in his eyes. Yet still did the girl remain unconscious of her lover's wounded sensibilities; her own eyes, like stars beneath the flurry of hair, were turned, not to the young man, but away, toward a gaunt-looking ruin that had suddenly uplifted itself, as if by magic, through a rift in the forest. But a few hundred yards distant, the black crumbling walls bristled with rough, jagged edges—big, broken teeth that snarled at the rim of the ever-young wood. The very brightness of the day seemed only to emphasize the ominous aspect of the place; to reveal more plainly the solitary character of its wildness.

"The monastery, I suppose?" following the direction of her gaze, the Marquis, after a pause, grudgingly vouchsafed.

"Yes," said the girl in a low tone; "yes!"

"Shall we go on?"

Her eyes, passing over a tangle of shrubs, bushes and thick, natural screens, slowly settled on a spot, not far away, where a wild bird, about to alight, fled off with a scream.

"Shall we go on?"

With a start the girl turned; the clear-cut features were very grave; in her gaze shone sudden compunction. She raised her hand. "My veil!" she said quickly. "I—dropped it. Do you mind? You—you will find it on this side of the stream—a little way down."

"Mind?" He regarded her doubtfully a moment; then moved by the irresistible appeal in her eyes, rather abruptly he wheeled, and as he did so, she gathered up the reins. Ere proceeding farther upon this errand of gallantry, my lord looked around.

"You seem to set great store on this veil," he observed suspiciously. "And I believe you were about to ride off!" he added, noting her expression, when, before she had time for pretext or answer, a heavy body stirred in the bushes, near at hand, and a gruff voice called out.

"Stand where you are!"

The nobleman's face changed; his gaze, as if fascinated, now rested on a score of rough figures who, following the order, so unexpected and startling, sprang simultaneously from neighboring thicket or covert, and advanced to surround them. Held by their grim aspect—the desperate determined visages; the black, threatening looks—in the surprise of the moment, too late my lord's hand sought the sword at his side. Roughly plucked from his horse, he found himself flung to the sward; unceremoniously pinioned, and heard the voice of my lady raised in his behalf.

CHAPTER XXIX.

The Marquis Intervenes.

The evening of the same day, his Excellency, in the seclusion of a small private chamber adjoining the salle du gouvernement, stood looking down at his desk on which were strewn papers and messages containing the latest news from Paris and received at the Mount but a few hours before. That the character of this information, political and social, was little to his liking, seemed manifest from his manner; he stared at the missives resentfully; then frowned and threw down the pen he had been using mark, or make note of, their contents.

"Versailles—a mob! Sugar-plums to placate them! Sugar-plums!" he repeated; and, impatiently turning away, walked to the window. There for some time he stood peering out, when, the current of his thoughts slowly changing, he took from his pocket a watch, and examined the jeweled face. "Time they were back!" About to return to his table and task, a loud knocking arrested the impulse, and testily the Governor called out; glanced toward the threshold and surveyed the intruder.

"A message from the commandant, your Excellency!" said the man, a trooper of the Mount, with a respectful, though nervous salute.

"Why," returned the Governor in a dry tone, "didn't he bring it himself?"

"Because," the trooper shifted; looked away; "because Monsieur le Commandant is engaged in scouring the country for miscreants, your Excellency."

"Miscreants!" sharply. "What miscreants?"

"Monsieur le Commandant hopes to overtake those who have carried off the Lady Elise," said the messenger hurriedly, in the tone of one anxious to be done with his task.

"Carried off!" The thin figure wavered as if struck by a cold breath. "Carried off!" he repeated, laying his hand on the back of the chair.

"By a band of the Black Seigneur's men! His lordship, the Marquis, they left behind bound and secured, but the Lady Elise they took with them."

For some time his Excellency said nothing; like a ghost of himself, leaned hard against his support and looked at the trooper.

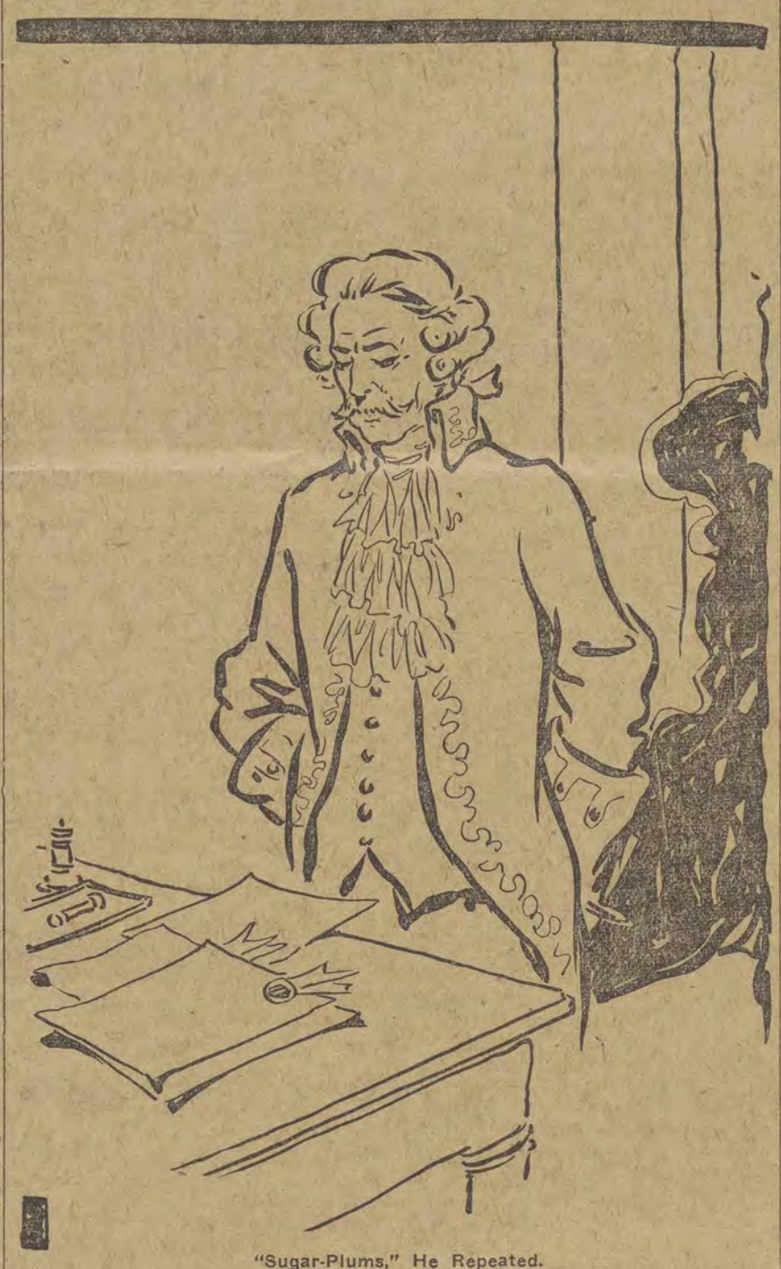
"But how could it have happened?" at length in a voice, low, intense, he inquired. "Monsieur le Commandant! The guard—you—all are alive?"

Stumblingly, as best he could, the soldier explained, and when he had done, his Excellency made no sign that he had heard.

"Monsieur le Commandant further ordered me to say he had no doubt he would return with the Lady Elise," added the messenger hastily.

"Monsieur le Commandant!" The Governor's eyes suddenly blazed; swiftly he put question after question, and, having probed to the core the consistency of the tale, with a gesture, brusk and contemptuous, dismissed the bearer.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)



"Sugar-Plums," He Repeated.

Filling the House.

The theatrical man just in off the road was recounting to the New York manager his qualifications for a box office post.

"I don't see that you are any better than a dozen other men I can take my pick from," said the manager. "You say you can sell tickets. So can they. Nobody can sell tickets if people don't come to buy."

"No, they can't," said the man, "but I have the knack of seating people so an audience of 50 people will look like 400, and the house will never look empty."

"There's a good deal in that," said the manager, and he gave the man the job.

Their Consolation.

Quartermaster General Edwin A Taylor of the United Sons of Confederate Veterans told at a Memorial day banquet in Memphis this story.

"A southerner," he said, "sat in the lobby of a New York hotel, discussing certain campaigns with a northerner.

"'Well,' the northerner ended, with a laugh, 'well, we licked you, anyhow.'

"'Yes, you did,' the southerner admitted; 'but, by crinus! it's plain from the size of your pension list that before we gave in we crippled every blessed one of you!'"

Pathfinder.

"I fear you are losing interest in the cause."

"Why?"

"I see you constantly with a young man."

"No danger," declared the militant suffragette.

"Then he is not your beau?"

"No; he's a professional bondsman."

ALMOST BEYOND HUMAN ENDURANCE

Were the Agonies Which Miss Lance Underwent. She Lives to Tell the Story, However.

Palmer, Okla.—In a letter from this place, Miss Forrest E. Lance says: "As I have been benefited by the use of Cardui, the woman's tonic, I want to write this letter for publication, as it may be the means of helping other suffering women.

For three years, I suffered so, at times, with my back and bearing down pains, I would think I could not possibly endure the pain. I gradually got worse, and would look with dread for these trying times to roll around.

Finally I decided to try Cardui, the woman's tonic, as I had heard so much of its help to other women, and how glad I am that I did, for I can truthfully say that I have been greatly benefited by taking only four bottles; in fact, it has entirely relieved me.

I can truly sympathize with any sufferer from those awful pains due to womanly trouble, for I have certainly had the experience of them."

As a medicine for women who suffer from the numerous ailments peculiar to their sex, or as a tonic for tired, nervous, worn-out women, Cardui has a record of more than 50 years' success.

It has benefited thousands of women in this time, and should do the same for you.

Give Cardui a trial.

What Interested Him.

Eight-year-old Donald was unusually restless in church, so his mother was doubly gratified one Sunday morning to see him sitting with clasped hands and bowed head throughout a lengthy prayer. When, later, she expressed appreciation of his attentive manner, the boy's face softened with a pleasant memory.

"That fly," he chuckled, "walked in and out of my hands exactly 270 times!"

HAPPY OLD AGE

Most Likely to Follow Proper Eating.

As old age advances we require less food to replace waste, and food that will not overtax the digestive organs, while supplying true nourishment.

Such an ideal food is found in Grape-Nuts, made of whole wheat and barley by long baking and action of diastase in the barley which changes the starch into a most digestible sugar.

The phosphates also, placed up under the outer coat of the wheat, are included in Grape-Nuts, but are lacking in white flour because the outer coat of the wheat darkens the flour and is left out by the miller. These natural phosphates are necessary to the well-balanced building of muscle, brain and nerve cells.

"I have used Grape-Nuts," writes an Iowa man, "for 8 years and feel as good and am stronger than I was ten years ago.

"Among my customers I meet a man every day who is well along in years and attributes his good health to Grape-Nuts and Postum which he has used for the last 5 years. He mixes Grape-Nuts with Postum and says they go fine together.

"For many years before I began to eat Grape-Nuts, I could not say that I enjoyed life or knew what it was to be able to say 'I am well.' I suffered greatly with constipation, but now my habits are as regular as ever in my life.

"Whenever I make extra effort I depend on Grape-Nuts food and it just fills the bill. I can think and write a great deal easier."

"There's a Reason." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

LATE NEWS OF THE WORLD TERSELY TOLD.

SOUTH, EAST, NORTH AND WEST

Notes From Foreign Lands, Throughout the Nation and Particularly the Great South.

Southern.

John L. Seay of Rome, Ga., was robbed of $360 in cash and valuable jewelry while the family were at dinner. The thief, evidently familiar with the premises, entered the house and broke open a trunk Seay kept his surplus cash in.

Will Davis, a negro, was lynched at Franklin, Texas, after he had shot and killed Tom Hodges, aged 23, ano Tom Rushing, 27, and badly wounded Will Maxwell, on the Rushing farm, ten miles north of Franklin.

Mrs. Anna M. Wilkinson of New York, formerly of Augusta, Ga., who spent her infancy and young girlhood there, has returned to New York City to look up some musty old records and to find some clue, if possible, that will assist her in getting into communication with her father's people. Mrs. Wilson has discovered that there is in Russia estimated at $21,000,000 to which she is a legal heir.

Emanuel Nichols, aged 35, a farmer living ten miles northwest of Clayton, Ga., and his two-year-old baby girl are dead, while his son and daughter have been bound over to the grand jury for voluntary manslaughter, as a result of a general shooting melee in the farmer's home.

The second annual convention of the Southern Labor Congress has closed at Nashville, Tenn. The congress voted to allow negro laboring organizations to affiliate with the Southern Labor Congress. The next meeting will be held in Birmingham, Ala.

The Southern Christian Citizenship Congress, under the auspices of the Civic League of America, opened at the auditorium to the accompaniment of near sensationalism revealed in the address of A. J. Orem of Boston, who, in his treatise, styled "From Theocracy to Theocracy," all but put outright Socialism into the book of good citizenship. Owing to his presence at the Georgia capitol, where the conference is being held, Gov. Slaton was unable to preside at the gathering in Taft hall.

J. V. and W. H. Hogg, brothers, of Kline, S. C., eight miles from Allendale, were shot and killed by J. W. Hogg, a third or fourth cousin. The load entered the right shoulder of one and the left shoulder of the other. One shot ended the life of both men. J. W. Hogg, the alleged assailant, is now confined in the jail at Barnwell-S. C., where he went and give himself up to the sheriff.

General.

Four girls who were to become brides were killed by lightning near the village of Nagy-Varad. The girls were picking flowers to decorate the church for the weddings. They were overtaken by a storm and took refuge in a grotto at Budapest, which lightning struck, and the bodies were found in the wreckage.

In a double line that never seemed to diminish as the day wore on, thousands of persons filed through the flower-filled rotunda of the city hall and past the body of William J. Gaynor, lying in state. Unmindful of a heavy downpour of rain and threatening skies, the people came in a continuous stream silently to find places in the long, slow moving procession that extended for half a mile through lower Broadway and through City Hall park to the city hall of New York City. It was New York's spontaneous tribute to its dead mayor.

That Hans Schmidt, the Jekyle-Hyde priest, whose double life was exposed when he was arrested and confessed the murder of Anna Aumuller, the house girl, after killing her and dismembering her body in a Bradhurst avenue flat, hired another apartment in which he planned to conceal himself, was developed from police discoveries. In ransacking his rooms detectives found evidence that Schmidt had stolen $400 from the Easter collection at St. Joseph's church and that he had robbed a visiting priest who spent a night at St. Joseph's rectory.

Counsel for Harry Kendall Thaw laid the foundation for plans to carry his case to the Supreme court of the United States—if such a step is found necessary. When the governor of New Hampshire passes on the matter of the extradition of Thaw to New York, at the hearing to be held at Concord, the findings, if adverse to Thaw, will be reviewed by the United States district court, and, if a decision against then be rendered, successive appeals will be taken until the case reaches the highest court land. This is the announcement made by the Thaw lawyers.

A man believed by the police to have been John Hawkins, 68 years old, of Erie, Pa., committed suicide by jumping into the Niagara river from the lower steel arch bridge that spans the river just above the start of the whirlpool rapids. It is two hundred feet above the water. Two women standing on the Canadian cliff saw the man climb on the railing. He sat astride the rail several minutes, looking down at the turbulent waters, then lurched forward, and his body shot downward and struck the water headforemost. He was dashed to instant death.

The deaths of the late President Francisco I. Madero and Vice President Jose Maria Pino Suarez were not brought about by a punishable crime, according to a decision pronounced by a military court in Mexico. The investigation last six months. It was started by the military commandant of the federal district immediately on the conclusion of the ten-days' battle in the streets of Mexico last February, which resulted in Provisional President Huerta coming into power.

Residents of "Millionaire Row" in New York City estimated that burglaries of houses in their section during the summer had cost them $200,000. Many of them did not know they had been robbed till they returned from their summer vacations.

The body of Alice Hopper, 16 years old, who had been missing from her home in Kearny, N. J., for some time, has been found in the Passaic river, at Harrison, her skirts weighted with stones.

Guarded by a sheriff who sat in the front row of the large church gathering, Rev. Roy Hudson, evangelist and former pugilist, held a farewell revival at Mexico, Mo. He had been arrested during the day on a charge of wife-abandonment at the request of the authorities at Terer Haute, Ind. The presence of the sheriff did not in the least dampen the ardor of the evangelist. He will return without extradition procedure.

Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, owner of the Los Angeles Times, received an infernal machine by mail. It was the second time in three years that General Otis' life had been attempted by a bomb. Any chance of his being killed or injured by the bomb was foiled by the watchfulness of General Otis' Japanese servant, who became suspicious of the package and called his employer's attention to it.

Provisional President Victoriana Huerta delivered his semi-annual message of the opening of the second session of the Twenty-seventh Mexican congress. In it he promised to spare no efforts to bring about the unrestricted election of the president and vice president of the Mexican republic next month, declaring that it would constitute the greatest triumph of his career to turn over the office to his successor with the country at peace as he hoped to do.

Washington.

President Wilson will be given an opportunity during the first week of October to review the largest aggregation of mounted troops of the regular army that has assembled in Washington since the late sixties. It is planned to have three regiments march to Washington where the president may review them.

Lieut. Col. Francisco Cardenas, alleged to have been the assassin of Francisco I. Madero, former president of Mexico, has himself been asassinated, according to a dispatch received at Washington at the headquarters of the Mexican Constitutionalists. The advices state that Cardenas was killed at Michoalan, where he had been sent by Provisional President Huerta to take command of federal troops. It is stated that he was assassinated for fear he might reveal the orders he received on the night of February 22 when Madero was killed and when Cardenas was in command of the soldiers conveying Madero from the national palace to prison in Mexico City.

Attorney General McReynolds is making a vigorous effort to expedite pending anti-trust investigations and to keep abreast wtih all current complaints of violations of the Sherman law. The plan is to reinforce the staff of special anti-trust lawyers in the department with the services of the United States attorneys.

News that Gen. Felix Diaz, nephew of Porfirio Diaz, had been recalled to Mexico to become the candidate of the Huerta faction in the coming presidential election aroused much interest at Washington in official circles. The feeling was that the return of Diaz meant a compliance with President Wilson's principal demand that General Huerta should not be a candidate.

So far as the Washington administration is concerned, it became known that no move is contemplated in the Mexican situation at present. The elections of October 26 are awaited in Washington with keen interest, and the next step in the policy of the United States is likely to make its appearance thereafter. Administration officials read long excerpts of General Huerta's message to the Mexican congress, but made no formal comment. It is understood that the administration does not attach much importance to the document.

A delegation representative of Louisiana and particularly of New Orleans business men, headed by Senator Ransdell of Louisiana and M. K. Trezevant, general manager of the New Orleans chamber of commerce, conferred with Acting Secretary Post of the department of labor, with a view to diverting part of the tide of immigration through the port of New Orleans, which, it was stated, now had superior facilities for handling immigrants.

Reform of cotton exchange contracts rather than the abolition of the exchanges will probably be brought about through an amendment to the tariff bill being urged by Southern members of congress. This amendment has been framed by Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia and Representative Asbury F. Lever of South Carolina, after a conference with officials of the department of agricutlre and with Mr. Burleson, the postmaster general, who took an active part in the legislation to curtail exchange gambling while a member of the house of representatives.

Uric Acid Is Slow Poison

Excess uric acid left in the blood by weak kidneys, causes more diseases than any other poison.

Among its effects are backache, headache, dizziness, irritability, nervousness, drowsiness, "blues," rheumatic attacks and urinary disorders. Later effects are dropsy, gravel or heart disease.

If you would avoid uric acid troubles, keep your kidneys healthy. To stimulate and strengthen weak kidneys, use Doan's Kidney Pills—the best recommended special kidney remedy.

A Mississippi Case

Mrs. A. S. Payne, 801 S. Third Ave., Columbus, Miss., says: "I had terrible pains in my back and hips. My bladder was badly inflamed. I often cried out in pain. Doctors didn't help me and I was all run down. Doan's Kidney Pills brought relief from the first and three boxes cured me. I have felt like a different person since."

Like a Balloon.

Apropos of the divorce evil, Dr. Herbert M. Shisholm, the Reno statistician, said with a sigh:

"An exhaustive study of divorce statistics forces me to the belief that the average woman's heart is like a toy balloon—lighter than air, and most restless men tied to somebody."

ECZEMA ITCHED AND BURNED

Falmouth, Ky.—"Two years ago I was troubled with skin and scalp troubles. I would have pimples that would break out and form sores on my face and head, with terrible itching. The eczema on my face and head itched and burned and when I scratched it, it made sores and I was very disfigured for the time being. My head became so sore I could not touch it with a comb; it became a mass of sores. My hair fell out gradually.

"I was afflicted about a year before I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using them three weeks I was getting better and in less than three months, after using eight cakes of Cuticura Soap and five boxes of Cuticura Ointment, I was completely cured of eczema." (Signed) Frank Vastine, Dec. 12, 1912.

HADN'T TOLD ANY UNTRUTH

Colored Witness Simply Stated a Fact, Though It Was Not the Information Desired.

In St. Louis a stout colored woman, apparently about forty years old, was called as a witness in an assault case before a police judge. She said: "I am eighty-four and I live down near the river, and this is what I saw when the fight took place."

She then gave her account of the assault.

On cross-examination the attorney for the defense asked her when and where she was born, and she replied:

"Right here in St. Louis, in July, '72."

"Then," cried the lawyer in a triumphant tone, "what do you mean by saying that you are eighty-four?"

"Oh," replied the old darky, "that ain't my age; that is my bust measurement."

Had His Goat, Evidently.

A Springfield man, replying to his wife's petition for divorce, says: "Defendant states that the plaintiff is much better qualified than the defendant to carry her part in nagging contests; that she commands a better and more extensive vocabulary than the defendant, and simply overwhelmed him with her complaints and reproaches, and she was so master of her feelings that she could readily pass from storm to sunshine, from abuse to tears, from harsh language to tenderness, and from nagging plaintiff could upon the appearance of a third person so readily become all smiles and suavity that her sudden and complete changes of moods completely bewildered defendant."—Kansas City Star.

After a Pleasant Evening.

Mr. Sydney Buxton told an amusing story for the purpose of illustrating a point at a recent dinner. A certain convivial soul, who had been invited to dine with a friend, whose house was at the end of a dark and muddy lane, was advised to bring a big lantern. After a very jovial evening the convivial one left and struggled home through the mud, firmly gripping his heavy burden by the handle. Next morning he received this message from his host: "Herewith your lantern; please return parrot and cage."

Had a Chance Now.

While he was playing on a certain Scottish course, a politician remarked to his caddie: "By the way, the last time I was here I played with Tom McGregor. He's grand player!" "Aye," said the caddie, "but ye could beat McGregor noo." The politician, knowing what a fine player McGregor had shown himself, was immensely pleased at what he deemed the caddie's compliment to his own improved play. "Do you think so?" he exclaimed. "Aye," came the slow reply, "McGregor's deid!"

Speak Louder.

An old farmer in Ayrshire had a habit of feigning deafness when he wanted to avoid answering an awkward question. One day a neighbor said to him:

"I'd like to borrow your cart this morning; mine is having a spring mended."

"You'll have to speak louder," the old farmer answered. "I don't hear very well—and I don't like to lend my cart, anyhow."—Glasgow Spy.

Pithy Postscript.

A striking illustration of the saying that the pith of a lady's letter is in the postscript occurred in the case of a young lady who, having gone out to India, and writing home to her friends, concluded with the following words: "P. S.—You will see by my signature that I am married."

Contradictory Pleasure.

"What do you think his wife considered his giving her a square deal?"

"What?"

"Taking her on a round of amusements."

BISHOP'S POINT WELL MADE

Rebuke to Which It Is Hard to See How the Curate Could Make an Answer.

Bishop Oliphant of Llandaff had a well-to-do young man as curate who had rather sporting instincts. He kept his own horses and always drove tandem. The bishop disapproved, and decided to administer a rebuke on a favorable opportunity. Both the bishop and the curate, each driving in his own way, met near the historic Cow and Snuffers. The bishop, of course, was driving two abreast, and the curate tandem, as usual.

"I really must protest," said the bishop, "at your driving about in such a manner."

"Well, my lord," said the curate, "you are driving two horses, and so am I. What is the difference?"

After a few moments' reflection Bishop Oliphant replied:

"If, when you are at prayers at the cathedral, the congregation placed their hands in the same position as you have placed your horses what would become of the dignity and solemnity of the service?"—London Mail.

Marked Similarity.

"If 12 persons were to agree to dine together every day, but never sit in exactly the same order around the table," didactically stated the professor, "it would take them 13,000,000 years, at the rate of one dinner a day, and they would have eaten more than 474,000,000 dinners, before they could get through all the possible arragements in which they could place themselves.

"Yep," snarled Uncle Pepys. "That would be nearly as many ways as a a small boy rearranges himself during a long sermon."—Judge.

Gloves regular price $1, now selling for 40c.

Specials in Groceries.

40 lbs. Rice for $1; 22 lbs. Y. C. Sugar $1; 20 lbs. Best Granulated Sugar $1.
Can Peaches, regular price, 25c, now 17c.
Alco, Cozy Cup and Jackson Square Coffee less than wholesale price.
A lot of can Syrup, Hominy, Kraut Tomatoes, all at 8c per can.
Jellier, regular 10 cents, will sell at 5c.
Good Flour, $5 per barrel and up.

LADIES DRESS GOODS.

New models in Ladies Suits, Dresses and Coats, Silks and Dress Goods. You will find displayed here the latest models.
I have purchased the best and most stylish creations ever brought to this market.

FURNITURE.

72 inch solid oak roller top bedsteads, regular price $6, now $4.50. 10 regular $50 suites of furniture going at $35. Odds and ends of Wash Stands and Bureaus, from $4 to $7.50. A job lot of Iron Bedsteads, regular $4.50 at $3.00.

SHOES.

A full line of Howard & Foster and A. J. Bates Shoes for men. Both are a well known and high class shoe. Every pair guaranteed. 100 pairs fine shoes for men regular $4, now $2.65. 100 pairs of ladies $3 shoes at $1.50. 100 pairs childrens shoes at $1.20.

Wagons and Buggies.

My lot of $40 Buggies which I advertised a few days ago was sold in half the time I expected. I will have ten more $40 buggies in this sale, and ten $50 buggies. So if you want a Buggy, now is the time to buy cheap.
Three heavy Wagons for sale at cost.

Buggy Given Away Free.

I gave away a buggy last year; Mr. W. L. Popwell was the lucky winner. I am going to give away another this season. With every dollar cash purchase I will give a ticket entitling the holder to one chance on the Buggy. Will also Give a ticket for each dollar paid on accounts.

SOME OF THE MISCELLANEOUS BARGAINS I AM OFFERING.

I have 25 small Cooking Stoves that always sell for $10. I am offering these at $7.50.
One set of medium dray wheels for sale cheap.
I have for sale one milch cow that has given 5 gallons of milk per day. Calf 5 months old.

Just bear in mind that you can get what you want at my store and at a lower price than elsewhere. The quality will stand the test too. Come to see me while the sale is on. When you make a purchase be sure to get a chance on the Free Buggy.

One mare known as the Jasper Dennis mare, said to work well in any place; and a splendid buggy mare. Will sell cheap for cash or on time.
I have in my stock a full line of mens clothing that I will sell very cheap.
There are dozens of other bargains which I have not space to mention.

I think I have as good a stock of merchandise as was ever brought to this market, and all I ask is a look before buying. The above prices will only hold till the goods I have on hand are sold, as it will now cost me much more to buy the goods than I am selling them at. Remember the date, Oct. 1 to Nov. 8 at 3 p.m.

Don't fail to remember that I keep Water Ground Meal for sale.

I have recently employed Mr. Roland W. Taylor as Salesman. He needs no introduction.

Soldiers Pensions Are Ready

The last quarter pensions for the old Soldiers of Chilton County are ready for payment at the Probate Judge's office. Some may have the idea that a number of the pensioners have been taken off the roll, but this is a mistake. None have been taken off the roll in Chilton Coun ty, and all who have heretofore drawn a pension can secure same for the past quarter by applying at the office of the Judge of Probate.

Thorsby Items.

PREPARATIONS MADE FOR ALABAMA'S GREATEST FAIR

"It all depends on the weather," said President Burton of the Alabama State Fair, when asked about this year's meeting at Birmingham.

"Every preparation has been made for Alabama's greatest fair and its success is fully assured if the weather holds good. We would take out weather insurance if such a thing was to be had in this country, but the best efforts of fair managers have not yet perfected any arrangement for satisfactory weather insurance, though they are still working on the problem."

John Rehberg, who for several years has managed the successful exhibits for the Cullman county farmers, says that their display of farm products this year will be quite up to the high standard they have set—if the weather permits. The same story comes from Etowah county, where the Gadsden Chamber of Commerce is making the first exhibit at the State Fair from that county, as a starter for the County Fair which they hope to hold next year.

The Baldwin county exhibit will be managed this season by L. F. Rhodes, an agricultural scientist and enthusiast, known to his old classmates at Auburn as "Dusty" Rhodes. He has assembled an excellent display of the semi-tropical fruits of Baldwin as well as the staples which are making the cut-over lands of that section so valuable, and will make a strong effort for the first prize, for county exhibits.

The progress in agriculture that has been made in Morgan county will be ably demonstrated, it is said, with an exhibit of farm products which will be under the management of George I. Motz, of Huntsville, and Coosa county will likewise make an excellent display through the efforts of Lindsay F. Smith and his associates. The Montgomery county exhibits will be under the management of W. C. Naftel of Naftel, Ala. The Marion county exhibit will be under the management of G. S. Jones of Gwin, Ala. J. S. Montgomery is now preparing the Jefferson county exhibit, which will open the eyes of the local people as to what is being done in an agricultural and horticultural way in the valleys surrounding Greater Birmingham. This exhibit will not come into competition with the other counties for the rich county premiums, though there will be valuable special prizes for Jefferson county exhibitors.

B. B. BURTON

President and General Manager Alabama State Fair, Birmingham.

Dog Show Feature.

Some of the finest dogs in the world will be shown at the State Fair October 9 to 18, and a new building has been constructed in which to make the exhibit. This will be the second dog show in Birmingham and will exceed the former effort which was also made at the fair grounds, under the auspices of the Birmingham Kennel Club.

Jack Biddle, manager of the dog show, says that entries are being made from all parts of Alabama as well as Georgia, Tennessee and other states. The bird dog classes seem to be in the lead in point of numbers, he says, with the bull dogs and collies about even for second place.

A. F. Hockwalt of Toledo, Oho, has been selected as the judge of the dog show and he will be assisted by C. F. Eastman of Birmingham. Both men are ardent and expert dog fanciers and their appointment is giving general satisfaction among the prospective exhibitors. Mr. Hockwalt was the judge at the previous fair and has a wide reputation in that line of work.

Special arrangements have been made with the Tick Eradication Bureau of the government so that there will be no quarantine against cattle exhibited at the fair from non-infected territory. Every precaution has been taken to free the fair grounds from ticks.

Clanton High School Notes

By Hoke Pipes and Dorcas Maddox

Edgar Teel, while mad at Omar Reynolds the other day said that it would not do for Omar to lose his feet; if he did Omar would go straight up for sure. But Oliver disagrees with Edgar. Oliver says that if you were to cut his head off he would go down to the center of the earth; which is right.

We have now received our desks, and believe us they have all others beat.

Thursday there were two piano tuners tuning the pianos at the school.

The song books are in the auditorium and the pupils are now singing with voices like sparrows.

False report. Mr. Jean Wyatt stuck his head out of the door of Mr. Pickens room the other day; when a small kid thought it was fire; he began to hollow fire! fire! Every pupil in the building at the time ran out; Mr. Pickens went to see where the fire was and discovered that the kid only saw Jean's red head The cause of not distinguishing the difference between these two objects was, that Mr. Hoke Pipes had just waked up from a nap which he had been taking during his Latin recitation, and for some reason his eyes failed to serve him accurately.

Miss Bevely Hester has a bad cold this week. She has acted greedy; she took too much.

Miss Annie Gragg and Izora Callen got in a fuss the other day about which was the tallest.

Mr. Oscar Jones lost his soul the other day; Jean Wyatt found it. It may be asked what soul; the sole of his shoe.

We have now two new janitors. "Green" quit because he was afraid that he would fall again. Edgar Teel and Wallace Jones succeeded him.

Lost, strayed or stolen, one pencil; if found return to Lizzie Culpepper.

Mr. Dorcas Maddox, editor of the school news has just received his new pieces for his 348; he is certainly happy.

Mr. Wesley Adams and Dorcas Maddox went fishing the other day; they fished and fished, still they caught no fish. Dock thought that if he got his 348, he might run into the water and scare the fish so that they would jump on dry land. He got his 348 in the water and the fish got frightened and went down the stream instead of jumping on dry land, and Dorcas Maddox lost his 348 and had to swim out. If you want to get whipped just ask him about it.

Miss Bevely Hester is taking music these days; she took a piece of sheet music from Annie Gragg.

Mr. Earle Pinckard stepped on a "tack" the other day—"Punctured!"

The W. & W. chorus class met the other day. The boys did not behave nice, so they kept a few in, among who were Joe Higgins, Mr. Pickens, Frank Palmer, etcera. Behave better next time boys.

Sing a song of six pence,
a pocket full of pie;
Of all the boys I ever knew,
Wesley sure can lie.

If you want to see Adolph Sartor tickle,
See him riding on his new bicycle.

Misses Kathleen, Izora and Bevely took a joy ride last Sunday. Gee! it rained, says Izora. Kathleen and Bevely felt no pain till they got home that night at nine o'clock.

Mr. Wesley Adams, who lives near his friend Dorcas called Dorcas to go up a tree and get a peculiar animal that was up there. Dorcus could not see the animal, so Wesley told him to go up and shake it out and that he would kill it when it fell. Dorcas got on a rotten limb and the limb came down with him behind it. Wesley grabbed up a stick and nearly killed Dorcas before he found out who it was. Dorcas eats his meals off of the mantel piece these days.

I. O. O. F. Lecture at Court House

Grand Master Fred J. Cramton and his wife of Montgomery, and Hon. L. C. Cramton and wife of Michigan will deliver lectures and exhibit steroptican views of the Odd Fellows Orphan Homes of the United States, at the Court House in Clanton on October 4th, at 7:30 p.m. These lectures will be valuable and interesting, as they are to be rendered by persons who are imminently acquainted with the works of the Order throughout the Country. Hon L. C. Cramton is a member of Congress from the Seventh Michigan District, and is a man of great prominence. The public is invited to attend. No admission will be charged.

Singing Convention

As announced, the Chilton County singing Convention met in special session at Liberty on Sunday, Sept. 21st. The Convention was called to order at 10:00 A.M. by the President. After song, the Convention united in prayer led by Prof. J. H. Henderson. An arranging committee for the day, composed of Messrs. James Franklin, T. J. Littlejohn, and J. H Williams was appointid.

Program for the forenoon was as follows: Prof. H. M. Eagle 15 minutes. with W. G. Culp,— organist; Prof. James Franklin 15 minutes with Miss Evie Franklin, organist; Prof. J. M. Williams 15 minutes. with Prol. H. M. Eagle, organist A quartet was then rendered by Profs. James Franklin, H. M. Eagle, J. M. Williams, and C. Littlejohn.

A lesson or 15 minutes. was then directed by R. A. Smith with Miss Maud Childress organist; followed by Prof. C. N. Oden 15 minutes. with Miss Lizzie Oden, organist

The Convention then adjourned for noon refreshments.

A most bountiful dinner was spread by the good ladies of the community and, needless to say, was enjoyed by all present.

The convention was again callee to order by the President at 1:15 P.M. After a few songs by the President., a quartet was rendered by the peerless quartet Band composed of Messrs. J. W.Lowery, R. A.Smith, E. E. Smeth, and C. N' Oden. Prof W. O.Rich then directed 3 songs with Prof. H. Eagle, organist; Prof. J, W. Lowery 3 songs with Miss Birtie Ecwards, organist; Prof. H. M. Eag le 5 songs with W. G. Culp, organist; Prof, J. M. Williams 3 songs with same organist; Prof. C. N' Oden 3 songs with Miss Evie Franklin, organist; Another quartet was theau rindered. After 3 songs by Prof. James Franklin, Mrs H. M. Eagle rendered a very effectiv solo, and we believe that most every body will agree that the best was kept back for the last. After song by the president, we were dismissed by Rev. W. M. Wood. Our convention is growing every day as more interest is being taken, and we are very proud of this. No one has done more to raise the convention to the high standard which it now occupies than our worthy and distinguished musician Prof. H. M. Eagle who has done a great work in our county.

The next annual session will be held at Chestnut Creek church at Cooper, Ala.

R. A. Smith, Sec.

Unity Baptist Association

To Meet with the Clanton Baptist Church on October 7th.

The Unity Baptist Association, one of the largest church organizations of this section of the state is scheduled to convene with the Baptist Church at Clanton on October 7th, at 10 o'clock a.m. The Association is composed of churches in Chilton, Bibb and Autauga counties, and will bring to Clanton a large number of delegates. Its purpose is the furtherance and betterment of church conditions, and the session usually gives about three days to this kind of work. Among the visitors will be several prominent state church workers, such as the President of Howard College, and others.

J. J. Taylor, Company K, 38th Tennessee Regiment, age 76 years, died and was buried at Soldiers Home on Sept. 29th.

Misses Fannie May Roy, Pearl Culver, Bessie May Culver, Myrtle Holland, Annie Pearl Glenn, visited the Home on last Sunday.

Mr. W. P. Thompson has returned from the Knoxville Conservation Exposition, and says: "The exhibits and general appearance of all that pertains to the success of the intention intended by the promoters is splendid, and, that Alabama is wel represented."

Oak Hill

Health of this community is very good at present.

We have had a glorious meeting at this place, with several converts. I think the Lord has been with us. It was conducted by Rev. Winker; I think he is a good man. May the Lord bless his work and our community.

Card of Thanks

We earnestly and sincerely thank our many friends who shared with us in our sorrow, and sympathized with us in our distress, during the recent sickness and death of our darling boy, Earnest.

THE UNION
AND BANNER.

Published Every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton County, Alabama.
UNION PUBLISHING CO.
W. M. WYATT, Editor.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.00.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

Our readers will notice this week a change in the size of the Union-Banner. Instead of running eight pages as heretofore, we have only six pages. Instead of using the four pages of ready-print service, we will in future print two pages at our own office, making in all, a six-page paper of all home print. This reduction in the size of the paper is not occasioned by any falling-off of business, as it may seem. Our business is as good as we could ask, and it is purely with the purpose of better accommodating our patrons that the change is made.

While the paper may not be what you think it should this week, we must ask you to be patient for a while. As soon as we get everything rearranged from the change, we assure you we will use every means to fulfil the demands that are required to constitute a first-class weekly newspaper.

To our friends and patrons who have given us their invaluable support in the past we owe the most sincere thanks and appreciation. To any who may now or hereafter wish to join us we extend a hearty welcome, along with the assurance of the most courteous treatment within our power to render.

It has been hinted to us that the public would be pleased to know the attitude of the Union-Banner toward the proposed bond issue to secure water works for the town of Clanton. And in justice to our constituents, and any others who may be enough interested, we do not feel that we should hesitate in making known our views. Our idea is that no newspaper or individual should take upon himself the authority to say what measures it would behoove the whole people to advocate. There are too many personal conditions existing to render it possible for one individual to harness them all and apply a remedy satisfactory to each. That task might be attempted by some, but we do not feel ourselves equal to it. We are in favor of giving the people a right to say what they want and need. Let each and every man express himself by a vote on the proposition, as has been arranged for on the 27th day of October. If it is voted in by a popular majority we will accept it, good or bad, and give it a fair and honest trial. We believe the water works and sewerage system good for Clanton; in fact essential to further advancement along industrial lines. But as to how this system shall be obtained, we are willing to go according to the majority in the election.

How Rain Bores Holes.

"When rain falls it does not actually soak into the earth, but bores its way in, forming tiny tubes," says an interesting article in Harper's Weekly "These tubes are so small that it would be impossible to insert a hair in one of them without bursting its walls. Sometimes the tubes are bored down to a depth of four or five feet. When the surface dries, the water evaporates from the tubes, just as it would from a pipe. If the tube is twisted it takes longer for the water to evaporate. If one takes a rake and stirs the ground after each rain, he breaks the tops of the tubes, and the water will stand in them for months. In this way the farmers of the west, on the semi-arid lands, store the rainfall one year, and raise a crop of wheat every other year—there being sufficient water in two years, but not enough in one, to raise a crop."

ARE YOU GOING TO THE FAIR?

Go to your local and State Fairs was the advice we gave in The Progressive Farmer for a week or so ago in prose. Now the Kansas Farmer preaches the same good doctrine in verse. Here's the way it puts it:

"Are you going to the fair?
All the live ones will be there.
Does us good to take a day,
From the steady grind away,
Seeing what the neighbors raise,
Learning new and better ways.
Educate—that's half the charm,
Of this life upon the farm.

"We're not going just for fun,
Or to see the horses run.
We'll not stand around and knock;
But we'll take our finest stock,
And our products we will show,
What's the use of being slow.
Life is great; at every turn,
There is something new to learn.

"Help to make that fair a go;
Tell the folks just how you grow;
Pumpkins big as all get out;
Stuff that makes the natives shout,
How you farm the modern way;
Making crop rotation pay.
Come across and do your share;
Are you going to the fair?"

—Progressive Farmer.

Torture of Tantalus.

The golf bug's soul came back from a little range around Satan's preserve with a smile as wide as the Amazon river. "I say," it exclaimed, "I don't call this much of a hell. They have the finest golf course out there I ever saw in my life." A droll-looking old soul who was sitting on the safety valve looked up. "But did you see anybody playing on it?" he asked. "No," the newcomer admitted. "I didn't." The old-timer chuckled. "That's it," he said. "He won't let anybody play on it."—Exchange.

DARBYS FLUID

PREVENTS AND CURES

HOG CHOLERA

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

Pen up your hogs when cholera is in the neighborhood. For each ten hogs put one quarter of a bottle of Darbys Fluid in the daily supply of water. Clean out troughs every day before watering. Do not feed slop or any liquid food. Feed moderately on chops or other light stuff. Continue this treatment for two weeks, you can then turn your hogs out;—they are insured against cholera.

READ THE PROOF.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:
This is to certify that we have used Darbys Fluid for the prevention and cure of Hog Cholera. Last summer we used it on fifty head of hogs and we lost only nine. These nine consisted of a brood sow and litter of eight pigs. We believe we could have saved the entire herd had we started using Darbys Fluid earlier.
GANTT BROS. STORE CO., Little River, Ala.

GENTLEMEN:—
Hogs were dying of Cholera by the thousand in my neighborhood They had it all around me but I saved all mine by putting Darbys Fluid in their drinking water and not letting them have any water without Darbys Fluid in it. Its a great preventive. I keep it on hand all the time. Its good for a hundred purposes.
J. A. STANALAND, Pidcock, Ga.

DARBYS FLUID has many uses about the household. It destroys germs or bad odors about the house and purifies the air of living or sleeping rooms. It heals wounds, sores, cuts or galls on human or animal flesh. It is a fine addition to the bath for cleansing the body or feet of disagreeable odors. If used in the water for brushing the teeth it sweetens the breath. As a disinfectant for the sick-room in contagious diseases and for safe-guarding the health of the family when such diseases are prevalent in the neighborhood it is worth it weight in gold.

UNCLE PATTY SMITH IS VERY SICK

For several months past Uncle Patty Smith, an old and well known citizen of Clanton has been in very bad health, not being able to get out of his room. But for the past few days he has been considerably worse. He is suffering with paralysis and is not able to use his limbs at all. He is almost totally unconcious, and it is little expected that he will live many weeks longer.

CLANTON DRUGGIST DESERVES PRAISE.

The Upchurch Drug Co. deserves praise from Clanton people for introducing here the simple buckthorn bark and glycerine mixture, known as Adler-i-ka. This simple German remedy first became famous by curing appendicitis and it has now been discovered that JUST A SINGLE DOSE relieves sour stomach, gas on the stomach and constipation INSTANTLY. It's quick action is a big surprise to people Similarity of Sugar.

Even a chemist surrounded with all his scientific laboratory equipment cannot distinguish beet sugar from the cane product. Although derived from different species of plants, the refined product from the juice of the cane and beet is the same in composition, in sweetening power, in dietetic effect, in chemical reaction, in all other respects. Furthermore, if maple sugar were reboiled and passed through the process of refining, it would lose its aroma and flavor, which are wholly in the impurities, and the white crystals would be identical with those derived from sugar cane and sugar beets. Pure sugar, whether derived from beet or cane, is as identical as is pure gold, whether mined in the Rocky mountains or in the Transvaal.

Had to Experiment First.

A Lancashire man, who loved a wager, once laid a gold coin against a neighbor, noted for his absorbent qualities, drinking a gallon of beer in three minutes. The other, somewhat to the surprise of his mates, declined to take on the wager at once, and said he might do so later in the morning. Then, after a few minutes away, he came back and said he was ready to take it up. What is more, he won his money easily. The others now expressed curiosity as to his reason for not having done it at once, and pressed him to tell them where he had been in the interval.

"Well," he said, "Ah just went down to a little poob Ah know of to see whether Ah could do it all right!"—The Bystander.

Paints Submarine Pictures.

Zarah Howlison Pritchard, founder of the new school of submarine painting, whose work is among the most unique in the world, lives at Pasadena,, Cal., but is a native of India by birth, and was educated in Scotland. He goes down to the bottom of the sea in a diver's suit, and with specially prepared equipment sketches rapidly for fifteen or twenty minutes, and takes sufficient color notes to enable him to finish his picture in the studio at his leisure. All his finished work is done on leather.

The changeable weather of early fall brings on coughs and colds that have a wrakening effect on the system, and may become chronic. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. It has a very soothing and healing effect on the irritated and inflamed air passages, and will help very quickly. It is a well known family medicine that gives results. For sale by all dealers everywhere.

NEW FOOD FOR THE SOLDIER

Ration Is Said to Be the Best That Has Yet Been Devised to Keep Troops in Health.

Soldiers are going to receive a new war bread, made after a recipe kept secret by the technical section of the commissariat and which has just been experimented with successfully by the troops in the east.

This produce is in the form of small biscuits and contains a certain quantity of sugar and purified vegetable fat, which gives it an agreeable taste, while furnishing to the muscles of the consumers a supplement of carbon which allows them to accomplish a stronger effort.

The men consumed two biscuits in the morning coffee, one in the soup, eight as table bread.

The taste of this war bread, which recalls a little that of the petit beurre biscuits or of the Japanese katapan—sweet biscuits that are distributed to the troops in the field—is more agreeable than the former one; its aspect is also more appetizing and it was eaten with satisfaction, especially with the coffee and as table bread.

Its prolonged use caused no gastro-intestinal indisposition, neither did it provoke, as its predecessor, the disagreeable "biscuit diarrhea."

The utilization of oats has also been tried in a very interesting way as a food for the soldier in the field. During 30 consecutive days a company of infantry received a soup of torrefied oatmeal. During the first 15 days this company marched 340 kilometers. During the other 15 days it accomplished maneuvers in camp.

Now, during these 30 days no man of this company went on the sick list, while in each of the three other companies of the same battalion which accomplished the same marches and the same maneuvers eight or ten men went every day to the doctor's consultation.

Not a Universal Emporium.

"Come in and have it charged," was the inviting sign in front of a place of business in a Jersey town. A stranger, being somewhat low in funds, walked in briskly. "I understand that I can get things charged here," he said, addressing one of the employes. "Only storage batteries," replied the other man.—Judge.

Stomach Trouble; Wholly Restored!

Mrs. Wilson Robison, 744 Nessle St., Toledo, Ohio, writes:

"I feel like a new person. I have no more heavy feelings, no more pain, don't belch up gas, can eat most anything without it hurting me. I want to be working all the time. I have gained twenty-four pounds.

Mrs. Wilson Robison.

"People that see me now and saw me two months ago seem astonished. I tell them Peruna did it. I will say it is the only remedy for spring and all other ailments."

No argument is needed for Peruna. Just get a bottle and try it. If you have catarrh of the stomach you have a serious trouble. If you want to find a remedy it would be very easy to make the experiment. Before you have taken Peruna a week you will likely find yourself better, then you will need no testimonials on the part of other people, or arguments to convince you. Until you try Peruna, however, all the testimonials in the world and arguments, however logical, will not move you. Just one trial of Peruna will convince you.

Persons who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.

MAN PROVES HIS SUPREMACY

Aviators Outstrip the Swiftest Birds in Their Marvelous Flight Through the Air.

Nature has long put the air first in the speed of living creatures. Next to the birds came the land animals. The fishes trailed behind.

It has come to that already with man's speed records. Tuesday a French aviator named Guillaux drove a flying machine 118 miles in an hour, from Savigny-sur-Brave to Paris, and thereby beat the best record ever made by an automobile in this country or Europe by about six miles. No railroad train ever came anywhere near the sustained speed of the "bird-man," who averaged almost two miles a minute for 60 minutes.

The fastest racing boats, it is needless to say, are far behind the record of the automobiles and the railroad trains. Their feats are wonderful, in view of the conditions they have to contend against, but their limit, so far is less than a mile a minute, for any distance, however short.

So the air becomes the field for man's swiftest travel. Flight leads in human devices for fast movement from place to place, just as it does with the birds, the beasts and the fishes. But it is still an open question whether or not the record flight of 118 miles an hour surpasses the fastest flying ever done by a bird.

GOOD DEFINITION OF "CHIC"

Visiting Englishman Well Describes the Elegant Women Who Are the Pride of New York.

Lord Morley, at a luncheon at the Ritz-Carlton in New York, said of the American woman:

"The American woman as she glides in her motorcar down Fifth avenue, or as she hurries from her jeweler's to Sherry's, is perhaps the most elegant woman in the world.

"Fifth avenue is perhaps the most elegant street in the world. Broad and straight, bordered with splendid shops and hotels of pale stone, drenched with sunshine and roofed with a luminous blue sky, Fifth avenue is a fitting promenade for America's beautiful women.

"But these women dress, perhaps, a little too boldly for the street. Take, for example, their tight gowns with a slit at the side—a slit through which advances and retreats a slim foot in a patent leather shoe and a supple ankle in a gossamer silk stocking. This is perhaps too overwhelming a costume for street wear.

"Yet in such a costume the American woman is undoubtedly chic. And this raises the question: What is chic?"

Lord Morley paused and smiled. Then he continued:

"Chic, I would reply, is the art of wearing a bold gown modestly."

Improved Facilities and Increased Expenses

"We have had to meet rate reductions, increased cost of labor, increased cost of material, and demands from a luxurious people for better facilities, all of which has created a problem that is most difficult to solve, because there are only one hundred cents in a railroad dollar, just like in any other dollar."

The above quotation is from a statement made by a railroad president to his stockholders. The remarks were made right in the bosom of the railroad family, and were never intended for public circulation. They, however, illustrate to a slight extent the problem which now confronts the railroad official from the stockholder's point of view.

Of course, the average individual thinks little and cares less about the welfare of a stockholder in a railroad. What the average individual wants is quick and dependable transportation at the lowest possible rate—the lower the rate the better it suits him.

And many average individuals are exerting every effort to force a reduction in rates, while hundreds of thousands of railroad stockholders want to know what's the matter with dividends. The railroad official, try as he will, can stretch a railroad dollar into no more than one hundred cents.

Consequently thousands of stockholders have become disgruntled and dumped their holdings on the market. Prices have become depressed, and it has been difficult at times to protect standard securities.

If the people throughout the territory want adequate railroad facilities, with a margin for development and extension, they must be willing to permit the railroad to make a fair return on the stockholder's investment. The stockholder is entitled to a fair return, just as you are entitled to interest on your savings bank balance, just as you are entitled to profit on your crop, your manufactured article, or on your stock of merchandise which you buy and sell.

Every time the public demands a pair of $4.00 shoes instead of $3.50 shoes, the public must pay 50 cents more.

But the public has demanded increased facilities and more luxurious equipment of the railroads; labor prices have advanced; cost of material has advanced, and operating expenses have increased. All the time rates have either remained stationary or have been reduced.

We ask the people to think, and, having thought, to be fair. We know the majority of the people want to be fair, and that is why we are publishing this advertisement.

Chilton County Fair

Clanton, Alabama, October 20th to 25th, 1913

Prizes offered on everything, in the home or on the farm, including Boys Corn Club, Girls Tomato Club, Boys Pig Club, Swine, Cattle, Sheep, Poultry, and all kinds of Woman's Work, including Art, Needle Work, and Childrens Work of all kinds.

All exhibits, except milk cows, will be required to be there on Friday, October 24th. On this day they will be judged and can be returned home that night. This is done for the convenience of the owners. While we would be glad to have them all the time, it is not required to compete for a prize with the milk cows. All other animals and exhibits of all kinds will be required to be there all the time.

We have secured two fine free acts to be on the ground each day, therefore you may rest assured that there will be something interesting each day and each hour.

The Judges for each department will be announced in the next week or so.

Bring something to the Fair, and let us make it the best Fair in the State.

All Prizes will be Paid at the Fair Grounds the last Day of the Fair in Time for all Exhibits to be Carried Home That Night

CHILTON COUNTY FAIR ASSOCIATION.

BIRMINGHAM FAIR OFFERS MANY FREE ATTRACTIONS

At the Alabama State Fair the sports, races and free acts will be free in fact as well as in name to those who are admitted to the Birmingham fair grounds. There will be a plenty of free space in the grandstand, besides the reserved seats, and there is room and to spare on the grounds from which the race track, stage and arena may be viewed.

Thus, the visiting public may witness the football games which will probably be played on Saturday on the closing day of the fair, Saturday, October 18. It will be between two of the strongest of the college teams, though the matter has not yet been agreed upon between the managers of the nines and the fair management.

The motorcycle races will be likewise open to the public view without extra charge and there will be thirteen of them during the fair, ranging from five to twenty-five miles, and for purses from $20 to $100. Four of the races will be for amateurs and the rest will be open races, which will attract some of the best professional talent in the country. Each of the professionals must have a record of a mile a minute or better, and enough in this class have already signed up to assure good sport for every day of the fair except Sunday.

The first of the stake races will be the 2:14 trot for a $1,000 purse, on Saturday, October 11. The 2:20 pace, also for a purse of $1,000, will be pulled off on Tuesday, October 14, and the other stake race for the same sized purse, the 2:20 trot, will occur on Thursday, October 16. Altogether, including the open purse events, there will be fifteen races during the fair. All races will be in mile heats, 3 in 5, and horses not standing for a division of the money after third heat go to the barn.

Free Attractions.

The free attractions will include the Five Ferris Wheel Girls, introducing vaudeville's newest sensation, beautiful women suspended from a revolving Ferris wheel; Fink's Comedy Mules, which can do almost anything but talk, and they make a very good attempt at talking; Yamato Troupe of marvelous wire walkers from the land of Nippon; Mme. Maranette and Col. Harris, introducing a superb equestrian display; the Delemede Troupe in poses plastique, who summered at the Winter Garden in Germany; "St. Patrick," the world's greatest Arabian jumping horse; Omura and Son, Japan's premier perch pole performers; "Pete," the unreliable mule; Guacho, the trotting ostrich, an aerial ladder act, Mexican athletes and acrobats, the great Chefalo in his Loop of Death—and then there is the Plaza of Pleasure, which is the name the Midway will bear this year, where Con. T. Kennedy's shows will cause the spectators to marvel—at one price per marvel.

Instructive Features.

The State Fair will not be all fun and frolic by a good deal. There will be lessons of practical benefit to be learned in all departments of the state's activity, and few of them will be of greater value to the greater number than the home economy features. In speaking of this branch of the exposition, Mrs. J. B. Reid, manager of the woman's department of the Birmingham fair, says:

"The Alabama State Fair is serving the state's best interest when it rewards the work of the home.

"The women who send their work are creating other industries and the prizes in all classes of domestic wor are valuable, and the honor of bein a prize winner is well worth the ef fort; also, to have made the effort indicates enterprise.

"Hundreds of Alabama women value the importance of a State Fair and these hundreds are enlisting the interest of thousands. No section of the state should fail to be represented there either in work or in person.'

Quick Help to Backache and Rheumatism.

The man or woman who wants quick help from backache and rheumatism, will find it in Foley Kidney Pills. They act so quickly and with such good effect that weak, inactive kidneys that do not keep the blood clean and free of impurities, are toned up and strengthend to healthy vigorous action. Good results follow their use promptly. For sale by all dealers everywhere.

Popes and Newspapers.

A short time ago the managing editors of our newspapers demanded in great haste a complete article on the pope. Pius X., in fact, was for 48 hours passing a grave crisis. It was believed that death was near, but very happily he has regained his health.

In 1890 suddenly the rumor ran that Leo XIII. was near death. Immediately all our journals compiled a necrological article on the holy father, written in haste. But Leo XIII. did not die until 13 years later, and one could name a Parisian journal that kept this article "on the marble" (the composing stone)—that is to say, in reserve all these 13 years. We hope that the biography of Pius X., like that of his predecessor, who died at the age of ninety-three years, may likewise remain on the marble for 13 years.—Le Cri de Paris.

Patent No. 1,048,569.

A long-felt nursery want has been supplied at last by Jessie May Mitchell of Clayton, Mass.

The Scientific American says that she has procured a patent, No. 1,048,569, for a thumb and finger sucking preventer, in which there is a stall fitted on the thumb or finger, and a round disk, too large to be inserted in the mouth, is held by the stall on the end of the thumb or finger so that the latter cannot be put in the mouth.

Wonder if it can be used on the big toe?

If not, there is a chance for some fond and ingenious mother to secure patent No. 1,048,570.

To Lessen Wreck's Horror.

To swell the horrors of a sea disaster at night the lights are apt to be put out by the flooding of the electric generating plant. Experiments are being made on a new British vessel that is under construction, with a gasoline electric plant that may be placed on the bridge deck. This set will not only supply the light, but the wireless telegraph apparatus as well, until the very moment of complete submergence of the vessel. This generating set will be used only in emergencies.

Will G. Richmond, a resident of Inglewood, Cal., will answer any inquiries about Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. He says further "Foley's Honey and Tar Compound has greatly benefitted me for bronchial trouble and cough, after I used other remedies that failed. It is more like a food than a medicine." Do not accept a substitute: For sale by all dealers everywhere.

Still Demand for Flints.

Millions of flints are produced annually in England by "knappers," who use much the same tools and work in much the same manner as did the men of the Neolithic age. The flints go to Africa, South America and China. Flintlock muskets are still used by many negroes in the depths of Africa, and shipments of the bits of stone find ready market in the benighted regions.

DESPONDENCY.

Is often caused by indigestion and constipation, and quickly disappears when Chamberlain's Tablets are taken. For Saleby Upchurch Drug Co.

Stringing Pearls.

Only the finest silk is used for stringing the finest pearls. Great beads, round and shiny, unmistakably artificial, and with no more real luster than white marbles, with the exception of what are called Roman pearls, manufactured many years ago, may be allowed to hang together on catgut, but orients must be threaded, pearl kissing pearl, on silken strands, worthy of their shape and "skin."

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS SUCCEED

Because they are an honestly made medicine that relieves promptly the suffering due to weak, inactive kidneys and painful bladder action. They offer a powerful help to nature in building up the true excreting kidney tissue, in restoring normal action and relieving bladder discomforts. Try them. For sale by all dealers everywhere.

Henry A. Johnston, a business man of L'Anse, Mich., writes: "For years, Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for coughs and colds has been our family medicine. We give it to our children, who like it on account of its pleasant taste. It is a safe cure for coughs and colds." It contains no opiates.

Roasted Bugs a Delicacy.

An insect much resembling the June bug, and found in great quantities in the high plains about Quito, the capital of Ecuador, is toasted and eaten as a delicacy by the natives of that country. They are sold in the streets in the same manner as are chestnuts in the cities of this country. The roasted bugs taste very much like toasted bread.

Rich Country Drifting Backward.

Honduras, with vast deposits of minerals of all kinds, with untold thousands of acres of the richest tropical fruit and vegetable lands in the world and untold possibilities as a coffee producer, has a smaller population than it had 50 years ago. While other countries less favorably situated have forged ahead, Honduras has slowly but steadily drifted backward.

Once Upon a Time

ONCE there was really no way out of it for the farmer. Plodding home from the field with his team at close of day, he saw before him the waiting small jobs about the house, barn, and yard, jobs that took time and labor, and never seemed to end. There was water to be pumped, wood to be sawed, various machines to be run by hand. It was a dreary prospect—but that was once upon a time. Today he lets the engine do it.

Buy from the I H C engine line. I H C engines are built right and consistently all through, to work efficiently for years. Whether you want it for sawing, pumping, spraying, electric light plant, for running separator, or repair shop, or for all sorts of tiresome energy-wasting small farm jobs, you have need of an

I H C Oil and Gas Engine

An I H C engine will develop from ten to thirty per cent more than its rated capacity. Perfect combustion makes it economical in fuel consumption. Its simplicity makes it practically trouble-proof.

I H C engines are built in vertical, horizontal, stationary, portable, skidded, air-cooled and water-cooled styles. The line includes sawing, pumping and spraying outfits. Sizes from 1 to 50-horse power. They operate on gas, gasoline, kerosene, naphtha, distillate and alcohol. I H C oil tractors range in size from 6-12 to 30-60-horse power, for plowing, threshing, etc.

Have the I H C local dealer demonstrate the engine to you and explain its various points. Get catalogues from him, or write the

MORTGAGE SALE.

Under and by virtue of the powers contained in a certain mortgage executed on the 24th day of April, 1912, by the Chilton Warehouse & Manufacturing Company, a corporation duly organized under the laws of the State of Alabama, to E. A. Matthews, securing a certain indebtedness, default in the payment of which has been made, said mortgage being recorded in the office of the Probate Judge of Chilton County, Alabama, in Mortgage Record 121, page 332, I, E. A. Matthews, as mortgagee, will proceed to sell the hereinafter described real estate to the highest bidder for cash, at public outcry, before the Court House Door of Chilton County. at Clanton, Alabama, during the legal hours of sale, on Monday, the 27th day of October, 1913, to wit:

The following described real property, lying and being situated in the town of Clanton, in the County of Chilton, in the State of Alabama, to-wit, a certain lot or parcel of land west of the South and North Alabama Railroad, described and bounded as follows, to-wit: commencing at a point on the line of the right of way of the South and North Alabama Railroad Company, two hundred and ten (210) feet south of the intersection of said right of way and Main Street, said Main Street now being known as Second Avenue, and running thence in a westerly direction, parallel with said Main Street, four hundred and eighty-five (485) feet, more or less, to the line of W. D. Sartor's land, as said line of W. D. Sartor's land was known or existed on the 10th day of August, 1893, thence in a southerly direction along the line of said Sartor land line, and a continuation thereof, three hundred (300) feet, thence in an easterly direction, parallel to said Main Street, four hundred and eighty-five (485) feet, more or less, to said right of way, thence in a northerly direction along said right of way three hundred (300) feet to point of beginning, being a part of the land which was conveyed to John Randolph by F. C. Randolph, on the 12th day of February, 1902, by a deed which is recorded in the office of the Judge of Probate of Chilton County, Alabama, in volume 24 of Record of Deeds, on page 387. The said lot or parcel of land above described is known by the official map of the Town of Clanton, Alabama, and marked upon said map, "E. Y. McMorries University School." (The words "Main Street" wherever they appear in the foregoing description, refer to the street now known as Second Avenue); and also a tract or parcel of land described and bounded as follows, to-wit: Beginning at the northeast corner of a certain lot, west of South and North Alabama Railroad, and south of and bordering on Second Avenue, marked on the official map of the Town of Clanton, "W. M. Wilson & Brother," and running thence east along Second Avenue forty (40) feet, thence south two hundred and ten (210) feet to the lot marked on said official map, "E. Y. McMorries University School," thence west forty (40) feet, thence north two hundred and ten (210) feet to the point of beginning, and also a lot or parcel of land west of the South and North Alabama Railroad, described and bounded as follows, to wit: beginning at the southeast corner of the lot marked on the official map of the Town of Clanton Alabama, "E. Y. McMorries University School, and running thence west one hundred and sixty (160) feet, thence south eighty (80) feet, thence east forty (40) feet, thence south two hundred and eighty (280) feet, thence east to the right of way of the South and North Alabama Railroad Company, thence north to the point of beginning; also a lot or porcel of land west of the South and North Alabama Railroad, described and bounded as follows, to-wit: beginning at the north east corner of the lot marked on the official map of the Town of Clanton, Alabama, "E. Y. McMorries University School," and running thence west thirty (30) feet, thence north sixty (60) feet, to the lot of the South and North Alabama Railroad Company, thence east thirty (30) feet to the right of way of the South and North Alabama Railroad Company, thence south along said right of way to the point of beginning, and also a lot or parcel of land, west of the South and North Alabama Railroad, described and bounded as follows, to-wit: beginning at the southwest corner of the lot marked on the official map of the Town of Clanton, Alabama, "E. Y. McMorries University School," and running south twenty (20) feet, thence east to within one hundred and sixty (160) feet to the right of way of the South and North Alabama Railroad Company, thence north twenty (20) feet to the south line of the said E. Y. McMorries University School lot, thence west along said line to the point of beginning; together with all the buildings, machinery and appurtenances belonging to any, and all the hereinbefore described tracts or parcels of land, and also a lot or parcel of land west of the South and North Alabama Railroad, described and bounded as follows, to-wit: beginning at the northwest corner of the Episcopal church, on the south side of Second Avenue, and running thence west along said Second Avenue one hundred and twenty (120) feet, to the north east corner of the Chilton Warehouse and Manufacturing Company's lot, thence south along the east line of said lot, two hundred and ten (210) feet to the Chilton Warehouse & Manufacturing Company's property, thence east along the north line of said property, one hundred and twenty (120) feet, thence north two hundred and ten (210) feet to point of beginning.

Said sale will be made for the purpose of paying in whole or in part the indebtedness secured by said mortgage.

This 25th day of September, 1913.

Teach Concentration.

The greatest thing that parents can do for their children is to teach them concentration of the mind as soon as their intelligence begins to bud—and that is very early. The mind of a child generally takes its bent long before the school days begin. The proper education of children begins from the cradle, and if it were pursued as it ought to be the mental force of mankind might be quadrupled in a single generation.

Largest Black Diamond.

Do you know that the largest black diamond in the world was discovered in Brazil in 1895? It weighed 3,078 karats, and was discovered in the marsh "do Lama," near the town of Lencoes, in the state of Bahia, by one of those searchers called here "garimperios." The name of this lucky fellow was Sergio Borges de Carvalho, and he sold his find to an agent named Jose Bezerra de Cerqueira for 190,000 francs (about $47,500).

DON'T TAKE THE WRONG MEDICINE

If Your Liver Gets Lazy You Need a Liver Tonic, Not Merely a Laxative for the Bowels.

Many people take a simple laxative when their liver gets sluggish rather than take calomel, which they know to be dangerous. But a mere laxative will not start a sluggish liver. What is needed is a tonic tonic that will liven up the liver without forcing you to stay at home and lose a day from your buisness.

You have such a tonic in Dodson's Liver Tone. Dodson's Liver Tone must be all they claim for it because they guarantee it to take the place of dangerous calomel and agree to hand back the money with a smile to any person who tries Dodson's Liver Tone and is not satisfied with the relief it gives.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a harmless vegetable liquid with a pleasant taste, and is a prompt and reliable remedy for constipation, biliousness, sour stomach, and other troubles that come from a torpid liver.

Alred Drug Co., gives it their personal guarantee you will protect yourself against imatations that are not guaranteed. Large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone is 50 cents.

HELD UP LIFE MIRROR WRONG

Strindberg Saw Only the Worst in Human Nature, and Wrote According to His Convictions.

Strindbery had an uncanny power of psychological analysis, says a priter in the London Nation. He exhibits himself to the world naked and raving, but the exhibition causes him no shame. He also dissects his foes with convincing malice. So it is in the plays. He displays the average vulgar coquette, the worst product of the older social conventions which taught her that her sex is her fortune, with an insight that is not wholly unjust in its remorseless and ungrateful brutality. But there is in him this quality of intellectual honesty, that in revealing the woman who is a coquette he is also compelled to exhibit the man who is a sensualist. The latter revelation is apparently altogether unconscious. He sees and despises the triviality and tinsel of the animal attraction in the woman; he reveals, but does not appear to despise, the brutality and vulgarity of the animal passion in the man. He regards the man as the creative mind, yet shrinks from placing on him the responsibility for what he has written on the "slate" of the woman's mind. His was a genius which worked its hardest and best under the impulse of hatred. He has the insight of malice, the vision of scorn.

Much the Best for This Climate!

The French Market Roast and Blend Make It Essentially a Southern Coffee

Great Travelers and Explorers agree that the food and drink peculiar to the country where it is used should always be adopted in that country.

French Market Coffee is the coffee of the coffee-producing countries, where climate most nearly corresponds to that of our Southern States.

It is therefore, much better suited for Southern consumption as regards food value, etc., than coffees roasted for other climates.

This accounts for the marvelous success of French Market Coffee; and why it is called the National Drink of the South.

Formerly it could only be had at the old French Market, where the quaint old stalls were crowded with the most brilliant society of the South, drawn together to enjoy the matchless coffee known nowhere else in America.

Now by the establishment of the French Market Mills with the special machinery necessary, this wonderful old blend is preserved for their descendants.

The invention of perfectly-sealed tins allows shipment all over the United States without loss of freshness and flavor.

Try it once upon your own table and see if anyone of your family would be willing to use again the ordinary kinds of coffee.

French Market Coffee is Now The National Drink of the South

French Market Mills
(New Orleans Coffee Co., Ltd., Proprietors)
NEW ORLEANS

DIRECTIONS—We recommend that you make French Market Coffee in your usual way. If you find it too strong, reduce quantity until strength and flavor are satisfactory. French Market makes more cups of good coffee to the pound than other brands, thereby reducing your coffee bill.

DIARRHOEA QUICKLY CURED.

"I was taken with diarrhoea and Mr. Yorks, the merchant here persuaded me to try a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. After taking one dose of it I was cured. It also cured others that I gave it to," writes M. E. Gebhart, Oriole, Pa. That is not at all unusual. An ordinary attact of diarrhoea can almost invariablyl be cured by one or two doses of this remedy. For sale by Upchurch Drug Co.

Bad Runaway

On last Friday as Mr. and Mrs. B. Rubenstein were driving along the street in front of the residence of Judge Reynolds, their horse became suddenly frightened, and with a few efforts was beyond the control of Mr. Rubenstein who was driving. In his wild parade down the street the buggy struck a telephone pole and was badly demolished. Both Mr. and Mrs. Rubenstein were injured quite seriously, sustaining several very painful bruises about the head and face. Mrs. Rubenstein has been confined to her room for several days on account of the injuries. Mr. Rubenstein was confined for a day or two.

Unity Baptist Association

In Session at the Clanton Baptist Church Tuesday and Wednesday.

The annual session of the Unity Baptist Association for the year 1913 was held at the Baptist church in Clanton, on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. Many visitors have been in attendance, delegates being sent from every church in the association except one.

Judge S. M. Adams presided at the meeting in the place of the late Rev. F. M. Woods, who was a few years ago elected Moderator for life. The work of the Association has been interesting and valuable to the highest degree. Besides many enthusiastic Baptist Workers of Chilton county there have been present and taking part in the work a number of prominent State workers such as Rev. Frank Willis Barnett, Editor of the Alabama Baptist; R. R. Brasher, representing the Baptist Orphanage at Evergreen; S. D. Monroe of the state Baptist Sunday school work; J. A. Cook and J. A. Longcrier, of the State Mission Board; and Miss Laura Lee Patrick, of the State Womens Work. The meeting adjourned Wednesday night.

Plantersville Store Robbed

The store of J. E. Barnes, located at Plantersville, was broken into and robbed during last Wednesday night. The burglar is supposed to be a white tramp that loafed around Plantersville all Wednesday and the authorities are keeping a close watch for the man. After an entrance into the store had been effected the burglar unlocked the safe and from it took about $75 in cash, two gold watches and two pistols as well as several rare old coins.

Old Vetrans Made to Laugh

Prof. Hughes, a learned Legerdemain man and artist of ventriloquism visited the old Soldiers Home and entertained the members and officials in a highly eveditable manner for nearly two hours at the auditorium hall.

The Professor's acts as a magician are truly good, moral and laughable. He is a pleasing, pleasant plain southern gentleman, gifted and skilled in his profession, and his entertainment being of the order that pleases, was enjoyable.

Frank Will Not Be Hanged

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 6.—Leo M. Frank, convicted of the murder of little Mary Fagan, and whose trial aroused great interest all over the country, will not be hanged on October 10th, the day set for the execution.

Charges have been brought by the defense that the jury was swayed by public sentiment. To meet these charges Prosecutor Dorsey has asked for a postponement of the hearing for a new trial in order to collect evidence.

The postponement was granted and the execution postponed indefinitely.

Does It Pay To Advertise?

If you want an answer to this question ask Judge L. H. Reynolds. He will tell you the plain and undeniable fact, the fact that all good and thrifty business men have long been aware of—THAT IT DOES. Advertising is just as necessary to successful business activity as steam is to the operation of a locomotive You may say, "Oh, that won't do, for I have never advertised in a newspaper, and I have made a fairly successful business." Yes, you may not have advertised in a newspaper, but you certainly did advertise in some way. If you had used newspaper advertising you would have doubled your business.

You must let the people know in some way that you are in business, if you expect to get their trade. Meeting men personally and telling them about your business is a slow and unpleasant process, but like the wearing of stone by running water, would eventually bring the results. Some men even sit down and expect people to find out if they can what they have to sell, and then growl because a customer passes by their door and goes on to the next place. That is the height of folly, yet some sensible men do it.

Why not place an advertisement in your county paper and tell the people what you have to sell and let them know you want them to visit your store. Then they will stop in to see you instead of passing on to the next door. That is the reason that Judge Reynolds is selling every day more than a thousand dollars worth of goods. He placed an advertisement in the Union-Banner, where it is read by more than two thousand people each week, and he is getting results from it.

To do business you must let the people know that you want their trade. To let them know this there is no way better than an "ad" in the Union-Banner.

Clanton High School Notes

By Hoke Pipes and Willie Edwards.

Mr. Dorcus Maddox sold out to Mr. Willie Edwards.

Mr. Omar Reynolds has a bad cold.

Mr. Oliver Mullins is suffering with his ears.

The pupils received their report cards Monday. Many wept when they saw them.

A nice little crowd appeared in court last week. These are the cases as follows: Mr. Crit Jones age 7, Mr. Arthur Littlejohn age 7, and Clever Jones, charged with assault and battery upon J. P. Morrow, Jr., age 7. Discharged by order of (Judge) Mr. Pickens.

Mr. Berl Hinsdale charged with teasing a small boy; found guilty and punished to the full extent of the law.

Mr. Dorcus Maddox, charged with breaking speed limit law; found guilty and fined 1-2 hour in school.

Mr. Oscar Jones was met coming to school the other day with a door. He exclaimed that he had left 50c at home and he was bringing the door to school so that if any one was to break in the door for the 50c they would not break the lock.—"Tight Wad."

A piece of paper was found the other day with this on it: "Roses are red; violets are blue; sugar is sweet and so are you. Signed A. D. M."

Miss Annie Gragg while going out the door the other day bumped her head.

Mr. Oliver Mullins is very proud of a card he picked up the other day with this on it: "Bill had a bill board and Bill had a board bill; the board bill bored Bill so till Bill sold his bill board to pay for his board bill so that the board bill would bore Bill no more.

Miss Bevely had some cards made the other day—they were like this:

Miss Bevely Hester
Expert Violinist
Clanton,
Cor. 10th St., 3rd Ave. Alabama.

Mr. Mitchell Foshee was absent at school the other day; why? Because he was not there.

Mr. Jean Wyatt has made a contract with the school news to write in a piece each week about his trip to Yellowstone National Park.

A NARROW ESCAPE

Clanton High School.—(Special) Mr. Pickens, Principal of Clanton High School while transacting business us stairs last Friday left his room alone. Mr. Dorcus (sole owner of his 348) went to the door to peep out and see the glowing sun. Mr. Willie Edwards not seeing the head of Mr. Maddox's glowing son gave him a push which landed Dorcus on his head in the hall; and shut the door saying "please stay out." Just about the time that Dorcus got on his feet Mr. Pickens came down. Dorcus thought of a bright idea at once and made haste for the pump so that Prof. Pickens would think nothing had happened. But he never warned Willie, so Willie proceeded to hold the door so that Dorcus could not get in. Mr. Pickens came to the door and pushed but could not get in. Willie thinking it was Dorcus kept holding and Mr. Pickens kept pushing; Willie getting tired exclaimed: "If you don't get out of the way I will soak you one." At this Mr. Pickens got raw. Ask Willie the results.

Mr. Edgar Teel and Omar Reynolds big pals and true friends, went out hunting the other day; their guns were pop guns and their shells were peas. Before starting they promised each other to kill whatever they might come in contact with, whether great or small. They had gone only a small piece when a grasshopper jumped up and sit on Edgar's nose. Omar who is a faithful and true friend, shot at the grasshopper; the grasshopper hopped but too late, the pea was on its way to Edgar's nose and the result was "aw; just ask Edgar."

Mr. Dorcus Maddox on good roads.

I, as an auto owner think it my duty to write on good roads. I do think that as good a county as Chilton we auto have good roads. I own my 348 and it is no body's business. I run at 60 miles per day and I never tends to my business but some body elses. I thank if us did have good roads we would not use so much gasoline and meby we would save one pint per year. Fellow citizens, I, as a able orator, think we auto have good roads; the question is we will save gasoline.—A. D. M.

Mr. Jean Wyatt says he is sure of getting the prize at the fair this year. He said he raised a potato this year that it took two mules to pull out and that he fell in the hole and it took two days to pull him out, and it took one week to have the potato sawed up at a saw mill. Who can beat this?

I can says Oscar Jones. I raised a chicken last month which was so small that I had to magnify its food so that it could see to eat it.

Dorcus says he can beat them both. He says he can run his 348 so fast that he went through Clanton the other day while No. 4 was going through at 80 miles per hour; he went between the cars and he nor his car was hurt.

But the next day Dorcus tried this trick again and missed the opening and hit the car of the train and (aw ask Dock.)

The end, the end and nothing but the end.

A Deputy Sheriff Kills a Negro

W. L. Wells Shoots Frank Lewis while Resisting Officer.

W. L. Wells, a deputy sheriff, shot and killed Frank Lewis, a negro, two miles from Marbury, on Saturday last. It is alleged that the deputy had the negro under arrest and was taking him to jail. On reaching a secluded spot the negro grabbed for the deputy's pistol, a scuffle took place and the sheriff securing control of the weapon shot the negro through the body.

The negro had been placed under arrest for immoral conduct.

The deputy has surrendered himself to the authorities of Autauga county.

Mt. Creek Items

Captain J. M. Simpson went to Montgomery and got the money with which to pay the old veterans off for the last pension quarter of 1913, and after doing so, a noticeable smile was discernable on some faces that seldom wrinkle in glee.

Veteran J. J. Taylor who served creditably in the 38th Tennessee during the civil war, died, and was buried here last week. He had friends who reside in Clanton come down to the funeral.

Veteran Hugh Harris, aged 81 years, and for a long time previous to entering the Home a school teacher, much esteemed in Chilton county, died on last Thursday, and was buried in the Home cemetery the next day. Mr. Harris during his stay in the Home was respected and liked for his gentlemanly observance of others. He was courteous, seclusive to a moderate extent, and a man of refined character.

David Norris fell from the steeple of the Campbellite church and sustained painful injuries; Dr. Maddox was called, and after resuscitation from temporary unconsciousness was pronounced out of danger, and is fast recovering.

W. B. Sims says there will be very little over half a crop of cotton this year in this vicinity. "Billy" ought to know as he runs a gin here.

Mineral Springs

Health here is very good at present, except a few colds.

Farmers are getting bad behind with their cotton picking on account of rain.

We are sorry to say our S. S. at Pleasant Hill is dead. Let's all get busy and make it a success.

Our singing school, taught by J. L. Harris, has closed. Mr. Harris is a good teacher, and he was liked by all.

The singing at this place Sunday was well attended and enjoyed by all.

First Wail From Tariff Law.

Utica, New York, Oct. 4.—The Globe Woolen Company, of Utica, employing 900 persons, closed down to-day on account of the new tariff bill.

The owners state that the suspension is indefinite and may be permanent.

OUT DOOR MUSICAL RECITAL AT THORSBY

Something different in the way of a musical entertainment will be given by members of the faculty and students in the Music Department of Thorsby Institute, conductnd by Miss Erva O Finch, Music Director.

Weather permitting, an outdoor music recital will be given in front of Bates Hall at 7:30 p. m., on Friday, October 10th.

The ladies will be on hand to gather up small change in return for ice cream, cake, &c.

If the weather is cool the entertainment will be given in the hall.

Watson-Carrol.

On last Sunday morning at an early hour, about 8:30 by the clock, the pretty daughter, Celestia, of Mr. Will Watson, and Henry Carrol were united in a holy bond of matrimony.

The bride looked very pretty in a gown of white messaline, trimmed in little tiny rosebuds, and shoes to match, with two fresh pink roses twined in her hair.

During the solemn marriage the sister of the bride and Miss Lizzie Culpepper stood fronting the bride and groom as best ladies.

Immediately after the bride dressed in a pretty traveling suit of white and black with hat and shoes to match.

Mr. Carrol is a very prominent young man while the young lady is known as the same.

They left Clanton the same morning on the 10:26 train for Sylacaga and other places.

Thorsby Items.

Mayor Bice says gambling must go out of Thorsby. He is doing his part in ridding the town of such a nuisance and such crimes. It would be a fine thing for the Christian people to fall together and support him in the good work. The mayor and marshall are only two to work together against such a force of evil. The town has three good churches, suppose that ten members from each church should volunteer to help in the good work which is already begun, how long would it be before the gambling would be a thing of the past in our midst. The same thing with the liquor business We do not need such things in Thorsby.

Mrs. Lilia May Northrop returned to her home in Birmingham this week after a few months visit with her parents.

Mr. Clarence Bice is still sick but we are glad to announce that he is doing nicely.

Dr. Wilson has been a guest in Thorsby the past week. We were glad to have a visit from him.

Mayor Bice attended Sunday School at Pates Chapel Sunday afternoon.

One of our Thorsby boys on hunting last Saturday night came home in the morning cold and hungry with the excuse that he got lost and did not get an opossom or a fox. A poor excuse is better than none.

Miss Mabel Swan left Sunday night to teach school at Saginaw.

THE UNION
AND BANNER.

Published Every Thursday at Clanton,
Chilton County, Alabama.
UNION PUBLISHING CO.
W. M. WYATT, Editor.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.00.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

What have the Democrats done with that clause in their platform which promised a reduction of the high cost of living? They have not had time to give it any consideration we presume, from the wrangle they have had with the Tariff reduction.

We wonder if the Alabama Democrats will bring it down to a home proposition and use the Democratic State Administration as an example of the way in which the national administration will result. It strikes us that the comparison would be too mild.

The first effect of the new Tariff Bill is not adverse to the predictions of the Bull Moose party. On the day after President Wilson signed the Bill, one woollen mill in the State of New York closed its doors, throwing out of employment a large number of laborers. Would this lead one to judge that the democratic administration will bring the era of peace prosperity and plenty which they so faithfully promised?

Some Democrats are wanting to know why it is that the price of cotton has not gone down under the Democratic administration as the Republican and Bull Moose leaders predicted it would. The reason is simply the fact that the Democratic administration in reality, only began last Friday with the passage of the Underwood Tariff Bill in Congress. Up to that time everything had been the same as the Republican administration left it. The Democrats made no material change in any branch of the government prior to the new Tariff Law. Now their machinery has begun to work and it only remains to be seen what the outcome will be. It is so doubtful that no one dares take any chances on it.

UNCLE DICK JONES FAMOUS POSSUM HUNTER.

One night last week Uncle Dick Jones, our famous professional possum hunter, carried Senator Curry and Mr. Hugh Foshee out to Chestnut Creek swamp on one of his special camp hunts. They were to stay all night and make two rounds, one in the early part of the night and another just before daybreak. Tom Curry and Hugh Foshee, themselves, are professional hunters, but they readily admit that Uncle Dick showed them some tricks about the chase that never have been learned before.

The swamp is about three miles from town, and before they left Mr. Curry and Mr. Foshee feared that they might get lost in the woods. But after being assured by Uncle Dick that there was no danger, they set out in the late afternaon with dogs, axe, and lanterns, to their happy hunting grounds. Uncle Dick said the trails and trees of thrt swamp were as familiar to him as the streets and houses of Clanton, for years ago he had hauled logs over that whole country.

So by the light of a lantern they proceeded into the forest in search of possum. They had soon reached a coasiderable depth into the wilds, and Uncle Dick, in order to carry out his promise to guide the party safely and not become lost, began to look for some of his old familiar trails nnd trees. But to his surprise he found them not. And soon the pursuit had changed from a possum hunt to a search for some place where they might locate themselves. They were lost, and Uncle Dick was the only one surprised. They soon became tired and sleepy, and concluded to comfort themselves with sleep for a few hours and continue their early morning hunt. Kindling a fire they took off their boots which were wet from the dew on the grass, and warmed by the glowing blaze were soon reposing sweetly on their heathery couch. But as the fire died away Uncle Dick got chilly and awoke, scrambling in the darkness to recover it. He began putting sticks leaves and anything he could secure on the dying embers, in order to revive the precious blaze. Somehow he got hold of the Senators socks which he had placed near the fire that they might be dry when he awoke. Uncle Dick laid them on the fire too, with a chuckle, assured that soon the blaze would be burning lively.

The fire being rekindled again Uncle Dick aroused his companions for the secoed hunt, and Mr. Curry arose just in time to see the last of his socks go up in smoke. Just how the Senator felt when he deposited his feet in those cold wet boots without any socks, can better be imagined than described.

But nevertheless, fhe hunt progressed, till at length two possums and a coon were treed. This brought out another ioke. Mr. Curry, so bewildered by the trick Uncle Dick played him with his socks, had lost the axe, and it was of course impossible to get the game they had located.

It was therefore useless to continue the possum hunt any further, so they turned to search for a way home. At last Uncle Dick came across a dim path all grown up in weeds and briars, wnich he had known years ago. It led them out of the wilds of forest and into civilization again. And it is indeed interesting to hear these three hunters relate the adventures of that night. Uncle Dick says it was more fun than a barrel of monkeys.

Mt. Pleasant

Our school building is being improved for the large school we are expecting this winter. Our teachers are Prof. J. K. T. Daniel and sister, Miss Amie.

Mr. G. W. Melton, who was kicked last Saturday night by one of his colts was thought at first to have a broken jaw bone, but it has proved since to be only a bad cut.

The possum hunters can be heard on every side these nights. Guess they are trying to reduce the high cost of living.

Prof. Monroe Burnett, formerly of this county, who was elected County Superintendent of Education of Tallapoosa county, has failed to qualify for the office, claiming he can make more at teaching than the office pays.

Mr. J. Wiley Foshee and family are spending a while at their farm on Mulberry.

Messrs. W. A. Dozier, Bentley Dupriest and B, H. Ruke attended the Fair at Montgomery last week.

Mr. P. J. Massey of Birmingham was down last Sunday to see Mr. H. T. Littlejohn who is very sick.

Misses Bertha Maddox and Clara Thompson recently visited Mrs. J. H. Duncan,

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Dupriest have just returned from a visit to relatives in Coosa.

Mr. and Mrs. A, A. Shaw of Goodwater recently visited Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Massey.

Some of our people attended the singing at Walnut Creek Sunday: others went to Collins Chapel.

Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Riggins of Cedar Grove spent Saturday night and Sunday with Mr. G. W. Melton's family.

French Market Coffee is Southern Through and Through!

Brought in ships from the coffee countries through warm summer seas to the southern port of New Orleans, no cold climates affect, injuriously, the delicate coffee beans.

Roasted and blended by Southerners, it is best adapted for use in the Southern climate—no Northern roast coffee can compete with it.

Sold to Southern merchants for Southern trade—blended, roasted, packed and shipped in the South—Southern through and through. No wonder it outsells all other brands in the South.

Endorsed by the best judges in New Orleans a hundred years ago, and by coffee drinkers daily throughout the South. No wonder it has been called the National Drink of the South.

There is a real treat in store for those who have not yet tried French Market Coffee. Buy a can today. Try it. Be convinced of the excellence and quality of this brand.

Turn back over a hundred years to the days of Andrew Jackson—French Market Coffee was even then the most famous drink in America. Its history entwines itself with the history of the old aristocracy of the South. The Belles and Beaux of New Orleans sipped it at midnight for generations. To them no Mardi Gras Ball was complete without a cup of French Market Coffee. Think what it means to you to be able to serve this identical blend on your table daily—for your own grocer now sells it—in air-tight cans.

FRENCH MARKET MILLS
(New Orleans Coffee Co., Ltd., Proprietors)
NEW ORLEANS

DIRECTIONS—We recommend that you make French Market Coffee in your usual way. If you find it too strong, reduce quantity until strength and flavor are satisfactory. French Market makes more cups of good coffee to the pound than other brands, thereby reducing your coffee bill.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarrh. Send for testimonials, free.

Seven-year-old Peggy was drawing the picture of a house and finally announced it completed. "But where are the chimneys?" she was asked. Peggy's face fell for a moment as she noticed this important omission, but she quickly recovered her presence of mind. "Oh, this kind of a house doesn't need chimneys," she answered calmly. "It is heated by radiators."

Stringing Pearls.

Only the finest silk is used for stringing the finest pearls. Great beads, round and shiny, unmistakably artificial, and with no more real luster than white marbles, with the exception of what are called Roman pearls, manufactured many years ago, may be allowed to hang together on catgut, but orients must be threaded, pearl kissing pearl, on silken strands, worthy of their shape and "skin."

Avoid Sedative Cough Medicines.

If you want to contribute directly to the occurrence of cabillary bronchitis and pneumonia use cough medicines that contain codine, morphine, heroin and other sedatives when you have a cough or cold. An expectorant like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is what is needed. That cleans out the culture beds or breeding places for the germs of pneumonia and other germ diseases. That is why pneumonoia never results from a cold when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It has a world wide reputation for its cures. It contains no morphine or other sedative For sale by Upchurch Drug Co.

Why We Do Not Burn Witches.

When the old Puritan got so excited over witches that he couldn't sleep and was willing to burn the old women to get rid of them, he showed that he did not have the steady nerve of the modern man, who sees things ten times more mysterious happening all the time and never gets at all excited. The reason why they did not have so many in the asylums at that time was because there were no asylums to which they could be sent.—Omaha World Herald.

POULTRY SHOWS COMBINED AT THE BIRMINGHAM FAIR

About four thousand of the finest birds in the United States and a number from Canada will be exhibited at the Alabama State Fair, which will begin at Birmingham October 9 and continue through the 18th. Arrangements have been concluded between the fair association and the Alabama Poultry Association whereby the two annual shows will be combined this year, the reason being that no suitable building for the holding of the poultry association's show could be obtained in the City of Birmingham for the season desired.

All of the special premiums of the

SAM H. FOWLKES

Acting Secretary Alabama State Fair, Birmingham.

Alabama Poultry Association, as well as a number of specials offered by such clubs as the National Single Comb Black Orpington Club and the National White Indian Runner Duck Club will be awarded at the fair, giving additional encouragement to breeders desiring to enter their birds. It will be the greatest poultry show, according to the prediction of Dr. Hal F. Halstead, the manager, ever given in the South.

The large, new poultry exhibit hall is being supplied with Spratts Patent Coops, which are made entirely of metal and are the last thing for sanitation, ventilation and convenience in feeding and watering the birds they contain. Special arrangements have been made with Parke Davis and Company to disinfect the entire building in which the show is to be held and everything in it every day during the fair. This will not only be an interesting demonstration, but will insure the health of the valuable exhibits and their freedom from parasites.

Nothing in the way of poultry is attracting quite as much attention these days as the Indian Runner Duck, and special arrangements have been made for the care and exhibit of these valuable birds at the fair. Dr. Halstead says that there will be more than a thousand ducks in the exhibit this year and they will represent all varieties, including three classes of Indian Runners, the Buff Orpington, the Pekin and others. One Alabama entrant, the Alabama White Leghorns Farm Company of Mulga, Ala., promises to show more than 200 White Indian Runner Ducks, besides other birds. Another exhibit by the same firm will be 1500 one-day-old White Leghorn chickens every day of the fair. These will be incubated in their stand at the poultry show and the development of the chicks from day to day may be observed.

White, Black and Buff Orpingtons from various farms in Alabama will be well represented at the fair, according to entries already made, and it appears that the Wyandottes will come next in the number and variety of native birds to be exhibited. There will be strong classes in the Leghorns, Plymouth Rocks and Rhode Island Reds, as well as Houdans, Indian Games and other showy varieties.

Special efforts will be made this year to give the Bantams prominence and to bring together the largest collection of these little beauties ever shown in Alabama. They will be given a good place near the entrance of the main poultry exhibit hall and a good number of birds in this class have already been entered, guaranteeing a remarkable display. The Barred Rock Bantam, something entirely new, will be exhibited by W. J. Root of Ensley, Ala., who has a number of these rare fowls.

LIBEL.

Rockford, Ala., Oct. 3, 1913

To the Citizens of Coosa County:

I desire to correct a slanderous letter written from Birmingham and published in the Chronicle about the Spigener family. I lied when I said in that letter that I was looking for John Spigener for he has been dead for many years. I lied when I said that John Spigener had relatives in Rockford, because I know of no relatives he has any where. I lied when I said that I could hire the relatives of John Spigener because I don't know his relatives.

Wells Should Be Deep.

Experiments have proved that shallow wells contain twenty times as many dangerous germs as are contained in the deeper wells, and considering that the water supply usually is stronger as the depth increases, the putting down of deep wells ought to appeal strongly to every farmer.—The Homestead.

All Blood Disorders Quickly Driven Away

Astonishing Results With the Greatest Blood Purifier Ever Discovered.

Strength, Power, Accomplishment are all Typified in S. S. S.

Some blood disorders become deeply rooted in the glands and tissues, and the mistake is made of resorting to drastic drugs. These only aggravate by causing other and worse troubles. A host of people know this to be true. They know from painful experience.

To get right down into where the blood is vitiated requires S. S. S. the greatest blood purifier ever discovered.

This remarkable remedy contains one ingredient, the active purpose of which is to stimulate the tissues to the healthy selection of its own essential nutriment and the medicinal elements of this matchless blood purifier are just as essential to well balanced-health as the nutritious elements of the meats, grains, fats and sugars of our daily food.

Not only this, but if from the presence of some disturbing poison there is a local or general interference of nutrition to cause boils, carbuncles, abscesses and kindred troubles, S. S. S. so directs the local cells that this poison is rejected and eliminated from their presence.

Then, too, S. S. S. has such specific stimulation on these local cells as to preserve their mutual welfare and a proper relative assistance to each other.

In a very brief time S. S. S. has the reconstructive process so under control that remarkable changes are obseved. All eruptive places heal, mysterious pains and aches have disappeared, and from head to foot there is a conscious sensation of renewed health.

From the fact that S. S. S. is purely a botanical preparation, it is accepted by the weakest stomach and has great tonic influence. Not one drop of drugs or minerals is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and insist upon having it. And if you desire skillful advice upon any matter concerning the blood and skin write to The Swift Specific Co., 205 Swift Bldg, Atlanta, Ga. Do not allow some zealous clerk to larrup the atmosphere in eloquence over something "Just as good" as S. S. S. Beware of all counterfeits.

Wild Cat Still Raided

Last Tuesday Deputies Smitherman and Fallon made a raid in the eastern part of the county and succeeded in locating and destroying a very secluded wild cat still. Miss Estelle Wood of Bullock visited in this community last week.

Mr. R. W. Foshee of Prattville is visiting his mother.

Mr. Charlie Culpepper of Tuscaloosa is visiting here this week.

The school at this place starts the 20th of October.

There will be a singing at this place the third Sunday. The old books will be used.

The Lover's Domain.

"You say," remarked the married man, "that all the world loves a lover. But where do you get that stuff? Poetry, eh? If it's poetry it must be true. A poet wouldn't lie.

"So, all the world loves a lover! There's the fellow who has to sit up to let the lover in when he comes home late. Then there are the people at the house who have to sit up until the lover goes home. There, also, are the people who can hear the lover talking through the wall—mumble, mumble, mumble! But that's all right. The fellow is a lover, and all the world loves him!

"The clerk at the necktie store likes to sell ties to a lover. It's easy—selling ties to a lover. He takes only an hour to select one, and then he brings it back to change it. But the clerk doesn't mind so long as he's a lover.

"It is time for Mary, the nurse, to be getting back with the children. But Mary has a lover, which makes it all right. A doctor can save the baby if it catches cold."

The Jury.

The "gentlemen of the jury" are often accused of stupidity, but it is doubtful if a more pronounced case can be found than that which occurred in a remote town in Maine not long since.

The clerk of the court addressed the jury:

"Well, gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed upon a verdict?"

"We have," replied the foreman.

"What say you? Do you find the prisoner at the bar guilty, or not guilty?"

"We do."

"You do? Do what?"

"We find the prisoner at the bar guilty or not guilty."

"But, gentlemen, you must explain."

"You see, six of us finds him guilty, and six finds him not guilty."

An optimist is a man who can scent the coming harvest while the snow is on the ground; a man who can live in the sunny days of June, even while he is in the dingy days of December; a man who can believe in the best even in the arrogant and aggressive presence of the worst.—J. H. Jowett.

Wise Youth.

Don't Sleep Well No Good Reason Just Can't Sleep

Some people can't sleep. There seems to be no special reason. They have no disease of the nervous system. Digestion is fairly good. Their habits are pretty good. They may smoke a little or drink a little, yet their habits are fair. Still they can't sleep well.

Just a little unbalanced in the nerve centers. That is all. They should have a little "righting up."

A tonic will generally do this. The right sort of a tonic. Peruna is exactly the tonic. Digestion is hurried by Peruna. The stomach is empty and ready to rest for the night. The circulation is equalized. The brain is relieved of all congestions and irritations.

The Peruna acts on every blood vessel in the system. It acts on all of the nerve centers. One begins to sleep and hardly knows why.

Take a teaspoonful to one tablespoonful of Peruna before each meal. Sometimes another tablespoonful at bedtime is necessary, where the sleeplessness is very pronounced.

Just try it, neighbor. You will be glad if you do. One bottle will convince you. Peruna is no sleep medicine. It is not a nervine. It contains no narcotics. It is nothing of that sort. It is simply a regulative tonic.

Every home should be provided with the last edition of the "Ills of Life," sent free by the Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Thorsby Items

Just a word to the people of Thorsby in regard to taxes and a free public school. In order for the people to understand the situation let me say that the people of Thorsby agreed to pay a higher tax to the city than they did to the state and county, in order to raise enough money to appropriate $500 to the public school. Now the tax payers are kicking because the city tax last year was higher than the county tax, and they refuse to pay more to the city than they do to the county. Some of these people who are kicking have no children to attend the public school, and many of them have. If the people of Thorsby refuse to pay a reasonable tax in order to run a free public school, it will be impossible to have such in our midst. Some of our people seem inclined to blame the city council for this condition of affairs. The Council is not to blame, but the people who have a large amount of property and are able to pay a reasonable tax and never miss it are the ones who are doing the most of the kicking. We have a little town here that we are proud of, and one of the best methods to keep it such is to have a free school. One of the first questions asked by those seeking a new home is this: "Have you a free public school?" If we answer no, they go elsewhere. If you want to kill our town just give us nothing to run the school and you will do it.

Miss Grace Michelson, Mrs Evangeline Simonton, Miss Mattie Grenn and Miss Alma Swanland took a trip by foot to Jemison Sunday afternoon and returned by rail. They reported a good time, but say Thorsby is good enough for them.

Chilton County Medical Society

The medical men of Chilton County held a meeting at Jemison, and after transacting a lot of business adjourned and seated themselves around Dr. McNeil's dining table and sure did something to the "spread" placed before them. Among those present were Doctors Ellsberry, Hall Kinkaid, Marcus, three Doctor Johnsons and others.

Obituary

Died at her home near Union Springs church in the western part of the county on the night of the 30th ult., Mrs. Bettie Smith, wife of Mr. W. E. (Jake) Smith. Her death while not unexpected was very sudden. She lived to old age; her married life was spent here. She was a good woman. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Honeycutt, in the presence of a large number of her friends. It is sad to know she is dead, but oh the countless numbers who have wept for departed ones, such is death's sad work. But hope in cheery tones points to the great deliverance—the resurrection of the dead; when there will be no more graves; when caskets and garments of mourning will be gone forever; and the bright day of the judgment will be here; when sin will be unpopular; when sorrow and sighing will flee away.

"Lift up your heads desponding pilgrims,
Give to the winds your needless fears;
Soon the glad sun of promise given,
Rises to shine a thousand years."

Just before the casket was lowered into the grave the friends sang that touching song by that great woman Mrs. Dana, page 312 in the Sacred Harp: "O sing to me of Heaven," it being Mrs. Smith's request. And as the October sun was sinking in the west her remains were laid away in Union Springs cemetery, under the floral offerings prepared by loving hands. "The dew of evening scatters with diamonds the spot where her ashes repose."

Delinquent Subscribers Please Take Notice!

Some weeks ago we sent notices to all subscribers who were a year or more behind, asking them to pay up their arrears in order that we should not be compelled to stop sending their papers through the mails. Some of them, we are glad to say, heeded our call and attended to the matter forthwith; others, however, seem to have taken no notice at all, or at least have taken no step in adjusting the matter.

We wish to urge them again to attend to this matter at once. Besides the fact that the law does not allow us to send papers through the mails to subscribers more than a year behind, there are other reasons why the back subscriptions should be paid up. It is a plain business obligation, and for that reason alone, it should not be neglected. Many have been getting our paper regularly, and reading it, and at the same time are due a year or more on subscription. Where such is the case it is nothing but right for that person to pay up. In publishing the paper we are compelled to meet our obligations and pay our expenses as they occur. We cannot wait six months or a year till it comes convenient to pay them. Therefore it is not right for a subscriber to force us to credit him on his subscription. We need the money, and must have it in order to publish a paper.

You will be coming to the Fair next week, and can easily come to see us when in town. Don't let it escape your memory. We want to send you the Union-Banner, because we know you will enjoy it, and know it is worth the money we ask you to pay for it. We want the money because we need it and feel that it is nothing but right for us to have it if you have been getting our paper.

All delinquents who are not paid up by November 1, will be discontinued from our mailing list. If you fail to get your paper after that date, look up your receipt, or refer to the label on your paper, and you will find that you are a year behind. Then treat us right by coming in and paying up your indebtedness, and let us continue to send you the paper.

Clanton High School Notes

By Hoke Pipes and Willie Edwards.

MY ADVENTURES IN YELLOWSTONE PARK.

One morning I got up and after seeing the sun rise high in the atmosphere I decided to go hunting but I was far from a gun supply store and I had only one shell, but I decided that I would go anyway. I got in the land of the Yellowstone Park and it was posted, but I could not read and thefore I proceeded on my journey. I looked up into an immense tree and saw three fat squirrels, I looked to the left and saw some fat turkeys, I looked to the ground and saw a large rattlesnake; I wanted to kill all of them but had only one shell. I aimed at the rattle snake and killed it, the bullet hit a rock and glanced off and killed the three squirrels and kept going, the turkeys seeing the squirrels falling flew, and they flew in front of the bullet and kill them all, it then hit a rubber tree and bounced back and was ready for me to shoot again. I will tell some more next week.

Jean Wyatt.

Mr. Oliver Mullins was examined by Miss (Doctor) Wilson, she pronounced him hollow headed and there was no hope for him to get anything in it. We all hope he will be among the full headed soon.

SOME SLEEP.

Mr. Edgar Teel struck with headache during hardest study—soon over it.

Miss Bevely says she is ugly. She can't help being ugly but she could stay at home.

Mr. Omar Reynolds parches peanuts now. He eats all the profit.

Mr. Dorcas Maddox while going down town the other day caught a grasshopper, he kept it in his hand. He went on and bought some candy. When he went to pay the groceryman he handed him a grasshopper instead of the nickel. Mr. Dorcas wears a black eye and a bruised face. Just ask him about it.

TIGHT WAD.

Mr. Oscar Jones was going to Montgomery the other day, he went to the ticket window to buy his ticket, asked the agent to let him see some tickets to Montgomery. He picked up one and ask what that one was worth. You will have to pay 10c per lb. to use that one. He cut off his buttons took off his shoes and sox and also his hat, he took a bath and had his hair cut and got a shave. He found that he weighed only 10 lbs. so he went to Montgomery for $1.00. Who can beat this.

COURT PROCEEDINGS.

Lester Wagoner charged with assault and battery upon Joe Mullins; Jack Wade main witness; found guilty, and punished to the full extent of the law.

Mr. Omar Reynolds charged with pinching Edgar Teel in school; not guilty.

Miss Izora Callen vs. Annie Gragg; Bevely Hester main witness; Izora found guilty and made to kiss Annie.

Mr. Jean Wyatt charged with telling jokes, not found guilty.

Mr. Dorcas Maddox has been suffering with his eye to-day, read about him.

Last Saturday morning Mr. Dorcas Maddox sailed forth to Montgomery in his 348 to get some one to draw the gasoline from his tank; he had been told that gasoline was explosive, and he had forgotten that he could not "stay in the race" without gasoline, and he was afraid to try to get rid of the gasoline. When Dorcas got on the corner of one of the business streets he looked south and saw a street car. He then turned his footsteps northward at a rapid rate but all at once he observed a train in that direction. He then turned to the east but observed a fire wagon, nothing was left for him to do but to go to the west, but in that direction he saw a big fat policeman. He then came to a stand still, and decided to go pull off his shoes and go up, but there he saw an aeroplane. He then decided to lay down and die, but all at once he saw a hole, he jumped in it and was struck by an underground railway train. Poor Dock.

Mr. Reuben Popwell, Clanton's most beautiful young boy is getting very popular at the C. H. S. He walked from the door of his room and felt some one slapping him on the back. He turned to find out what it was; it was only one of his girl friends who warned him that she was going to bring him some pop corn, ha, ha, Reuben you are lucky guy.

Mr. Dorcas Maddox and Mr. Horace Popwell, two popular ginners of Clanton, decided they would take a one mile way down the railroad. They went only a few hundred yards when they met two girls. Going some other way—there is no question about this. There was a magnet some where that drew them back the other way. Mr. Maddox had his eyes centered upon one object and all at once stumped his toe and fell and it gave him heart trouble. Let us give you a little advice Dorcas: Next time keep your eye on your pathway and not girls. And the same to you Mr. Popwell, although you just only strained your eyes.

County Health Officer's Report

Vital Statistics Compiled By Dr. Gragg for Month of September.

To the Honorable Probate Judge and Commissioners of Chilton County:

Gentlemen:—

I beg to submit my report for the month of September. As required by law I inspected the county jail and poor house and found both in good condition.

All the doctors in the county have reported births and deaths. Vital statistics as follows:

Births—White, 42; Colored, 8; total 50. Deaths—White, 14; Colored 3; total 17.

The following cases of infectious diseases were reported and have been properly looked after: Seven cases of typhoid fever, one case of scarlet fever, and one case of diphtheria.

Respectfully submitted,
V. J. GRAGG,
County Health Officer.

Druggists Endorse Dodson's Liver Tone

It is a Guaranteed Harmless Vegetable Remedy that Regulates the Liver Without Stopping your Work or Play.

THE UNION
AND BANNER.

Published Every Thursday at Clanton
Chilton County, Alabama.
UNION PUBLISHING CO.
W. M. WYATT, Editor.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.00.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton Ala., as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

W. S. Keller, State Highway Engineer, in conversation with Judge Deason, requested him to announce that he would be glad to meet all citizens of Chilton county, who are interested in the proposed Montgomery to Birmingham highway, at the Court House in Clanton, on next Wednesday, October 22, for the purpose of devising ways and means of aiding in the construction of said highway. All who are interested are urgently requested to attend.

"WHEN IN DOUBT, DON'T."

We wish to call the attention of our readers to an article in this issue of the Union-Banner, which we clip from the Rockford Chronicle of October 9. It deals with Coosa county's treatment of the bond proposition, and is so clear and unequivocal that we cannot add one word to its expression. Only we wish to call one special part of it to your attention, which strikes us more forcibly than any other.

He says "the Chronicle did not champion the bond issue, although it was favorable to it, but left the matter to the people, urging them all the while to discuss it in their own way." It seems to us that the attitude of the Chronicle is very strikingly correct. We, ourselves, do not think it wise for any paper to pose as a leader, and direct the people into bonds, or anything else as for that matter. We favor the position taken by the Chronicle—"a helper, acting in concert with the good people who favor the best in all things."

The bond issue has never come to a test in Chilton as it did in Coosa, but if it should, this paper would choose the position defined by the Chronicle, because we believe it is right. We could only urge the voters to give it serious and unprejudiced consideration and cast their ballot according to their honest convictions. If they then expressed a desire to issue bonds, we would faithfully yield to the popular sentiment, and try the measure for the best attainable from it.

The people of this county are justly capable of a right solution of the problem—a solution that will best serve the common welfare of all. Believing this, we could not advise them to vote for or against bonds, but would leave it to their own judgment, which we believe a fair criterion for any measure concerning Chilton county as a whole.

FOR SALE OR TRADE

I have a good eleven room two-story house situated on a very desirable lot on Fifth Street between Second and Third Avenue, and only Forty yards from the Court House, which I will sell or trade for a good farm within two miles of town. On the lot is also a first class barn. A good well and pump also.

Apply to G. O. Foshee.

"My little boy had a marvelous escape," writes P. F. Bastlams of Prince Albert, Cape of Good Hope. "It occured in the middle of the night. He got a very severe attack of croup. As luck would have it, I had large bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. After following the directions for an hour and twenty minutes he was through all danger." sold by Upchurch Drug, Co.

NO ROAD BONDS.

At the election held in Coosa County last Monday to determine whether or not the County should issue bonds in the sum of $75,000 for the purpose of improving the roads and bridges in the county the people voted down the proposition by a large majority. Notwithstanding the loss of the progressive proposition the election has not been in vain. The campaign is worth to the county all it cost and more too. It was not a campaign of agitation by politicians, but a campaign of discussion among the people; men who have left thinking and discussion to the agitator and the political huckster have thought for themselves and have thought deeply; they have taken the question into the sacred precincts of home and turned it over and over and viewed it on all sides. In this way they have been more seriously impressed with their duties as citizens than ever before. They are all practically in favor of good roads but on the bond question they hesitated —and where did they stop to hesitate? What question was there in the mind of the voter who was in favor of good roads and willing to pay his share to build them? We understand where the politician stopped; he stopped where he met the tide of public opinion as it came in late on the evening of the campaign of the election day. But that was not the case with the ordinary man who votes from conviction. He stopped at the question, What will become of the money?

The Chronicle did not champion the bond issue. although it was favorable to it, but left the matter to the people, urging them all the while to discuss in their own way. The Chronicle has never posed as a leader but acting in concert with the good people who favor the best in all things. We remember that even Moses, the profound scholar and greatest statesman of his age, called of God himself, was not willing to assume entire leadership alone, And it were better that in our country we, like Moses, rely on co-operations with the wisdom and sagacity of others.

The chain of public thought in this county has been welded. It was broken 15 or 20 years ago when it was understood that for the purpose of harmony the ordinary citizen should lie supinely and leave the management of public affairs to the very few. The people must not think lest they cause disunion and strife. At the risk of strife they must dwarf their intellect and surrender their civil rights.

Henceforth the people will feel the responsibility of selecting public officials just as they have felt the responsibility of voting on the bond question and they will talk that over among themselves. They did not vote on the bond question to do honor or favor to some friend. In future they will think and hesitate when they come to a flaw in the candidate's record just like they halted when they come to the question in the bond matter. What will become of the money? —Rockford Chronicle.

Salves Can't Cure Eczema

In regard to skin diseases, medical authorities are now agreed on this:

Don't imprison the disease germs in your skin by the use of greasy salves, and thus encourage them to multiply. A true cure of all eczematous diseases can be brought about only by using the healing agents in the form of a liquid.

WASH THE GERMS OUT.

A simple wash: A compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, and other ingredients as combined in the D.D.D. Prescription. This penetrates to the disease germs and destroys them, then soothes and heals the skin as nothing else has ever done.

A 50 cent bottle will start the cure and give you instant relief.

We have made fast friends of more than one family by recommendating this D.D.D. Prescription to a skin sufferer here and there, and we want you to try it now on our positive pay guarantee. D.D.D. Soap keeps the pores clean; ask us.

Upchurch Drug Co.

MEMORIES of the Old South in Every Can of French Market Coffee

The romance of the days of Andrew Jackson, of Henry Clay, of the picturesque pirate chief, LaFitte, and of the beautiful women and brave men of the old South, clings around every cup of delicious old French Market Coffee.

Enjoying its unmatched aroma and wonderful soothing flavor invokes the picture of the quaint stalls where belles and beaux congregated after every festive occasion for the crowning pleasure of a good-night cup of this most popular of all beverages.

The French Market Coffee that you get from your grocer, in perfectly-sealed packages, is identical with the historic French blend served in the old French Market in New Orleans.

Try it once and you'll agree there is only one real old French Market Coffee—only one coffee with a history.

Roasted by our unique, hygienic process.

CLANTON, ALABAMA.

Alabama's Growth

The human brain is the greatest known motive power. It has made ships sail before the winds; steamers to plow the sea; the earth to yield its coal, iron, gold and silver; steam engines to travel safely at a high rate of speed; automobiles to annihilate street and road distances; men to fly in the air; machines to talk and pictures to walk.

Thinking has produced these results. Men intent on development and advancement have devoted nights of sleeplessness, days of labor, years of toil to the work. Consequently a steady growth has gone on in the world since the days when we lived in thatched huts and practiced cannibalism.

Alabama has had, and now has, her thinking men—men big of brain and of unselfish patriotism. They have devoted their best efforts to keep the state in the forefront of progress. They realize that all wealth comes out of the earth. Every known article of food and clothing is dependent upon the earth for production. Money—be it gold, silver or paper—comes out of the earth, as do diamonds, rubies and other precious stones of commercial value.

It is, therefore, important that men think and think seriously of the soil.

The L. & N. realizes that Alabama is an empire within herself; that her soil is productive of almost every known article of food and clothing. That is why we are thinking hard of the soil of Alabama, and that is why we are trying to get others within and without the borders of the state to think of the soil of Alabama.

Practically one-fourth of L. & N. mileage is within the state of Alabama. The growth of the L. & N. and the growth of the state are interdependent. We are spending time and money and energy, plus thought, in an effort to build up the state so that we can build up the L. & N.

We ask the people to think, and urge them to think along co-operative, constructive lines. We ask them to remember that the welfare of the L. & N. and its ability to continue its constructive work are dependent upon them.

We have faith in the people, and believe that, once they have a full understanding of the situation, the march of progress will be rapid and irresistible.

Real Things of Life.

Conventional orthodoxies, whether they be of manners, or of ways of life, or of thought, or of religion, or of education, are unimportant. What then remains? Courage, and patience, and simplicity, and kindness, and beauty, and, last of all, ideas remain; and these are the things to lay hold of and to live with.—A. C. Benson.

Neuralgia of the face, shoulder, hands, or feet requires a powerful remedy that will penetrate the flesh. Ballard,s snow Liniment possesses that power. Rubbed in where the pain is felt is all that is necessary to relieve suffering and restore normal conditions. Price 25 cts, 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle sold by Upchurch; Drug, Co.

Matter of Protection.

A man who not only has no automobile, but who cannot be persuaded to so much as enter one, has been going around with a pair of motor goggles. Some one inquired why he wore them, seeing that he had no car. "No," he said grimly; "but my wife has hatpins!"

Child cant get strong and robust while intestinal worms eat away its vitality. To give the child a chance to grow these parasites must be deitroyed and expelled. WHITE'S CREAM VERMIFUGE is guaranteed to remove the worms; it also puts the vital organs in healthy vigorous condition. Price 25 cents per dottle Sold by Upchurch, Drug, Co.

Collecting a Crowd.

"I don't know what to do to collect a crowd," said the street salesman. "My old methods are all getting too familiar." "Nothing is easier," replied Mr. Chuggins. "If you want to collect a crowd simply pretend that your automobile is broken and that you are going to try to fix it."

All you who have torpid liver, weak digestion or constipated bowels look out for chills. The Season is here and the air is full of the disease germs. The best the best thing to do is to get your liver in good condition and Purify the stomach and bowels. HERBINE is the right remedy, it answers the purpose completely Price 50 cents Sold by Upchurch, Drug Company.

Blue of the Sky.

Oxygen is not colorless, but of a pretty blue color, even in a layer of slight thickness. Liquid air has a bluish tint increasing in depth with the proportion of oxygen. While it is not certain that a body has the same color in a solid as in the gaseous state, it is nevertheless true that this at once suggests an explanation of the phenomenon of the blue color of the sky.—Scientific American.

Criminals Dark-Eyed.

Over 75 per cent. of the world's bigamists have had brown eyes. That is an amazing fact. "I can tell a criminal by his eyes," said Vidocq, the famous French detective, and in dozens of cases he stated that his suspicions were first aroused by seeing the eyes of the guilty person. He added that it was a remarkable fact that the majority of criminals, with the one exception of murderers, are dark-eyed.

Tackle Catarrh Now
Be Free All Winter

Avoid Colds, Stall Pneumonia, Keep Your Nose Clear and Your Throat Free.

Don't Wait Till You're All Bunged Up. Use S. S. S. Now.

If you will go into any first class store and get a bottle of S. S. S. you are on the way to getting rid of Catarrh. But don't let anyone work off that old trick of something "Just as good."

S. S. S. is taken into the blood just as naturally as the most nourishing food. It spreads its influence over every organ in the body, comes through all the veins and arteries, enables all mucous surfaces to exchange inflammatory acids and other irritating substances for arterial elements that effectually cleanse the system and thus put an end to all catarrhal pollution. S. S. S. cleans out the stomach of mucous accumulations, enables only pure, blood-making materials to enter the intestines, combines with these food elements to enter the circulation, and in less than an hour is at work throughout the body in the process of purification.

The medicinal components of S. S. S. are relatively just as essential to well-balanced health as the nutritive properties of the grains, meats, sugars, and fats of foods. Any local irritating influence in the blood is rejected by the tissue cells and eliminated by reason of the stimulating influence of S. S. S.

You will soon realize its wonderful influence by the absence of headache, a decided clearing of the air passages, a steadily improved nasal condition, and a sense of bodily relief that proves how completely catarrh often infests the entire system.

You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores. It is a remarkable remedy for any and all blood affections, such as eczema, rash, lupus, tetter, psoriasis, boils, and all other diseased conditions of the blood. For special advice on any blood disease write to The Swift Specific Co., 202 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Do not trifle with substitutes, imitations or any of the horde of "Just as good" Counterfeits of S. S. S.

A Carelessly Treated Cold is the source of most sickness because drugged pills, syrups and alcoholic mixtures are uncertain and unsafe.

Scott's Emulsion has been relied upon by physicians for forty years as the safe and sensible remedy to suppress the cold and build up the enfeebled forces to avert throat and lung troubles.

Don't tolerate alcoholic substitutes, but insist on the Genuine Scott's Emulsion. One bottle usually lasts longer than a cold. Every druggist has it. 13 75

GREAT WRITER A REAL BOY

Charles Dickens, Like the Average Youngster, Had His Dreams of Becoming a Pirate.

The English boys of years ago—there never was any doubt as to American boys of that or any other period before or after—had romantic ideas as to becoming ruthless robbers by land or pirates on the high seas is shown by a recently discovered speech made by Charles Dickens and reported in the London Times of April 13, 1864, from which the following quotation from the London Dickensonian is taken: "Mr. Dickens said his first recollections of the northwest of London (this was in 1824, when he was twelve years old), were connected with a certain waste plot of ground used almost exclusively for beating carpets. The only ornaments of the locality, were a piece of stagnant water, a few straggling docks and some stunted greens. With it, however, was associated the romantic story of the 'Field of the Forty Footsteps,' according to which a duel had been fought there between two brothers, the forty dreadful paces over which the victor pursued his victim being marked by the withering up of the grass in forty distinct places. Dickens had often gone there, he said, accompanied by an adventurous young Englishman, aged eleven, with whom he had intended going to the Spanish Main as soon as ever they could amass sufficient wealth to buy a cutlass and a rifle."

The University of London afterward was erected on this site. Dickens as a boy in April, 1827, saw the cornerstone laid and "the ceremony of laying the first stone of a new and splendid public building" of which Mr. Pecksniff was the architect, as narrated in "Martin Chuzzlewit," was a reminiscence of this event.

Will G. Richmond, a resident of Inglewood, Cal., will answer any inquiries about Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. He says further "Foley's Honey and Tar Compound has greatly benefitted me for bronchial trouble and cough, after I used other remedies that failed. It is more like a food than a medicine." WHITES POOR PEARL DIVERS

Tried in Australia, but All Engaged in the Business Are Either Dead or Paralyzed.

Efforts have recently been made to employ white men as pearl divers off the coast of Australia, and legislation for the purpose has been adopted, in order to more fully open that industry to Europeans.

But it now appears that the experiment has been by no means satisfactory. A very interesting statement on this subject has recently been made by Captain Talboys, who has had wide experience of pearling on the Australian coast. He says emphatically that white divers are an impossibility.

He had hoped that the white man would have proved a successful diver, but he says that, after a very lengthy experiment, the idea had been abandoned.

The divers, six or eight of them, who were brought to Australia by the master pearlers, from Messrs. Siebe, Gorman & Co., and Messrs. Henkie & Co., submarine engineers, about two years ago, were all either dead or paralyzed.

In view of the further facts alleged, there appears to be no scope for white pearl divers in Australian waters. For, as the result of a year's diving, says Captain Talboys, the best returns of the white divers did not exceed a ton, whilst the average yield of an Asiatic's work was between four and five tons.

Besides, the Asiatic worked for $10 to $15 per month, plus a commission on the shell raised, while the white man received $70 per month, with a similar commission, in addition to which the cost of keep for the white man was about three times that expended on the Asiatic.—Far East, Tokio.

SHOULD WE HAVE GH SCHOOL?

University, Ala.

or Union-Banner:

ant to say a few words in to a High School at Clan- It is now time, indeed, that ould stop and think about we are doing. For months ave been trying or groping on the question of the high ol.

e high school is not a luxury rtainly a necessity. The ng days have gone by when y-headed urchn from the try, city or anywhere else enter a city store as an d boy and finish by owning stablishment. A large part e clientele of the high school be and undoubtedly will be, s who with no intentions of g to the Universities or any high institution seek spe- instruction in the high ol, and that means the bone sinew of the community.

is demand for knowledge not be wholly attributed to creased love of learning for wn sake, but rather more to act that this country is fill- p; has past through the old tier days when any person considered fit for any job has now reached the situa- of older countries where ial aptitudes are required olding positions other than e of pure manual labor. A t step in advance was taken the average parent was e to see that it was to his ad- age to send his child through t grades. But the demands day are for more skill, more ning, it is clearly the duty of gh school to abandon its posi- of isolation and silly exclu- ness and to come down into rena of daily life and make useful to the large class of y-day people needing its rations.

he first phase of the question h presents itself is the edu- nal ideals and standards by the surrounding people. e first place it is true that educational ideals of a com- ity are usually determined a rather small minority of people. It frequently hap- s that while people may look ose of their numbers who had the best educational antages to tell them what is t for the people, yet when it es to the point that we might our followers that is the r way.

people where the masses ostly native Americans, dominate idea of making ter preparations for school, w. Most people in such their schooling in the where one teacher taught ug, and where only ele- ry branches were taught. ey are, on the whole, well- aning people, but they are y apt to consider much that taught in a high school as su- erfluous.

When it comes to the making ssary preparations for high they are bound by the limitations. The schools end to do anything must the people with them if are to progress in any per- nent sense. Much trouble netimes arises from the dissat- ed people. It is a common oc- nce in the history of a race t the education of the young s had to wait upon the training their fathers and mothers.

Little has thus far been said regard to the central influence a high school upon the com- nity life. It is through the nrn of high school influence the homes that much of the erest of the people in a wider ucational outlook is engendred. w people lets get busy and a high school by the begin- ng of the next scholastic year. here is no reason why Clanton Chilton County couldn't have igh school. I noticed a piece e Mayor of Thorsby wrote a few weeks ago in regard to the schools of Thorsby. Gentlemen, the Baptist High School, and the Institute are no doubt alright but if we can get a High School at Clanton the children can go so much cheaper than to other schools. We shonld have it fully affiliated with other large institutions of learning near us. It is just partially affiliated to the University of Alabama and the requirement units are increasing every year and if we do not get busy we will be dropped out, so let everybody wake up and get a High School for Clanton. All we need is a good enthusiastic man to step forward. The opportunities are knocking at our doors. BURNIE THOMPSON.

Discretion.

There is no talent so useful towards rising in the world, or which puts men more out of the reach of fortune, than that quality generally possessed by the dullest sort of men, and in common speech called discretion; a species of lower prudence, by the assistance of which people of the meanest intellects, without any other qualification, pass through the world in great tranquillity, and with universal good treatment, neither giving nor taking offense.—Swift.

Nero Played a Bagpipe.

Although bagpipes are usually associated with Scotland, they are not peculiar to the Highlands. It is an ancient Greek and Roman instrument. On a piece of ancient Greek sculpture now in Rome a bagpiper is represented dressed like a Scotch Highlander. Nero is said to have played upon a bagpipe. Chaucer represents the miller as skilled in playing bagpipes.

NERVOUS HEADACHES

Heavy Feeling, as If My Brain Was Pressing Down

MRS. EFFIE HILL, Blanchester, Clinton Co., Ohio.

Mrs. Hill says: "I cannot tell you how much I have suffered during the past twelve years." Twelve years is a long time for any one to suffer. A great multitude of women in this country know exactly what Mrs. Hill means when she says, "Heavy feeling, as if my brain was pressing down. So nervous I could not get my rest at night. Would have sinking spells and then so weak that I could not do my work." A great many women in the United States will recognize in this description their own experience.

Mrs. Hill found a remedy. After taking four bottles of Peruna she gained in strength and flesh and wrote us that she was a well woman again. She says, "I cannot thank you enough for my recovery."

This is no ordinary incident. Twelve years suffering. Four bottles of Peruna. Restored to perfect health. If Peruna can do this for one woman why can it not for another? Is it not worth your attention? Is it not worth trying?

Those who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.

Buy a Mechanical Drudge

MANY a winter day of back breaking labor has the average farmer spent stooping over the old buck saw, zr-r-p, zr-r-ping its way through tough wood for the kitchen stove supply. But the wise ones don't do it now. They have a handy engine to run the saw, while they rest and plan for next summer's work.

That engine is about the busiest and most convenient machine the wise man has on his farm. It pumps water for him, runs the separator, washing machine, feed grinder, corn sheller, and grindstone. Often it runs a hay press, ensilage cutter, small thresher, or a repair shop. The year round it drudges for him, saving the man's strength for more profitable things. And the wisest man has an because it does most for him at least cost. Its simplicity renders it almost trouble-proof. Its construction makes it easy to start and to operate, and it is most economical in fuel consumption. It is made of best material, and when necessary it will deliver 10 to 30 per cent above its rated horse power. I H C responsibility for the engine lasts all the years it is in service.

I H C engines are made in all styles—vertical and horizontal, portable, stationary and skidded, air and water cooled. There are pumping, sawing and spraying outfits. Sizes from 1 to 50-horse power, to operate on gas, gasoline, naphtha, distillate, kerosene, and alcohol. Oil tractors, 6-12 to 30-60-horse power for plowing, threshing, etc.

Section 4: That notice of the holding of said election be given by publication for thirty days as required by law.

Avoid Sedative Cough Medicines.

If you want to contribute directly to the occurrence of cabillary bronchitis and pneumonia use cough medicines that contain codine, morphine, heroin and other sedatives when you have a cough or cold. An expectorant like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is what is needed. That cleans out the culture beds or breeding places for the germs of pneumonia and other germ diseases. That is why pneumonoia never results from a cold when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It has a world wide reputation for its cures. It contains no morphine or other sedative. Youthful Diplomat.

Harry is small but diplomatic. The other day he wanted his mother to come out on the veranda with him. The mother, being busy, refused, and Harry invented various expedients, from informing her that he was tired and lonely to complaining of a pain in his tummy, in the hope of inducing her to change her mind. Finally he called sweetly: "Mother, dear, I don't want you to stay out here if you don't want to, but I do want to kiss you very much." Mother came out.

Chilton County Fair Drawing Great Numbers

MOST INTERESTING OCCASION EVER HELD IN CLANTON

Best Exhibits Ever Entered—Great Crowds Attending Greatest Days to be Friday and Saturday. Hobson Here Friday.

Clanton is alive this week to probably the biggest event ever witnessed here—The Chilton County Fair—and it well deserves all the interest that is being drawn out by it.

The management of the Fair have gone to every extreme to provide entertainment to suit the taste of everyone, and that they have succeeded in their efforts is readily seen when one enters the jolly crowd of sight-seers within the gates. Every person there is always amusing himself in some way.

True to the main purpose of the Fair the agricultural department is one of the greatest features. Everything raised by farmer or gardener is displayed there in the most elegant style. And some of the very best specimens of farm products are on display.

But one stops in ecstacy when he enters the tent occupied by the Womens Home department. Myriads of beautiful productions placed there by Chilton's own fair ladies and girls, g ouped and arranged in the most attractive manner, bring out an impression that is appealed to only by things most beautiful. The art work, sewing, cooking and every phase of domestic science are most admirably represented.

The girls canning club presents one of the most attractive appearances in the department. Hundreds of cans of tomatoes are on exhibition, and show the zeal with which the girls are keeping up this valuable work.

The live stock department will be at its best on Friday, when the big parade will take place. All the live stock and cattle will be passed through the streets of Clanton, when they c n be viewed by everyone. On Thursday and Friday the exhibits will be judged, and on Saturday the prizes will be awarded and premiums paid.

Capt. R. P. Hobson will speak at the Fair on Friday. It is expected that throngs of people will greet him and hear his address.

It seems that no farmer or Chilton County man could afford to miss seeing this Fair. If you have not already been here you had better get busy and show up. Leave off your cotton picking for a day and bring your family to see the Fair. You will enjoy seeing the agricultural exhibits, and the children will enjoy looking at the monkeys and trained dogs.

Chilton Boy Gets Good Corn Yield

"Judge" Williams, the young brother of Mr. T. E. Williams, who lives about three miles southwest of Clanton, has reported a good record in corn raising. He last week gathered the corn from his acre, and it amounted to seventy-five and one quarter bushels. This may or may not prove to be the largest yield in the county, but, Judge will certainly make a good race for one of the corn club prizes, and he fully deserves it.

The Coosa River Baptist Associ'n

A meeting which lasted two days was held at Canaan Baptist Church near Mountain Creek, in which delegates from Coosa and Chilton counties participated.

Rev. W. T. Penton was elected Moderator and Dr. J. W. Maddox Clerk. The people of Mountain Creek and vicinity entertained the delegates and visitors during their stay, and an elegant dinner was served on the ground each day.

Several very able sermons were delivered during the session by resident and visiting ministers. The Association is composed of the Landmark Baptist Churches of Coosa and Chilton, which sent delegates to the Convention. Some important matters, all with the intention of increasing religious interest in the sections represented were attended to. After the close of the meeting the delegates left for their homes pleased with the results attained.

Snow and Sleet in Cullman Co.

It is reported from Hanceville in Cullman county that snow and sleet fell there on Monday morning. The coldest weather for many seasons was experienced. The cold wave was felt in Chilton very severely but no snow or sleet was seen.

Mt. Pleasant

Jack Frost has visited us and left everything looking sick.

Prof. J. K. T. Daniel is moving in this week and getting ready to open up school next Monday.

Several of our people attended the fair at Birmingham last week.

Mrs. Julizzie Foshee is visiting at Mr. W. H. Foshee's this week.

Mrs. J. H. Duncan spent Sunday with her mother, Mrs. Mary Thompson, who lives east of Clanton.

Mr. B. G. Burnett is spending a few days with relatives and friends at Columbiana.

Mr. G. H. Massey has just returned from a trip to Elmore and Autauga Counties.

Mr. and Mrs. Grover Blankinship spent Monday with Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lewis.

Mr. Porter Payton and family of Jemison spent Saturday night with Mr. J. W. Blankinship.

Mr. Charley Duke and wife spent Saturday night with Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Duke.

Lots of the people around here are attending the Chilton County Fair this week.

Clanton High School Notes

By Hoke Pipes and Willie Edwards.

MY TRIP TO YELLOWSTONE PARK.

I had used up my only shell and now I was far from the hotel where I was staying. Many dangerous animals could be heard to growl in the far distance. Shaking with fright I started home when something suddenly jumped toward me. I didn't look, but closed my eyes and started back as fast as I could. All of a sudden I hit a big tree and knocked the bark off it.—I also stopped suddenly. There was a cop standing near. He took me to jail on the charge that I was trying to destroy a tree belonging to the park. I was kept in jail for two weeks and finally I was brought before the judge for trial. I was found guilty and my sentence was to feed the animals in the managerie. Next week my subject will be "A Narrow Escape."

Miss Annie Gragg and Miss Izora Callen went to the Fair last week. As they were looking at the animals they came to a cage that was closed and its sides were mirrors. The both looked in and saw themselves. "Oh look at those ugly monkeys! Gee, wouldn't they scare us if they were to get out," they were talking when the manager came along and said, "Don't break the mirror." They are recovering slowly from the shock.

AN EXPLANATION.

When we speak of a "goose egg," we simply mean a zero which one gets on his record when he misses his lesson.

Miss Lizzie Culpepper got a "goose egg" the other day.

Mr. Oliver Mullins came up missing one day last week.

The cold weather has been bad for the girls. They sit up and shiver like a lump of jelly.

Mr. —— and Mr. Leon Kemp got into a fight. The result was that —— whipped Kemp.

COURT PROCEEDINGS.

Mr. Omar Reynolds, charged with making the weather cold last week, found guilty and put in the stove.

Edgar Teel, charged with making faces at Omar; found guilty; pinched.

Miss Izora Callen made a face last Monday and it froze that way. It has not thawed out yet, though we have kept her by the fire constantly.

We have a new pupil in our room. He is known as a very bright boy (being red headed) though the girls bother him so much he cannot study. He is also very handsome as you will probably agree when you see him. He answers to the name of Felton Mullins.

When algebra class was called last Friday Miss Beverly Hester had a serious headache. She was not able to place her problem on the board. But as soon as the class was over she was feeling good.

Miss Wilson suggests that some of the boys ought to get some axle grease for their brain.

We have a new rule in geometry. After using his pencil and paper all day Friday Mr. Dorcas Maddax proved that if a triangle is equiangular all three of its sides are parallel. Dorcas is very good in Geometry. He can construct anything but a "goose egg," and Mr. Pickens usually constructs those for him—on his record.

Edgar Teel went to get the dentist to work on his teeth, and as he passed through town he bought some chewing gum. The Dentist asked him to remove his gum while he attended to his teeth. But Ed insisted that he be allowed to chew his gum while the doctor worked.

Joe Kanjutzky's eyes trouble him so that he has to have a pair of glasses to see how to go to sleep every night.

Reuben Popwell's girl has gone back on him, and he gets no more pop corn.

A Letter of Thanks

From the Superintendent And Inmates at County Poor House.

As Superintendent of the Poor Farm, I deem it a most pleasant duty to respectfully ask space in the Union-Banner to express the hearty thanks of each of the inmates of the Home to Prof. Bone, his school children, the young men and ladies, and every one who were so kind as to remember the inmates on last Sabbath, by treating them to the delicious cakes and lemonade which they so much enjoyed, and to assure the kind donors that they will be remembered most kindly by every one in the Home, who wish them a pleasant journey through life, and a home with those above.

We also enjoyed the sermon by Rev. Mr. Crimpton, and the special prayer by Mrs. Collins. The singing was truly beautiful and all was most enjoyable.

In behalf of the inmates, I assure all who were so kind in their efforts to brighten the sad lot of these people, that it will be as "bread cast on the waters," as all such goodness will sooner or later be recompensed.

Again thanking the good people for their delicious treat and with thanks to the Union-Banner.

Alabama Progressive Executive Committee

HELD IMPORTANT MEETING IN BIRMINGHAM LAST FRIDAY.

Many Things for Good of the Party Enacted and a Number of Important Resolutions Passed. Hobson Rumor Killed.

The state executive committee of the Progressive party of Alabama Friday afternoon went on record by an unanimous rising vote as opposed to affiliation with any other political party or endorsing a candidate for any office who is in another political party.

This action followed a speech by George O'Bear, of Birmingham, who declared that a false impression had gone out in a local newspaper to the effect that the committee meeting had been called to endorse the candidacy of a certain man. The report referred to was the publication that the committee had been called to endorse the candidacy of Capt. R. P. Hobson for the United States Senate. Mr. O'Bear declared that he wanted the rumor killed once for all.

The Bull Moose Executive Committee went on record as favoring putting out a full state ticket next year as well as tickets in every county in the state that is practicable to oppose the democratic and republican nominees.

An effort was made by Julius W. Davidson to have the committee to adopt a resolution calling upon the Alabama congressman to appeal to the department of justice to withdraw the dissolution suit against the United States Steel Corporation. Mr. Davidson pointed out that several thousand workmen in the Birmingham district favored this action. He declared that the people of Birmingham endorsed the Steel corporation taking over the Tennessee company.

The resolution was stoutly opposed by Dr. Cross, of Gadsden, and others, who declared that such a resolution would sacrifice the party in the eight other congressional districts of the state.

Finally, Judge A. P. Longshore of Shelby county, came forward with the olive branch and asked that the resolution be withdrawn and introduced before the next state convention of the progressive party. Mr. Davidson complied with the request and the incident was closed.

A red hot debate was elicited over the question of going on record as favoring the abolition of the payment of poll taxes as a qualification to vote. Col. W. T. McKelroy, of Walker county, opposed this resolution and it was laid on the table to be considered by the state convention.

The committee decided to raise the $500 pledged by the Alabama Progressives to the national committee, by voluntary contributions.

The following resolution was adopted on the Alabama senatorial situation:

"Whereas, the Progressive party was organized for the purpose of securing and perpetuating popular government; and

"Whereas, the congress of the United States and the states of the American union have adopted an amendment to the constitution of the United States providing for popular government in the election of a senator; and,

"Whereas, the state of Alabama is today, and has been for some time, without its full representation in the United States senate; and, whereas; this situation has been brought about by the action and nonaction of the governor of Alabama and the democratic state administration in failing to take such steps as will secure to the people of Alabama the right to elect their senator by popular vote, as provided by the amendment to the federal constitution;

"Therefore, the progressive state executive committee does hereby condemn this action of the governor and state administration in endeavoring to prevent an election or a United States senator by the people.

"Resolved, further, That while it is beyond our power to remedy this condition which has been brought about by those in authority in the democratic party, except through the voice of the people, we hereby invite all qualified voters, regardless of past party political affiliation, who believe in popular government, to join with us in our fight for the rule of the people.

"Be it further Resolved, That we call upon the progressives in every county in the state to perfect county organizations and to invite all qualified voters to join with us in this fight for popular government and make preparations for nominating county and congressional tickets to be voted for at the next general election.

"Be it further Resolved, That the chairman be authorized to call a convention of the party to arrange for the placing of candidates in the field for state and county offices and for congress in each district, when in his judgment the time is ripe for such convention."—B'hm Ledger

232 Bushels of Corn on an Acre

Tallapoosa Corn Grower Will Probably Secure Prize This Year

Walter Lee Dunston of Alexander City, may secure the prize this year as the largest corn grower in the state. According to an announcement of the state department of agriculture and industries, Mr. Dunston produced 232 bushels of corn on one acre. The next largest yield has so far been made by Ewell Hickman, a young Pike county farmer, who raised 228 bushels of corn on one acre.

When it first became known that Mr. Hickman had raised 228 bushels on one acre, it was generally believed at the agricultural department that he would capture the prize for this year, inasmuch as the season for corn growing was not very good.

The department may hear of other remarkable corn yields, but it is doubted if Mr. Dunston's record will be surpassed.

A full state ticket will be put in the campaign next year by the Progressive party, and the Executive Committee urges the Bull Moose supporters in every county to keep alive to the situation and rally to the support of the cause which the party espouses.

That the Progressive Party is a party totally separate and apart from any other political organization in this state was very forcibly brought to the public notice last Friday in the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Progressives of Alabama in Birmingham. An open resolution was adopted repudiating a newspaper statement that the Progressives would support Mr. Hobson for the United States Senate. The Progressives of this state have no intention of supporting any candidate for any office who is in any other party than the Progressive, or Bull Moose.

The many supporters of the Progressive party in Chilton County will read with interest the proceedings of the meeting of the Progressive State Executive Committee held in Birmingham last Friday. A detailed account of the meeting is published in this issue of the Union-Banner. The resolutions which were passed at the meeting are good, and should arouse everyone to a zealous intention of not only giving his own support to the Progressive move, but try to win his brother over also. The principles of the party are above reproach, and are well deserving of the support of the people. They champion the cause of popular government, which should be the purpose and intent of every well meaning citizen. We feel certain that Chilton County in the final round will not fail to yield a fair harvest to the Progressive party and its principles.

NOVELTY FOR NEW YORKERS

Surprised Man Discovers Place Where Diners Are Not Ashamed to Be Heard at Prayer.

"Every day I learn something about this old town," said the New York city salesman. "Yesterday I picked up this item:

"I was invited to luncheon by a young man engaged in evangelistic work. The restaurant he suggested lunching at was several blocks out of our way. As I was in a hurry, I proposed some place nearer at hand, but he insisted upon that particular restaurant, so we went there. It was a nice place, very clean, and the cooking good. The only peculiarity I noticed was a group of clerical looking men in the rear of the room.

"'Are those fellows all clergymen?'" I asked.

"'Yes,' said my friend, 'they are curates and missionaries who eat here every day. If obliged to lunch out anywhere they try to come here, because this restaurant has the reputation of being the only place in town where a man can ask a blessing without perhaps attracting disagreeable attention.

"'The proprietor used to be pretty strong in the preaching line himself, and he encourages the blessing habit. Of course many people eat here who do not say grace, but so many of the patrons do say it that the place has been nicknamed "blessing" restaurant.'

"And then before beginning our meal my friend prayed, and as nobody even turned around to look at us I found that the restaurant indeed merited its novel reputation."

A Big Campaign Club Formed

A campaign club with 70 members as voters, mostly old Confederate soldiers, was formed at Mountain Creek Friday. The old men by their actions took this method of informing politicians and office seekers that they are still in the ring. Resolutions were passed favoring Mr. Underwood for the United States Senate.

Visitors at the Soldiers Home

The following young ladies visited the Soldiers Home:

Misses M. B. Parrish, Nellie Scott, M. L. Hunter, D. D. Burkhalter, Etta Jones, Hattie Jones, Lovie Pitts, Gertrude Dennis, all of Mountain Creek. Miss Dora Belle Manning of Verbena, Miss C. B. Summers of Mountain Creek, Miss Ada Penton of Rockford, Miss Ruth Sims of Mountain Creek, Miss Leona Guy of Mountain Creek.

Consumption Takes 450 People Every Day

In the United States and the surprising truth is that most cases are preventable with timely, intelligent treatment.

These appalling facts should warn you that after sickness, colds, overwork or any other drains upon your strength, Scott's Emulsion should be promptly and regularly used because tubercular germs thrive only on a weakened system.

The tested and proven value of Scott's Emulsion is recognized by the greatest specialists because its medical nourishment assimilates quickly to build healthy tissue; aids in the development of active, life-sustaining blood corpuscles; strengthens the lungs and builds physical force without reaction. Scott's Emulsion is used in tuberculosis camps because of its rare tissue-building, blood-making properties and because it contains no alcohol or habit-forming drug. Refuse to accept substitutes. No Bond Election On Oct. 27

Mayor Matthews has requested us to state that the election which was called to be held on October 27, for the purpose of determining whether or not the town of Clanton should issue bonds to secure a system of water works and sewerage has, by the decision of the Town Council, been recalled, and postponed for a while. The purpose of recalling the election is to enable the Council to provide, at the same time with the election for bonds, for the election of a commission of three men who are to supervise the drawing up of the papers necessary for the issuance of bonds, should the vote of the people be in favor of the proposition, and to superintend the construction of the water works and sewerage system. It is not yet known when the election will be called again, but it will probably not be a long while off.

Salves Can't Cure Eczema

In regard to skin diseases, medical authorities are now agreed on this:

Don't imprison the disease germs in your skin by the use of greasy salves, and thus encourage them to multiply. A true cure of all eczematous diseases can be brought about only by using the healing agents in the form of a liquid.

WASH THE GERMS OUT.

A simple wash: A compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, and other ingredients as combined in the D.D.D. Prescription. This penetrates to the disease germs and destroys them, then soothes and heals the skin as nothing else has ever done.

A 50 cent bottle will start the cure and give you instant relief.

We have made fast friends of more than one family by recommendating this D.D.D. Prescription to a skin sufferer here and there, and we want you to try it now on our positive pay guarantee. D.D.D. Soap keeps the pores clean; ask us.

This Wonderful Blend Is a Secret

It is entirely different from ordinary coffees. The secret of the wonderful blend was brought from the coffee-growing countries years ago.

Until recently the only place in America where this rarely delicious coffee could be had was at the French Market in New Orleans.

Here the beauty and chivalry of the Old South gathered, here every notable visitor came—and these visitors numbered some of America's most famous names.

The French Market was society's rendezvous. All because of the wonderful coffee served at the quaint old stalls.

But since the establishment of the French Market Mills, and the invention of the new perfectly-sealed can, French Market Coffee in all its purity and aromatic flavor can be had on any private dining table.

There is a great treat in store for those who have not yet enjoyed this delicious and famous French Market Coffee. Try it, and you'll agree there is only one real old French Market Coffee. Roasted by the unique hygienic process in expressly built mills.

Directions—We recommend that you make French Market Coffee in your usual way. If you find it too strong, reduce quantity until strength and flavor are satisfactory. French Market makes more cups of good coffee to the pound than other brands, thereby reducing your coffee bill. (112)

Cows as a Money Standard.

The Chewsures, a race of 7,000 people, in Tiflis, southern Russia, know nothing of the use of money as a medium of exchange. The unit of value among these primitve people is the cow. A horse is valued at three cows and a stallion at six. If a Chewsure becomes enraged and cracks his neighbor's skull, he is obliged to pay 16 cows. If he breaks a bone in his friend's arm or leg, five cows will rehabilitate him in the eyes of society, while a wound in the forehead calls for three cows.

It will be thus seen that a Chewsure gentleman with plenty of cows can have all the fun he wants in fighting.

Truly Horrible.

"Oh, Henry," she said when she had thrown off her wraps and flung herself into a chair, "I'm so mortified."

"What's the matter, dear?"

"I met Mrs. Biggles at the reception, this afternoon, and she seemed so nice that I stood there before the crowd for half an hour and talked to her. When we were leaving her chauffeur drove up in an old four-cylinder car and after she had taken her seat in it she called out right before everybody that she would expect me to call on her soon."

Parisian Street Barbers.

The French capital, like that of China, has its street barbers. In Paris the perambulating tonsorialists carry a little box containing the usual outfit of their calling. Their chief patrons are laboring men.

The street barber of Paris usually places his customer upon the banks of the Seine or in some spot aside from the crowd, covers his knees with a newspaper, and proceeds to work. For only one sou he will shave a man, cut his hair and generally impart to him a more or less smart appearance.

These barbers are said to make quite a respectable sum even at the small fee they charge.

Japanese Greeting.

Nothing is more amusing than to watch two acquaintances saluting in the streets of a Japanese town. As they come in sight of each other they slacken their pace and approach with downcast eyes and averted face, as if neither was worthy of beholding the other; then they bow so as to bring the face on a level with the knees, on which the palms of the hands are pressed.

A succession of hissing sounds is next heard, made by drawing the breath between the closed teeth, interspersed with complimentary phrases uttered with great volubility, each trying to outdo the other.

At last the climax is reached and each endeavors to give precedence to the other. For perhaps a full minute the polite contest continues; then the ceremony abrutly ends, as if the difficulty were capable of none but a brusque solution, and the two pass on hurriedly, with a look of extreme relief.

The Japanese gentleman who has many acquaintances must require an hour to walk the length of a block on a city street.

The Eternal Feminine.

The South African natives in Boerland still preserve their old customs, and one of the most curious is that of carrying off a girl for a wife. The custom is called "ukutwala," and the girl, though not indisposed to accept the man, causes every obstacle to be placed in his way.

The suitor watches his opportunity (after first placing so many head of cattle in the kraal of the girl's father) and eventually carries away the girl by main force.

The heartrending cries of the bride, as she is carried away, are something pitiful—a cry that pierces the heart of a Christian, but his pity subsides when he learns that in native language it means:

"Don't take me, but don't let any one help me, because I want to go!"

Pure Fiction.

"We enjoyed your visit so much."

"Say, Central, I've been waiting 20 minutes."

"My wife and I never had a word with each other."

"I never wore a hat that cost less than $85."

"I've had only one drink today."

"I never put myself out for company."

"We did not have a fly in the house all summer."

"I've got to meet a customer tonight."

"We never have trouble keeping servants."

"I was reared in luxury and refinement."

"When the baby came their happiness was complete."—Smart Set.

CURIOUS CUSTOMS OF INDIA

Dancing Girls Married to Idols Representing Gods, Is One of the Oddities.

Parrots are taught in India to spend a large portion of their time in repeating the names of gods, and such a spokesman brings a good price, especially among business men, who imagine that by owning such a parrot their spiritual treasures are accumulating while they attend to their usual occupations.

Many of the dancing girls in India belonging to the temples are called the wives of the gods. At an early age they are united in wedlock to the images worshiped in the temples. This strange matrimonial connection is formed in compliance with the wishes of the parents, who believe it to be a highly meritorious act to present a beautiful daughter in marriage to a senseless idol.

The only foreigner who ever saw the inside of the great temple of Juggernaut was an English officer, who succeeded in gaining admission by painting and dressing himself like a native.

When the Brahmins discovered that their holy place had been thus defiled they became so enraged that all the English residing at the seation were obliged to flee for their lives.

Suspecting their pursuers to be more desirous of gratifying their avarice than their revenge, they strewed silver money by the way, and while the natives stopped to pick it up they gained time and succeeded in reaching a place of safety.

NOT REALLY HEROIC ACTION

Mr. Snibbles Expelled Burglar All Right, but Had Not Much Credit Coming to Him.

Mr. Snibbles got out of bed and slipped on his shoes.

"This must stop," he muttered irritably to his wife. "I'm going downstairs to teach that young man to keep away from my house in the future."

"John," cried his wife, "stop! Don't go—"

But before she could say more he had slipped out of the door. She heard him steal downstairs to the drawing room; she heard sounds of a struggle and of the breaking of glass; she heard him drag his adversary to the hall and kick him down the front steps. Then when he returned she flung herself upon him and clung to him admiringly.

"What's the matter?" he demanded

"Don't you know?" she answered "That was a burglar!"

"Great Scott!" he gasped, turning pale. "Why didn't you tell me before? I thought it was Ethel's sweetheart."—Harper's Magazine.

DISCONTENT NOT ALL GOOD

True That It Has Its Uses, but There Are Other Things to Be Considered.

It is perhaps true that some writers and teachers have over-emphasized the gospel of contentment with our lot. It is not always well to be contented with our lot. Avancement in every line has been made by people who were discontented with their present opportunities and broke through to something higher. But, even allowing this it is undeniably true that there is a vast amount of unholy and wasteful discontent. We are apt to think pretty constantly how much more and how much better we would do if circumstances were different. While history presents many cases of people who broke away from humble task to force their way to something higher, it is fuller of instances in which a man or woman, by doing with patient faithfulness an insignificant task, has been celled to greater things.

The answer to the problem is the old rule of living by the minute. It is almost never right to leave a task unfinished. This day, this hour, this minute, puts a task into our hands.

"Because of the nail the shoe was lost; because of the shoe the horse was lost; because of the horse the rider was lost; because of the rider the battle was lost." So it was the blacksmith, after all, who lost the battle. If he had done his work well, the cause might have triumphed.—Christian Herald.

Real Things of Life.

Conventional orthodoxies, whether they be of manners, or of ways of life, or of thought, or of religion, or of education, are unimportant. What then remains? Courage, and patience, and simplicity, and kindness, and beauty, and, last of all, ideas remain; and these are the things to lay hold of and to live with.—A. C. Benson.

Flowers Used as Food.

It is not a matter of common knowledge that in a great many countries nearly all the flowers are used as articles of food. We sometimes use nasturtiums in salads, but we would hardly think of growing lilies for the mere purpose of boiling them down to make a dish resembling spinach.

Criminals Dark-Eyed.

Over 75 per cent. of the world's bigamists have had brown eyes. That is an amazing fact. "I can tell a criminal by his eyes," said Vidocq, the famous French detective, and in dozens of cases he stated that his suspicions were first aroused by seeing the eyes of the guilty person. He added that it was a remarkable fact that the majority of criminals, with the one exception of murderers, are dark-eyed.

Good Roads Meeting At Clanton.

Early Wednesday morning people of the near by country and neighboring towns began to arrive. The County Fair, of course was, to some extent the attraction, but the Good Roads Meeting, which had been so librally advertised, was the occasion of the presence of many visitors.

Mr. H. B. Oliver, Dr. H. W. Caffey and Hon. F. A. Gulledge arrived at an early hour, from Verbena, all anxious to attend the meeting which was arranged in order that the people of Chilton county should hear State Highway Engineer Keller's address on the betterment of road conditions.

The train on which Mr. Keller was to come, was like all other trains, due here late.

Mr. Keller telegraphed Judge E. B. Deason that he would arrive about 12 o'clock and the meeting hour would have to be in the afternoon.

The meeting was called to order by Judge E. B. Deason, who made a few remarks as to the speaker and the purposes for which the meeting was called, and introduced Mr. Keller, who in a pains taking and clear address explained the many advantages of good roads. He was especially clear as to the needed improvements on the thoroughfare, that cnonects this county, (Chilton) with Birmingham and Montgomery. He spoke of the benefits to both the farmers and professional men alike, and urged all who were owners of property on the route of the road mentioned to aid, by their influence, and otherwise the improvement of their great necessity.

Mr. Keller, in his remarks, favored road improvement, not only a profitable matter, but, as a great help to farmers and business men generally. The advantages of marketing, the conveniences to school children, the comforts to be derived by church attendendants, etc., all these and more beneficial results were plainly referred to.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

YOU CAN'T EAT APPETITE POOR

Multitudes of people lose their appetite. Simply don't care for anything to eat. The dinner bell has no interest to them. They loathe their breakfast. They may nibble a little of this and a little of that, but they do not care for it.

Lunch has lost all of its charms, although they try to eat something.

Dinner about the same.

There is something positively wrong, of course, but no disease that can be named. Just out of sorts. That is all.

It is in this kind of a condition that Peruna acts very beneficially.

After using Peruna, interest in food is revived. Beginning with a teaspoonful of Peruna before each meal will generally quickly improve the appetite and help the digestion.

Thousands of people can testify to this. Liberated from a slavery that is almost unbearable. The slavery of having no interest in life. All used up. Yet one does not know exactly why. Take Peruna before each meal. Skies will get blue again. Fields will look green once more and life will be pleasant. You will feel that you are good for something and the world is a good place to live in. Peruna will do it. Not as an artificial stimulant. Simply a tonic that stimulates appetite in a natural way.

Those who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.

UNANSWERABLE ARGUMENT

Prominent School Man in Favor of County High School.

r Sir:

or the past year I have n using my efforts and in- nce toward the erection of a nty High School for Chilton ty. That I have succeed- partially, I admit, but feel at it is going to take the hear- y co-oderation of every good itizen in the county to bring it bout. Of course I am going o be misunderstood by some; ut if I bring this matter be- ore them in an intelligent way, here are certain incontrovertible acts that will convince all who esire to be honest and reason- ble.

It is a matter of public record hat the boy who attends school until the age of fourteen years, the age of twenty-five he arns on an average of two dol- ars per day; but if he remains n school until the age of sixteen, t the age of twenty-five he will arn on an average of four dol- ars per day; superior to the irst boy in no way, save the nental training gained by two ears of high school. Starting wo years behind, he overtakes nd surpasses the former by the ime he is twenty-five years of ge. It has been shown that ev- ry day spent in school properly s worth eight dollars. Realiz- ng that the pecuniary side of an ducation is the very least value hat can possibly be placed upon those who make it possible to d two more years to the school fe of the rising generation will ender the greatest service to manity.

Today ninety-seven per cent f America's children leave chool with only a common chool education. Of those only ne in every nine thousand gets o be one of the ten thousand nen who are the actual leaders n the different walks of life. Of hose who go through high school one out of every four hun- red attains leadership. Four additional years spent in college uring this plastic period of the mind increases one's chances at eadership twenty-two fold, and one out of every forty becomes e of the leaders.

From the foregoing statements will be seen that America, is awing her recruits for the ks of leadership, from three cent of her population. y-seven per cent of her s are denied an opportunity t leadership because they are sent to the common schools only. The other three per cent, hav- ing no better blood coursing through their veins, go to high school or college and thereby gain a monoply on the positions of distinction later in life. We Americans dote on equality of opportunity. Then let us make if possible by placing a high school education within easy reach of every aspiring boy; let ns disparage and break down the great difference between the boy whose parents have means aud the boy whose parents have not, whereby the former has two hundred and twenty times the chances of the latter at dis- nction and leadership.

But back to Chilton county. Comer's administration enacted a law whereby a system of high schools may be established in each county, but the law requir- ed that the community in each county securing such a school should raise a minimum of five thousand dollars with which to erect suitable buildings. When such a community had met those conditions the county in which the school was located should re- ceive from the State Treasury the sum of two thousand dollars for the maintenance of said school. Later it was decided by the State High School Commis- sion that five thousand dollars was not sufficient for the erec- tion of a suitable building: and by the acts of that commission it has become customary to re- quire a building costing on an average of twelve thousand dol- lars. The preseut administra- tion increased the amount paid the schools from two thousand to three thousand per year, so it is an evident fact that the tax payers of Chilton county have already lost thirteen thousand dollars of their hard-earned tax money which should have come back for the support of their couuty school. This should not be the case. A condition like this is unjust, and upon each citizen rests a part of the respon- sibility for changing the situa- tion.

This school will place in easy reach a standard high school to which the boys of Chilton coun- ty could go without tuition. Fifty-five of the sixty-seven counties of the state have availed themselves of such a school. Are not the Chilton county boys as deserving as the boys of other counties? Is not her citizenship as enterprising and progressive as that of other counties? We think so, what say you?

Twelve thousand dollars is no small sum, and being unable to find any community in the coun- ty disposed toward raising that amount, we have asked the coun- ty Commissioners to contribute one third the amount to ANY COMMUNITY in the county willing to raise the other eight thousand dollars. The justice of this is easily seen. It will be a county school controled by the Superintendent and the County Board of Education, duly elected by the people of the county. It is a means of bringing back to the county each year three thousand dollars of the peoples tax money. It is a county insti tution that opens its doors and makes a special appeal to ev- ery boy in the county to come up higher. It is an institution that addresses itself to the poor, and enables them to demand of those who possess means to come to their assistance. Are you with us and the home boy, or, are you one that believes in paying your tax money into the one hundred and sixty-five thous- and dollar fund to support the fifty-five schools in other coun- ties while your own children at home go neglected? Are you with us and the county commis- sioners in our efforts to benefit the poor boy at home before pay- ing to support the poor poy of other counties?

Please reply to us and let us know how you stand, and give your reason for such a stand. Don't get it into your head and go off on a tangent that the coun- ty commissioners desired to build up a high school for Clan- ton at the expense of the other communities in the county. The school has not even been located. Every community has an equal opportunity. The commmis- sioners only wanted to protect the tax payers of the county.

Wishing for Chilton county the things that justly belong to her, I am,

Yours truly,

DIDN'T APPEAL TO SENATOR

Western Statesman Had Wrong Im- pression as to Recipient of Pro- posed Wedding Present.

Soon after the convening of a new session of congress the announcement was made of the approaching mar- riage of Anson G. McCook, who was then secretary of the senate. A sub- scription was immediately started among the senators for the purchase of a wedding present. Two or three prominent senators volunteered to col- lect the money. Senator X, one of the richest men in the senate at that time, was one of these.

Seeing a new western senator who had not yet been approached on the subject, Senator X went to him and said:

"Senator Slocum, I want you to give me $25."

"What for?" demanded the new member.

"For McCook's wedding present," explained Senator X.

"I'll see you about it tomorrow," answered Slocum, with a scowl.

"All right," said Senator X, as he walked away, "but don't forget it."

Senator Slocum watched him until he was out of hearing, and then, turn- ing to his colleague remarked, with warmth:

"Well, I've heard of cheeky things in my life, but that man beats all! What do you think? He just asked me to give him $25 to buy a wedding present for his cook!"

Novel Way of Advertising.

The advertising manager of a lead- ing French business firm has evolved an ingenious plan for evading the pro- hibitive taxes imposed by the law of July 12, 1912, on unsightly billboards disfiguring the countryside. For the long, ugly advertisement boards flank- ing the railway, which formerly were a blot on the garden city of Paris and its suburbs, a Juvisy firm has now substituted a large bed of flowers in a field adjoining the Orleans line, the design representing a yellow cow, which is the trademark of the arti- cle in which the firm trades. There- by it not only circumvents the law, but also provides a more effective ad- vertisement than that offered by the former billboards. The plan has proved so satisfactory, that it is ex- pected that railways in the neighbor- hood of large French towns will be beautified by similar floral parterres, designed to advertise articles of com- merce.

Notice of Petition to Sell Lands to Divide.

The State of Alabama, Chilton County } Probate Court Oct. 15, 1913

In the matter of the estate of Samuel Adams, deceased.

To the Sheriff of said County:

Whereas, S. A. Stewart, joint owner of the estate of Samuel Adams, deceased, has filed her petition in said court for a sale of the lands described therein, belonging to said estate, for division, upon the ground that the same cannot be equitably divided among the heirs, and the 17 day of November, 1913 has been appointed for the hearing of said petition.

You are therefore, hereby commanded to cite William M. Adams, Sallie Stewart Duncan, Mattie Ivea Racine, Samuel Adams Duncan and F. A. Gulledge to appear before the said court on said day to contest said petition if they think proper.

Witness my hand this 15 day of Oct., 1913.

Avoid Sedative Cough Medicines.

If you want to contribute directly to the occurrence of cabillary bronchitis and pneumonia use cough medicines that contain codine, morphine, heroin and other sedatives when you have a cough or cold. An expectorant like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is what is needed. That cleans out the culture beds or breeding places for the germs of pneumonia and other germ diseases. That is why pneumonoia never results from a cold when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It has a world wide reputation for its cures. It contains no morphine or other sedative. PRAISES VIRTUE OF SILENCE

Habit of Carrying Domestic Troubles to Outsiders is Deplored by Writer.

One pretty sensible girl, who truly loved her young husband, who as truly loved her, came near wrecking their happiness through her uncontrolled tongue. She had always been in the habit, and a very proper one it is, of telling her mother everything in her girlhood.

Now that she was a married woman, she ought to have discriminated between what concerned her husband and what concerned herself alone. She had no business to tell her mother of confidences which passed between him and herself, and he had no idea that she would not appreciate this fact until she happened to relate "what mother said when I told her thus and so."

"Why, you didn't tell your mother that!" he cried. His tongue angered her and she retorted in a sudden flame: "Indeed, I did. I shall always tell my mother exactly what I please." "Very well," he commented coldly. "I shall understand now just how far I can trust you." Months and many heartburnings were required before this breach was healed.

A tender and petted girl is altogether too fond of fleeing for consolation to mother or sister, when some fancied slight has been offered her by the adored one, who has recently sworn a thousand times that he will think of her comfort and happiness and that only, "till the sands of the desert grow cold." And then he goes off some morning and forgets to kiss her goodby; or he comes home at night without the egg-beater that he solomnly promised to get. And perhaps a foolish mother or sister says he is a brute—and you can easily see what a train of evils might follow in the wake of this tiny little train of circumstances.

Don't tell anybody of your domestic troubles, big or little. They grow in the telling. The first lesson that the wise wife should learn is to hold her tongue.—Leslie's Weekly.

SAID BY WITS OF THE PAST

Memoirs of London Merchant Told of Many Good Quips He Had Heard.

The late John Richard Clayton of the firm of Clayton & Bell, glass painter of London England, had some good stories of his experiences with the pre-Raphaelite brethren.

He was once sought out by the painters. He called on Rosetti in his studio and listened to the brilliant diatribes of the young men against whom they called the sloshiness of modern painting. Sloshy was the term they applied to all the art of that day, and they did not spare Sir "Sloshua" Reynolds himself. Clayton was fond of telling how he noticed that the studio was hung all round with photagraphs of the works of the great masters; but he was astonished to see that they were all either on their sides or upside down. After a pleasant talk he ventured to inquire the reason of the strange hanging. Rossetti affected to be puzzled at Clayton's discovery.

"Why," he added, "aren't they right?" Then Rosetti shouted: 'Here, Hunt, Millais, here's a fellow who knows the way these sloshy things should be hung."

The motifs occasionally demanded of him which he could not refuse made him wince, and he smiled grimly once when a member of the Arts club, of which he was one of the oldest and most esteemed members, declared that "if you accept that kind of order the firm of Clayton & Bell will be known as Satan & Hell!"

Table Manners of the Past.

Modern table manners compare favorably with those of the past. Mrs. Hannah Woolley, author of "The Gentlewoman's Companion," the standard seventeenth century book on etiquette, found it necessary thus to warn her readers: "Gentlemen, discover not by any ravenous gesture your angry appetite, nor fix your eyes too greedily on the meat before you, as if you would devour more that way than your throat would swallow. . . . in carving avoid clapping your fingers in your mouth and licking them after you have burnt them. Close your lips when you eat, and do not smack like a pig. Fill not your mouth so full that your cheeks shall swell like a pair of Scotch bagpipes. It is very uncomely to drink so large a draft that your breath is almost gone, and you are forced to blow strongly to recover yourself."

Jealous Minister.

"Why did you and that young minister quarrel?" asked the friend.

"He was nice enough in many ways, but he was so horribly jealous and unfair," said the fair damsel to whom the young divine had been paying serious attention.

"Jealous, perhaps—and naturally," smiled the friend. "But unfair?"

"Yes. Every time I would make an engagement for a moonlight walk or an afternoon stroll with some other man he would pray for rain."—The Pathfinder.

Would Be Worth Seeing.

A young woman from the east was conversing with a Kentuckian about tobacco and tobacco raising. She was very pretty and a good conversationalist, and the young man from Kentucky was vastly interested in her until she gave him a sudden shock by announcing:

"I should love to see a tobacco field; especially when it is just plugging out."—National Food Magazine.

WOULD SERVE ITS PURPOSE

Thoughtful Young Wife Had Reason for Economy in Buying Hubby's Birthday Present.

An elderly millionaire, who had married a beautiful young woman was presented on his birthday with a very handsome watch chain by her.

He was delighted with the gift and beamed upon his charming young wife. "It is perfect," he agreed, "so massive, yet in excellent taste."

"I felt sure you would like it," she replied, "and it was so inexpensive, too. I only paid twelve dollars for it."

"Only twelve dollars!" replied the millionaire in surprise. "Twelve dollars for this solid gold chain?"

"Oh, of course, it isn't solid gold, dear," she replied, "you could never get solid gold for that price. It is gold filled."

The husband stroked his chin reflectively as he inquired: "Why this sudden streak of economy? Don't you think I can afford a solid gold chain?"

"To be sure you can," she assented "but this one is guaranteed for ten years, and—and—"

"Well?" impatiently interrupted the millionaire.

"Well, dear," she continued, with a slight heightening of color, "as that is as long as you are likely to live, I thought it would be foolish extravagance to pay more."

Why Flowers Are Colored.

Of the many substances that are combined to make a flower, what is the particular one to which is due the red, blue or yellow color. Why, for example, are gentians blue and roses red, and why has no one ever seen a red gentian or a blue rose?

The chemist can tell us. Taking the plants that produce really blue—not violet—flowers, he considers which of their constituents is peculiar to them. True blue exists in veronicas, salvias, verbenas, basil, solanum, penstemon, nemophila, convolvulus, borage, hound's tongue and in all the orders allied to the Gentiancae and Compositae, but never in lupins, vetches, peas, geraniums, hollyhocks, primulas, roses, balsams, flax, etc.

All the blue producing plants just named have a tannin in them which does not exist in the others. This is called caffe-tannin. It is found in coffee, but not in tea. Tea contains another form of tanning which is the same as that which makes camellias red.

Wonderful Blood Remedy That Works in the Tissu

The Very Latest Theory About How and Why Blood is Disordered.

S. S. S. Means Pure Blood Which Insures Long Life and Health.

The great experts in Chemistry and Physiology now declare what has all along been contended by the Swift Laboratory that the germs of blood disorders find lodgment in the interstices of the tissues.

And herein is where S. S. S. goes to work rapidly, effectively and with wonderfully noticeable results.

This famous blood purifier contains medicinal components just as vital and essential to healthy blood as the nutritive elements of wheat, roast beef, and fats and the sugars that make up our daily ration.

As a matter or fact there is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to the healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. That is why it regenerates the blood supply; why it has such a tremendous influence in overcoming eczema, rash, pimples, and all skin afflictions.

And in regenerating the tissues S has a rapid and positive antidotal upon all those irritating influences cause rheumatism, sore throat, eyes, loss of weight, thin pale cheek that weariness of muscle and nerv is generally experienced, by all suf with poisoned blood.

Too Innocent for Pa.

The young man who thought he knew how to manage old men told the girl whose father he had just interviewed on a matrimonial topic that he believed everything would be all right.

"We took to one another at once," he said. "He even went so far as to borrow $10 from me. Surely, he can't refuse to let you marry me after that."

"Don't be too sure," she said. "You don't know pa."

The next day he found that he did not, indeed, know pa.

"You made a mess of it with that $10," the girl told him. "Pa says that you are too easy, and that I had better look for somebody more worldly minded."

Elmore Releases Maplesville Men

Government Fails to Establish Charge of Secreting Portion of Bankrupt Stock.

D. A. Deason, Ralph Calloway and J. T. Lawrence, Maplesville citizens, charged with secreting property of a bankrupt estate who were given a preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner John A. Elmore at Montgomery Saturday have been released on an order of the commissioner, who holds no offense was commited.

The men were arrested at Maplesville, charged with having removed goods from the bankrupt store of Lawrence after a receiver had been appointed by the Government. Their contentions were that they entered the store the afternoon before the receiver took charge of the stock and not after it was under a Federal lock.

The Expert Eye Specialist is in Clanton.

If you have defects in vision, reading or in seeing at a distance; if nature has placed on your vision a defect, I will overcome it. Hundreds of ladies come to me every year saying "My vision is perfect, but I have such violent headaches." Yes I find hypermetropia has set up. The eyeball has become too small, and the light falls down before it gets back to the retina of the eye, causing severe pain. This is a lack of cylinderical power of the eye, where lack of vigor or advanced age brings on lack of accommodation or presbyopia, which requires spherical power to a lens. If you compouud hepermetropia I can cover the defects by adding spherical and cylinderical power in the same lens by a process of grinding. If your eyes are astigmatised I will perfect the vision. I have my office in the store of the VanDerveer Drug Company. Remember my office hours are promptly at from 11 o clock A. till 12. and from 1:30 P. M till 2:30. At these hours I will make examination of the eyes free of charge. I will remain here till Monday evening.

BAD VISION RESTORED TO PERFECT VISION

Clanton, Ala., Oct. 28, 1913.

I have been troubled for years with poor eye sight, and of late have been so bad that I have been compelled to stop school. I called on Dr. Carey, the eye specialist now stopping at the VanDerveer Drug Company, and he at once told me that my eyes had become in a myopic condition. He ground a lens for me which at once placed my vision in perfect condition and my eyes are at perfect rest and ease. Respectfully, Pickpockets At County Fair.

Tom Smith lost Nice Sum to Light handed Crook.

On last Saturday night at the Chilton County Fair Mr. Tom Smith of Mountain Creek was a victim of Pickpockets. Mr. Smith was taking in the sights and his attention was drawn to some amusement, when the crook observed that it was a chance for him to make a haul. Mr. Smith's pocket was cut out and his purse containing $58.00 was taken, unknown to him at the time of the theft. On the afternoon he had sold a bale of cotton and had the whole amount received for it in his pocket at the time he was robbed. Mr. Smith and a deputy sheriff shearched all night Saturday night for the suspects, but no trace of them could be found.

Thorsby Items

The county Fair was well attended by the Thorsby people: all seem much pleased with the display of the various departments.

Mr. Clarence Bice who has bedn in bad health for six weeks is now sitting up. His many friends hope to see him on the street soon.

We are glad to report that both the high Schools of our town are progressing nicely. Students in both schools seem much pleased with the progress that is being made.

Rev. E. W. Butler preached at the Congretational Church last Sunday morning.

We are sorry to learn that Mr. Hicks one of our esteemed merchants is to move to Lomax shortly. Halifax.

FOR SALE OR TRADE

I have a good eleven room two-story house situated on a very desirable lot on Fifth Street between Second and Third Avenue, and only Forty yards from the Court House, which I will sell or trade for a good farm within two miles of town. On the lot is also a first class barn. A good well and pump also.

Apply to G. O. Foshee.

Mr. Culp Sends Large Potato

Mr. B. J. Sessions brought to our office last Saturday the largest potato that has been seen here this season. The potato was raised by Mr. Grady Culp who lives on Route 7. It was fourteen inches long and seventeen inches measured its smallest circumference; weight 7 pounds. It was of the genuine old Dooley variety.

Death of an An Old Veteran

Isaac N. Braezeal died at the Soldiers Home near Mountain Creek on Friday morning. The deceased was formealy a resident of Mobile, where the body was sent for burial.

New Stores and Better Business

Two new stores have opened at Mountain Creek lately, one in the Post Office Building and the other at the old Miles stand.

There is also a new firm of Dentists, Drs. Coburn and Whaley. They pull the teeth and do other dental work while you wait.

Cotton Picking Almost Over.

Most of the cotton fields in the neighborhood of Mountain Creek are almost free of cotton The recent cold weather has stopped growth and the farmers are hurring through with their work of picking in order to avail themselves of the good prices.

Clanton High School Notes

MR. WYATT'S ADVENTURE IN YELLOWSTONE PARK.

I was up early to get to feeding the animals, but didn't know how to begin. I went to the manager to find out how to feed them, and being duly informed, set to work. First I lighted my cigar and went to secure some hay for the big elephant. As he was eating I dropped my cigar into the hay. I knew elephants didn't like tobacco, so I thought it about time I was leaving. The elephant ate the hay till at last he came to the cigar I had dropped. He chewed it up and immediately started after me roaring and growling in a rage of furious madness. I ran as fast as I could, the elephant in close pursuit. I had barely gotten to the police station when he was just ready to deal me an everlasting swipe. The manager decided that I didn't have enough sense to feed animals and said I would have to serve my sentence out in some other way. Next week I will write obout "My New Job."

There was a girl on the school grounds the other day crying and saying these words:

"Has anybody here seen Dockie?
His hair is white, his eyes are blue,
And 12 plus 1 is the nmuber of his shoe."

Mr. Oliver Mullins is certainly a bad, bad boy, and Joe is a regular "cat." But Horace Popwell is a gentleman, says Mr.———. It was rll caused by a major teasing a minor.

Mr. Omar Reynolds and Edgar Teel got into a fight the other day. Somehow since that time Omar has been eating his meals off the mantle and sleeping on his face.

The Fair is now going on at school. All the kids have balls, balloons, jumping jacks, cracker jacks, etc. Mr. Pickens also has a nice collection of such things which he took faom pupils playing with them in school.

We had some time last Friday; there was not any school.

COURT PROCEEDINGS.

Miss Bessie Davis, accused of slapping Grace Williams, found guilty and punished.

Jean Wyatt, charged with beating Oscar Jones out of his girl, nol prossed.

Miss Beverly Hester charged with pulling Dorcas Maddox's hair, case put off, because Dorcus was not able to appear in court.

Miss Izora Callen came near getting face slapped off the other day. As she was riding the merry go-round her hat flew off, and when she grabbed at it she struck her own self a fearful blow in the face.

"See the hairy chickens!" These were the words that attracted Annie Gragg's and Izora Callen's attention at the Fair grounds last week. They paid their nickle and walked in. Dock came along and walked in also. He saw Annie and Izora and exclaimed: "Those are the biggest chickens I ever saw!" When next seen Dock was emerging fram the tent with a black eye.

Felton Mullins went to the Fair I reckon. Yes, he went to the Fair. Dinner time came, and as he was a bit hungry he walked into the Ladies' department where all those nice cakes and candias were, and proceeded to help himself to all those good things.

FOR SALE—I have not yet sold my "348." I will auction it off in front of tha schoolhouse next Monday.

Dorcas Maddox.

Mr. Oliver on High School

Verbena, Ala., Oct. 27, 1913

Editor Union-Banner:—Please grant me space for short reply to Professor Pickens' "unanswerable argument" in your last issue.

The Professor is rather severe on those who are not convinced by his argument that it is right to make the tax payers of the whole County give the town of Clanton $4000.00 to help build a school house. Quite a number after reading carefully what the Professor has to say are unconvinced, and hence the Professor will say they have no "desire to be honest and reasonable."

That portion of Prof. Pickens letter which he says is of "public record" is nearly word for word the language used by Mr. Hobson in a speech made only a few days ago. I trust it was not made by Prof. Pickens at least, to "cloud the issue." It has no place in arguing this question, for the people throughout this county need no scarry tales to get them interested in the cause of education.

The question is, shall the Commissioners require the tax payers of the county to pay $4000.00 toward a High School building in the town of Clanton?

To those who have seen the indifference shown by prosperous business men of Clanton in the cause of substantial highways through our county and elsewhere in the county, this unusual demand is no surprise.

I grant you that "Comer's administration enacted laws etc." in reference to High Schools for one community in each county. We all know about that, and many of us remember that Mr. Comer would not let any community in this county have the school because it could not raise as much as he demanded for the building. The law according to statements made by Gov. Comer and Col. (now Judge) Brandon in their various speeches made in the county, says "$5000.00 (minimum) a two acre lot in a healthy, moral community." More than one community in this county met that requirement and still for all, these years we have been deprived of the school. Then who is to blame?

If Clanton wants the High School let her apply to those within a radius of five miles of the Court House for contributions. They are the beneficiaries—those outside are not.

The Professor would have the Commissioners contribute "to any community in the county." Don't "muddy the water," the people understand it.

If the Commissioners should make the tax payers of the county pay to Clanton or any other beat in the county any sum, then I beg that they give a similiar amount to each of the remaining beats in the county for school purposes.

Yours truly,
H. B. Oliver.

Married in Montgomery

Mr. C. B. Norrell and Mrs. Mamie Crum were married in Montgomery on Oct. 19. Mr. Norrell is a former Chilton boy and is well known here. His friends will learn of his marriage with interest, and wish for him and his bride much happiness and prosperity through life.

HIGHWAY COMMITTEE HOLDS A MEETING

Publicity Committees are Appointed to Promote the Enterprise.

At an interesting meeting of the executive committee of the Birmingham to Montgomery Highway Association held in the office of W. S. Keller, the State Highway Engineer, in Montgomery Tuesday much important work was done toward the strengthening of the Association. A constitution and by-laws were adopted, and calls were issued to all the counties along the route of the highway for aid in building the model road. All the members of the committee were present except Judge Dan A. Green of Birmingham. W. S. Keller presided as chairman, and B. M. Roberts, permanent Secretaay for the Association, acted as secretary for the committee.

A publicity committee was appointed for each county affected by the proposed highway. The members of the committee from Chilton are C. R. Lamar and W. M. Wyatt.

It is intended to have rousing meetings of the Association at Clanton on Nov. 10. Definite work on the road has already begun, and it is believed that much good will soon be accomplished toward the completion of the highway.

Exchange Plan For Text Books.

People generally should become acquainted with the very liberal rates of exchange allowed by the various textbook companies. It should be understood that in purchasing a new book, any book already in use of equal or lower grade may be offered in exchange.

The plan includes promotonal exchange and exchange of readopted books. Any old book used in Alabama during the past five years in grades one to seven may be exchanged in part payment for a new book of same kind, if readopted, or of same grade if newly adopted or for a higher grade book on the same subject (promotional exchange). These exchange arrangements will extend till the last day of November 1914.

The prices are guaranteed and the State Superintendent will see that the prices are maintained should there be any disposition to depart from the contract.

Bulletin 38 recently published by the Department of Education, Montgomery, gives prices of each book and also shows the legal allowance on each old book offered in exchange. This price list may be had on request made to the State Department of Education.

MR. HORN WRITES REGARDING CHILTON COUNTY FAIR

Thorsby, Ala., Oct. 27, 1913

Editor Union-Banner:--Please allow me to say a few things through your paper to the people of our good County. It was my privilege to be in attendance at the County Fair Friday, of last week. I wish to commend the management for the splendid exhibits in most all departments, especially the agricultural and the ladies fancy work, culinary and etc. Stock was very good but could possibly been better. This all goes to show that we, as a county are progressing very nicely along all these lines, and I, as a citizen am proud to see so much interest being taken in this direction. But I was surprised and shocked at some other exhibits which I saw there, and believe it is a shame as well as a stain on our good county to allow such things. What I refer to is the more than half dozen gaming or gambling devices which were being operated in full blast, open to all, old and young alike. Men were betting and losing their hard earned dollars almost as fast as they could place them on the tables. Some quite large amounts, some smaller amounts, amounting in the aggregate to hundreds of dollars, which was worse than throwing it away for the persons who bet were degraded and poluted, besides taking the money out of the county, to be used to help support a lazy and crooked gentility. This money was mostly won by these smooth-tonged crooks from people who needed it to either pay their honest debts or for the support of their families, who no doubt will have to suffer for the necessaries of life because their fathers and husbands were thus cheated out of their money.

Gentlemen of the Fair management, cannot we have a Fair and not have such things to debauch and demoralize our citizenship? I believe we can, and I would like to ask all who believe it is wrong to allow such things, use every opportunity to keep the minds of the Fair management brightened up on this subject, and by another year see if we cannot have a Fair that we can all feel safe in taking our wives, daughters and sweethearts too, and enjoy a nice social and profitable time together; learning to know each other better, and thus feel a closer and more sacred tie of brotherhood. Thus having met together for a few days on a common plane, we can go home and feel that we have been made better by our having come in touch with each other. I am not writing this to sincure or critisize the Fair management, but to call their attention to others as well as myself, believe to be a great stain upon our good name, and with the hope that our Fairs in the future will be freed from such things.

With love to all and malice to none, I stand ready at all times to lend a helping hand toward the uplift of the people of our good county to help make her one of the very best in our fair state in every respect.

Respectfully,
A. K. Horn.

Incurable Ailment.

Death of Mr. Jas. A. Dudley

Former Clanton Citizen Passes Away in Montgomery

The people of Clanton were surprised to learn of the sudden death of Mr. James A. Dudley at his home in Montgomery on Monday night. Mr. Dudley was a former citizen of Clanton, and had a large number of friends and acquaintances here.

He was 72 years old and served in the Confederate army. At one time he was a penitentiary warden in the service of the State.

He is survived by his wife and five sons, Thornton B. and Thos. H. Dudley of Montgomery, Felix O. and Jas. A. Dudley of Clanton, and Martin Dudley of Greenwood, Miss.

The body was brought to Clanton Wednesday morning and interred in the Clanton cemetery Wednesday afternoon.

Last spring I offered to students of Chilton County schools a small prize for the solution of a problem in arithmetic. So much interest was shown in the problem that I have decided to try it again with another problem. I will give One Dollar to the pupil of any Chilton County school who first returns to me a correct solution of the following problem provided the solution reaches me by Nov. 10 1913. If no pupil returns a correct answer I will pay the Dollar to the first public school teacher who returns a correct solution. If no teacher wins the prize any resident of the County may enter the contest. Each contestant will please give his address and state that he worked the problem without assistance. If he is a pupil he will please give his age, the name of his school and its teacher. E. W. Butler.

The Problem. A man walking at the rate of a mile in 16 minuets along side a double track street railway line, on which cars are running each way at a uniform rate of speed, and at regular intervals meets a car once every 2 3-4 minutes and and is passed by a car once every 4 3-4 minutes, how fast are the cars running?

In Bavaria and some other parts of Europe the Monday before Lent was at one time known as Blue Monday. The churches were decorated with blue, and the day was kept as a holiday by classes whose ordinary avocation required them to labor on Sunday. As this led to violent disturbances the custom was legally abolished.

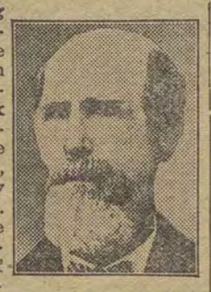
A CLERGYMAN'S STORY

Came Near Losing His Life--How He Escaped



REV. G. W. ROBERTS, R. R. 2, Box 27, Hartsell, Ala.

The following letter was received by The Peruna Co., from Rev. G. W. Roberts, R. R. 2, Box 27, Hartsell, Alabama, under date of April 2, 1904, which is exactly nine years ago. He says: "I take pleasure in informing you of what your Peruna has done for me after three years of suffering. I had tried the treatments of several doctors, also home remedies, but they failed and all hope had gone. My friends, like myself, thought I was in the last stages of consumption.

"My daughter brought me a bottle of Peruna and plead with me to try it. I had got so weak I had lost my voice, and I thought it no use. That was in May, 1902. I began to take it, according to directions. I wrote to you, and you gave me your kind advice.

"I soon felt better, my cough began to give way, and the expectoration lessened. I have taken fourteen bottles. I feel well, eat hearty, sleep soundly, weigh as much as I ever did, do considerable work on my farm, and attend to my other business. My friends seem astonished at my recovery.

"I wish to thank you for your kind advice and the books you have sent me. I shall ever praise your medicine and hope that you may enjoy a long life."

It will be observed that Rev. Roberts waited two years after he began to use Peruna, before he wrote the above letter to The Peruna Co. So that his apparent recovery could not possibly have been temporary relief.

In a later letter to The Peruna Co., dated September 22, 1906, Rev. Roberts says: "I am a great friend of Peruna. By the use of Dr. Hartman's advice I am here to-day, able to be with my family and attend to my business."

We quote from another letter, dated December 10, 1906: "I praise Peruna to all the sick. The people know my case, and they praise it also."

In a letter dated November 22, 1909, we quote Rev. Roberts: "Peruna gave me back my life ten years ago. All my acquaintances know that. I am certainly thankful to you for your kindness."

In a later letter, dated January 13, 1910, he says: "I shall ever in the future, as in the past, be ready to speak in praise of Peruna to all sufferers. I believe my miraculous cure has been the means of many others being cured in this county."

From a letter of September 5, 1911, we quote a few words: "I am still among the living. As to Peruna, I do not feel that I have words to express the faith I have in its merits. I feel that Peruna has been the means, through the kind providence of God, of prolonging my life for more than ten years."

We quote a still later letter, October 31, 1912. He says: "I took a severe cold three weeks ago. I at once sent for Peruna. Have been taking it two weeks. I am now better. I consider that Peruna has carried me over a dozen years of life. I always stand ready to answer any question in reference to Peruna."

We quote from his last letter, dated January 2, 1913: "Dear Friends: I wish this bright New Years to express my thanks to you for your kindness. Trusting that you may have a successful and happy year, and that your medicine may prove a blessing to many as it has to me, I am yours as ever, G. W. Roberts, Hartsell, Alabama, R. F. D. 2, Box 27."

It is not necessary for us to add any words to this story. The eloquence and pathos of these letters are more convincing than arguments or affidavits. Who can doubt the clergyman's story? Who can doubt that Peruna saved his life?

Every home should be provided with the last edition of the "Ills of Life," sent free by the Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio.

French Market Coffee!

In the coffee growing countries, good coffee, roasted like French Market Coffee, is regarded as a necessity—a healthful stimulant to aid digestion. Hot climates create a desire for stimulants, and the one great healthful, stimulating drink is coffee—not the ordinary roasts of coffee, but the rich roasts which contain no heavy oils and though superbly stimulating, will not irritate the most tender stomach.

You will find coffee like French Market Coffee served in Paris, Vienna, Rio de Janerio, Bogota and Mexico, but in none of these cities will you find coffee like the ordinary American roasts.

Think what it means to be able to secure the genuine French Market Coffee at your grocer's.

Avoid Sedative Cough Medicines.

If you want to contribute directly to the occurrence of cabillary bronchitis and pneumonia use cough medicines that contain codine, morphine, heroin and other sedatives when you have a cough or cold. An expectorant like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is what is needed. That cleans out the culture beds or breeding places for the germs of pneumonia and other germ diseases. That is why pneumonoia never results from a cold when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It has a world wide reputation for its cures. It contains no morphine or other sedative. Free Springs

Editor Union-Banner:—I will try to give you a few dots from Free Springs this week. The neighbors are all in very good health, and are all busy gathering crops. Corn and cotton are both short on account of the dry summer. Sweet potatoes are good Not many peas made. There are some very fine rye patches. The rye will be fine for our milk cows in winter, and do you know, I think a good milk cow is next to a good family horse, and should have the best of care. I do my own milking and I cannot bear to see my cows mistreated in any way, because I just love them all.

Mrs. Eva Brown and two sons Linton and Zamie, have moved back from Birmingham to their old home.

We have no school at Free Springs for this winter, so I guess we will have to send our boys to Miss Wilson at Union church, as she is our favorite teacher.

Sunday was a beautiful day and we went to church and heard a splendid sermon by Brother Phares. He took his discourse from 6th Chapter Mark, and unbelief was his theme. He showed us many things in a scripture light that we should profit by.

Guess this will do for this time.

Mr. Bice on Tariff Bill

Thorsby, Ala., Oct. 28th, 1913

I have been seeing and reading a great deal of what the daily Democrat papers say about the Underwood Tariff, and the great jollification when President Wilson signed it. I want to say with all honesty that I believe when President Wilson signed the tariff bill that the Democrats say so much about, that the President signed the death warrant politically of himself and the democratic party. It seems to me that any wise thinking man could see and know that cheap living means cheap produce and cheay goods; which means cheap labor; and cheap labor means hard times. If things are cheap and no money to buy it with, we are no better off and not so well off as all would be if goods of every kind was high and labor high. High labor would mean plenty of money in circulation, and good times would be the result.

Yours respectfully,

I. BICE.

Gets Right Twist On Rheumatism

Makes Short Work of Cleaning Out Your Entire System—Aches and Pains Go Fast.

In S. S. S. You Get a Twist on Rheumatism That Settles It.

Many a rheumatic sufferer has been to the drug store for a bottle of S. S. S. and been handed something claimed to be "Just as good." Truly, to ask for bread and be given a stone is still in practice. If you are troubled with rheumatism in any form be sure to use S. S. S. and note its wonderful influence.

S. S. S. has the peculiar action of soaking through the intestines directly into the blood. In five minutes its influence is at work in every artery, vein and tiny capillary. Every membrane, every organ of the body, every emunctory becomes in effect a filter to strain the blood of impurities. The stimulating properties of S. S. S. compel the skin, liver, bowels, kidneys, bladder to all work to the one end of casting out every irritating, every pain-inflicting atom of poison; it dislodges by irrigation all accumulations in the joints, causes acid accretions to disolve, renders them neutral and scatters those peculi formations in the nerve centers th cause such mystifying and often baffli rheumatic pains.

And best of all this remarkable reme is welcome to the weakest stomach. you have drugged yourself until yo stomach is nearly paralyzed, you will astonished to find that S. S. S. gives sensation but goes right to work. This because it is a pure vegetable infusion, taken naturally into your blood just pure air is inhaled naturally into yo lungs.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. today, and a for S. S. S.

You may depend upon it that the sto that sells you what you ask for is a goo place to trade. Write to the Swi Specific Co., 204 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, G for their Book on Rheumatism.

Circus Coming.

Many Comic Sights and Ludicrous Novelties for the Children.

This comedy section with the great Sun Brothers' Shows this season is an all embracing feature. There is a score or more of funny men, that are notable for their novel ideas and entirely refined methods.

They are leadors of their class, presenting new, original comic entrees, ludicrous situations, humorous climaxes and button burstsng proclivities. Among the names of this bunch of fun makers will be found the great American clown, "Silvers" La Belle; the Yankee character actor, Charles La Belle; James Duval, original arenic "copper"; Rube Walters, funny ruralite; the Garncinetti Brothers, Italian comiques; Bob Rozelle, just plain clown; the Brown Brothers English funny folks; Master Harrison, the "smallest clown alive"; Miss Gloria Dutton, original lady clown; Sam Jay Rice, Irish funster; Billy Hogan, the Hippodrome clown, and and assisting company of clever artists, forming in all an assemblage of famous clowns, all of infinite jest and merriment.,

The Sun Brothers' performances for this, their twenty-second annual tour, is the greatest ever handled by this well known firm of amusement managers.

The equestrians; the acrobrats; the big Japanese troup; the blue ribboned cake-walking and "turkey-trotting" horses; the sensational lady aerialists; the physical culture men and women; the marvelous trained elephants and lions; these are all clssy features and seldom to be seen with an exhibition in this section.

The show is slated to pitch its tents at Clanton Nov. 20th.

SOUL WINNERS CONFERENCE.

On the 8th of this month a soul winners conference will commence at Marbury, and the meetings are to continue till the 12th. This is a non-denominational effort to further advance the Sunday schools and churches all over Alabama. A number of the best church and Sunday workers in the State will be present, to discuss ways and means that will have a tendency to improve conditions and win other souls to Christianity.

Everybody is invited to come for one day at least, if you cannot arrange to attend the whole session.

REWARD

A suitable reward will be paid by the undersigned, for information leading to the recovery of a pointer dog answering to the name of "Cap" which strayed or was stolen from Clanton one week ago. Discription, large white dog with liver colored head and large liver colored spot on top of lower back.

"MY NEW JOB."

As I had been sentenced to feeding animals for misbehavior I had to still serve my job. As I went to it next morning I met the manager, who said he did not need me in his business, so I was rejoicing because I did have to serve out my sentence, when a cop picked me up and put me behind the bars. I stayed there about a week when I was called before the judge. He had me put in striped clothes, and with a heavy weight on my foot I was put to cleaning streets. I was behind a store when I saw a gentleman coming toward me with a basket of apples, and believe me they were rotten I reckon. He said, "son carry these things away." I started off when I stumped my toe and while squealing with pain dropped my apples. I again picked up the apples and had gotton no more than ten feet when I was tripped up by a lad. I fell on top of him and he was on top of the rotten apples. He mashed them all over his clothes. Well they were on his clothes and I did not have to carry them further. Next week "more trouble."

Mr. Maddox got acquainted with echo the other day while in the woods.

Mr. Dorcas Maddox, better known as "Dock," while in the woods the other day got lost. After finding out that the he could not find his way out, began calling for help. He hollowed "Help!" and when his echo resounded Dock thought he heard someone else hollow "help" also. Dock hollowed, "Where are you?" and the echo replied "where are you?" Dock said "Here I am," and the echo said the same. Dock said, "Come here!" The echo said "come here" also. Dock said said to himself confidently, "I'll get out yet," and started toward where he thought he heard the voice. After going a little distance Dock exclaimed, "Where are you?" The echo asked him the same question. Dock answered, "Here I am,', and the echo said "here I am" also. Dock got mad and told the echo what he thought of it and the echo said the same thing to Dock. We will stop here because we don,t want to tell what Dock said next.

THE CHESTNUT HUNT.

Well, of all the chestnut hunts, read about the one Dorcas Maddox and Ed Teel witnessed. Bright and early one morning Dock and Ed started out to hunt some chestnuts. They crossed a a creek and went a little way on the other side and found a chestnut tree. Ed got up in the tree to knock the burs. Dock was standing under the tree and all at once decided to look up at Ed; and when he did so a bur struck him square in the face. He thought a bird had pecked him, and he at once departed for home at a rapid rate. He the foot log, and fell into the creek. According to the latest news from him it is believed that he is still "sailing on"

Omar and Ed made a trip to the capital city last Saturday. When they arrived in the city Ed was taking in the "sites," and at the same time lost Omar. He went up to the nearest policeman and inquired if he had seen "Booty." (Booty is Omar's nick name) The policeman thought Ed was referring to money that he had lost. The officer thought that Ed had robbed someone. He told Ed to wait a few minutes and he would get an auto and help find him. Ed thought the ofsicer very nice, but before he knew it he was "on the inside looking out."

Felton Mullins made a "100" on history and Latin. But it was 50 on each one,

Halloween Party.

The festivities of Halloween were never so thoroughly enjoyed by the Social Set of Maplesville as was the occasion of the last celebration. Several were summoned to the home of Miss Minnie Branch, that charming hostess whose fame as an entertainer has no equal, where they were greeted upon entrance with huge Jack O'Lanterns cut from pumpkins. Upon being escorted into her home, one was greeted by wierd spectacles such as witches riding brooms, black cats, etc. Games were enjoyed during the evening until an alarm was sounded in the rear of the house and upon envestigation we found a large table, groaning beneath the weight of good things. In the center was a large pumpkin with black and yellow ribbon protuding. Each guest was bade pull a piece of ribbon, to the end of which was attached his price for the evening. Dr. Potts was fortunate in securing the money while Mr. Woods was the lucky fellow in drawing the ring. Much to the delight of all the thimble was not drawn, and ancient history tells us that none of the party will be an "Old Maid." Various and sundry were the articles drawn trom this pumpkin and quite a few laughs were had in exhibiting the prizes secured.

The table was covered with fruits of every description and the whole affair was one of fruits in keeping with the season.

The gowns worn by the ladies were most exquisit. Miss Branch the charming hostess. was arrayed in a Blue Poplin Gown Mrs. Northrup was tastefully dressed in a Black Crepe de Chine made over Red Satin; Mrs. Whiteselle wore a White Voile Gown elaborately embroiderd; Mrs. Hull had on a Black Satin Gown while Mrs. Potts wore a Pink Messalin; Mrs. Sanderson was tastefully gowned in an Old Rose Messalin Gown while Miss Allison wore a Bronze Silk; Miss Orr was beautifully gowned in a Gray Voil with Bulgarian Trimmings.

Those who enjoyed the hospitalities of Miss Branch were as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Whitesell; Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Sanderson; Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Northrup; Dr. and Mrs. V. B. Potts: Mrs. Hull; T. C. Perry and Miss Eliose Orr; Miss Cora Allison; F. J. Pavuette; R. P. Richardson and T. D. Woods.

Who Lost His Hat?

Gentleman in Eclectic is Inquiring for Chilton Man Who Lost His Hat at Fair.

Below we publish a letter received by the Postmaster here, which, when read, will explain itself. The man who found the hat requests the owner to give a description of the car which he left it on, etc. Mr. Dudley suggests that if he cannot describe the car, possibly a description of the hat might do as well. Following is the letter:

Eclectic, Ala., Nov. 3, 1913
Postmaster,
Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir:—During the Fair in Montgomery, a man who said he lived in Chilton county, whose name I did not learn, left a hat on a car in Montgomery, and I picked it up and have it now. I want to find the owner, and will you please give me the names of the carriers leaving your office. I will write to them and possibly they may be able to locate the owner of the hat. I talked with the gentleman and he said he was fram Chilton county, is why I write to you to help me find the man. He must tell what car line he was on, when he left the hat and at what time of day, so I may know the right person will get the property. I guess the man to be about forty years old, would,weigh about 150 pounds and wore a heavy mustache and dark hair. The man, as I remember, had three other bundles with him. He was retiring in manners, why I didn't find out his name. Possibly if you will show this letter to the carriers they at once can locate him. When found I will take pleasure in sending him his hat.

Respectfully,
Henry C. Ellis.

Can you! Dare you! Will you! overlook this opportunity of buying the best in the line of clothing, shoes, and dry goods for man, woman and child at such unheard of low prices. The biggest bargain feast Chilton county ever knew now going on at the store of Mr. H. Kanjutskey one of the leading and trustworthy concerns of Chilton county.

An opportunity for every man woman and child awaits you at H. Kanjutskey's sale. Clanton Ala.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.00.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala. as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

The voters of Chilton should keep in mind that now is the time to pay poll tax. Get your name on the list and be prepared to stand by the man of your choice when election day comes.

The Constitution and by-Laws of the Montgomery-Birmingham Highway Association have been drafted by Hon. Frank W. Lull of Wetumpka, whom the executive commitee appointed to draw up same, and have been turned over to Barney M. Roberts, Secretary of the Association, to be read and passed upon before the Meeting of the Assocation at the Court House in Clanton next Monday. The rules and regulations as stipulated in the instrument are simple, but never-the less complete, and will be ample for carring out the purpose for which they are intended—the perpetuating and strengthening of the Association and its Aims.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

We have been hearing some complaint from our subscribers and patrons regarding the fact that The Union-Banner has been reduced in size. We would like to make explanation of this, and hope you will be patient till you hear our reasons.

Some weeks ago we reduced our paper from eight pages, (four of which were being printed in Birmingham) to six pages, all printed at home. We did this because we believed it better for us and better for our readers. It would enable us to give six pages of home printed news and advertising instead of four. We still believe that plan best, and shall continue to do so as early as possible.

The reason the paper contained only four pages last week was that the extra work placed on our press by the printing of six pages for a few weeks disabled some of the machinery and made it impossible for us to print more than four pages till the trouble can be corrected. We do not know how long it may be before this can be done, not many more days at the outside. Just as soon as we can get it in working order again we expect to give you a full six pages of live home news every week, which is more than any other county paper has ever done heretofore.

Now we hope our subscribers will not get impatient too soon. Accidents are frequently unavoidable, and when they do happen it is necessary to operate under their disability till the trouble can be remedied. We will get the trouble corrected just as soon as possible, and hope to have the kindness of your patience while we are striving to do so.

C. R. MULLINS' REPLY TO MR. OLIVER'S LETTER

Clanton, Ala., Nov. 3, 1913.
Editor Union-Banner;
Dear Sir:

Will you allow me space in your paper to reply to Mr. Oliver's letter on the County High School in your last issue? First, I want to say it is wilful or ignorance on his part when he says that if the school is built in Clanton it will not be a benefit to the entire county, but will only benefit the people in and around Clanton within a radius of 5 miles, and I have always considered him a man of fair intelligence.

Now if Clanton is not the proper place foy the County High School, why not, and where is the proper place? Clanton is within 1 1-2 miles of the geographical center of the county, our county site, and midway between Jemison and Verbena, still right on the Louisville and Nashville railroad, with all the facilities necessary for the accommodation of the High school students; churches, banks, drug stores, good hotel and boarding houses and as good, but no better people, as you will find in Verbena or anywhere else. Its true some of us may be a little dull on good roads, but what does this have to do with the high school question? We have better roads now than we have ever had before, and should the oigh school be built in Clanton, the schedule on our railroad as it is now would accommodate all desiring to attend within the county, or even adjoining counties north and south.

Again, Mr. Oliver says if the Commissioners are going to help build the high school in Clanton, they should give to each of the rural schools within the county the same as to the high school. Now my dear readers, do you all think this practical? Suppose this were done all over the state. Why, it would necessarily increase our taxes to where we would have to sell our homes and move into some undeveloped country with no schools, no churches, and but little civitization.

Now let's get a little broader on our high school question. Is there any doubt about us needing this school which is the connecting link between our common schools and the high colleges? I thidk not. Mr. Comer and the legislature that enacted this law giving now to each county $3000 a year for this school thought it proper and right, and I for one, most heartily agree with them, and cannot see how it is possible for any man or set of men to consider this County High School any thing more or less than a county proposition, and how it would be possible for the whole county not to be benefitted by having this school. Now as to the rural schools of the county, they should be looked after, and has been well done by our county school board. Clanton is not getting her quota as per capita, but the county board has seen fit to make this appropriation a little in favor of the rural schools, and we lack about four months each year having enough public funds to run our little school here after a liberal appropriation from our city funds. To this we are not kicking, and think the county Board has acted wisely and right in making their appropriations in favor of the rural schools. Now if Clanton had the high school which would take care of all the pupils we have from the 7th grade up and all others in the county that would probably go away to school; the county board could then make a still smaller or no appropriation to Clanton and give it all to the rural schools if they saw proper, as by this time perhaps, our city school could be run by the city. Would this not be a benefit to the entire county? Would this not go out from Clanton more than five miles?

Now there are many more things I could say, but I am taking up too much space, but I want to say I can't see how any citizen of this county can afford to throw cold water on this proposition, or endeavor to prejudice the minds of the voters living in the rural districts and away from Clanton against the school being built in Clanton and the county helping to do it. What's the matter with Mr. Oliver? Is it that he doesn't have any children to educate, or if he has, is it possible that he is able to send them away to even better schools than this one would be? Is it that he doesn't want the boys and girls of Chilton to come to the front by putting this school within their reach? Or is it that now in his retiring days he would like to have some honors, and is seeking to get in the political limelight?

If we fail to build this school we are robbing the children of this county and their parents out of $3000 annually, and perhaps depriving many of even getting a high school education. With this school in Clanton or any other point in the county tuere are many boys who could come in on Monday and go back home on Friday, cutting down their board, having their laundry done at home, and perhaps in many cases pay their board with produce from the farm. Would this not give every boy and giri in this county a chance to attend a high school, who could not possibly go away to school, and don't you think that Clanton is, beyond all question the most accessible place for all the people and for all the time.

Now in conclusion I want to say Mr. Oliver is my friend, and I am his, but if his letter had been written by my brother I would have replied just as I have, for I do think such a letter tends to spread the germ of discord and keeps some people confused and divided over this question and perhaps ultimately defeat the building of the school that we are now beginning to need so badly.

To go on Mr. Oliver's theory, if Clanton builds the school, then the people in the county over five miles from Clanton would not be benefitted. How, would or could such a thing as this work and at the same time call it a Chilton County High School? Is it possible that when Mr. Oliver was working for the Chilton County High School to be located at Verbena that he thought it would be of no benefit to the balance of the county? If so, then his motives must be selfish, and to say the least of it, his idea of education very narrow. If this be true then the county would have derived very little benefit from from the school, as Verbena is situated in the extreme southern border, and the benefits from same reaching out for only five miles, would have never reached Clanton, to say nothing of the eastern western and northern part of the county.

Now I want to say in behalf of Prof. Pickens that he is wide awake on the proposition of education. He seems to have this matter at heart, not only for the boys and girls of Clanton, but for the entire county. He is a man of integrity, and ability and an educator from his heart. He naturrliy wants to see this high school built, for he knows what it means to the entire county, and that its benefits will be felt sor not only five miles around its location, but in every nook and corner of good old Chilton, as well as an honor to the present board of Commissioners, who I am sure are going to help build it somewhere. Clanton is not asking the county to build the school, but simply asked the Commissioners what they thought was right and reasonable for the county to give, stating at the same time that if the county would give about four thousand dollars, or one third, basing on a $12,000.00 building, that Clanton citizens would take it upon themselves to raise the balance and build the school. The town of Clanton agrees to pay four thousand dollars, Dr. J. E. Gowan has agreed to give five acres of land on which to erect the building. Is there anything short about this? Is there any other place in the county making the Commissioners sueh a proposition to help them build this County High School? They all expressed themselves as willing for the county to help, and think it is right and proper to do so.

I am for the county high school, be it built where it may, at any place in this county. I am willing and think it right for the county to help. I will pay to any community what I have subscribed to Clanton, let it be Jemissn, Thorsby, Maplesville, Mountain Creek, Coopers, Lock 12, Old Benson, Verbena, or on Mr. Oliver's place out west of Verbena. Further; I am willing for the county to leave the question of locating the school to a vote of the people, have all the communities desiring the school put in nomination and when settled, the county to pay half the expense of building, and the immediate surrounding community the balance. If the people of this county do not want the school in Clanton, let's have it where they do want it. I am not afraid of its getting out of my reach anywhere in the county, and I am in favor of building the school and getting ready for next years appropriation. We have lost several thousand dollars already, our boys and girls being forced away to school. Who is to blame? The state is standing holding out to us $3000 a year to educate our children, and we are wrangling over where and how this building shall be erected. For God's sake and for the sake of the present and rising generation, let's stop this wrangle, build our school, and educate our children.

Many thanks for this space.

Chm. Clanton School Board.

USE OF CALOMEL PRACTICALLY STOPPED

For Bilious Attachs, Constipation and All Liver Troubles. Dangerous Calomel Gives Way to Dodson's Liver Tone.

Every druggist in the state has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

French Market Coffee is Southern Through and Through!

Brought in ships from the coffee countries through warm summer seas to the southern port of New Orleans, no cold climates affect, injuriously, the delicate coffee beans.

Roasted and blended by Southerners, it is best adapted for use in the Southern climate—no Northern roast coffee can compete with it.

Sold to Southern merchants for Southern trade—blended, roasted, packed and shipped in the South—Southern through and through. No wonder it outsells all other brands in the South.

Endorsed by the best judges in New Orleans a hundred years ago, and by coffee drinkers daily throughout the South. No wonder it has been called the National Drink of the South.

There is a real treat in store for those who have not yet tried French Market Coffee. Buy a can today. Try it. Be convinced of the excellence and quality of this brand.

Turn back over a hundred years to the days of Andrew Jackson—French Market Coffee was even then the most famous drink in America. Its history entwines itself with the history of the old aristocracy of the South. The Belles and Beaux of New Orleans sipped it at midnight for generations. To them no Mardi Gras Ball was complete without a cup of French Market Coffee. Think what it means to you to be able to serve this identical blend on your table daily—for your own grocer now sells it—in air-tight cans.

In the matter of the Estate of James Weldon, Sr., Deceased.

To the Sheriff of said County:

Whereas Peter Weldon of the Estate of James Weldon, Sr., deceased, has filed his petition in said Court for a sale of the lands described therein, belonging to said estate, for division, upon the ground that the same cannot be equitably divided among the heirs, and the 24th day of November, 1913, has been appointed for the hearing of said petition.

You are therefore, hereby commanded to cite Martha Littleton, Rina Littleton, Mary Goar, Katherine Baker, Lizzie Jones, Lishie Rhodes, Willie Weldon Ada Weldon, Walter Weldon, Henry Weldon, Minnie Weldon and Addie Mae Weldon to appear before the said Court on said day to contest said petition if they think proper.

Witness my hand this 29th day of October, 1913.

E. B. DEASON,
Judge of Probate.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

The State of Alabama,
Chilton County.

In Chancery at Clanton, Ala., 7th District, N. E. Chancery Division.

J. D. Wesson vs. Eula Wesson.

In this cause it is made to appear to the Register, by the affidavit of Robt. H. Knox, solicitor for complainant, that the Defendant Eula Wesson is a non-resident of the State of Alabama and resides in the Town of Arkeny, in the State of Arkansas, and further, that in the belief of said affiant, the Defendant is over the age of twenty-one years.

It is therefore ordered by the Register, that publication be made in the Union-Banner, a newspaper published in Clanton, Ala., once a week for four consecutive weeks, requiring her the said Eula Wesson to answer or demur to the same within thirty days after the 28th day of November, 1913, and failing so to do, a decree pro confesso will be taken against her in said cause.

Done at office, in Clanton, Ala., this 28th day of October, 1913.

H. M. SIMPSON,
Register.

Our Policies

One of the livest topics of conversation and discussion in the state for a number of years has been the service, policies and plans of the L. & N. We have attempted to inform the people of our interest in extensions and improvements, and of our activities along industrial and agricultural lines.

It is practically impossible to reach all of the people with all of the information. We have made use of the newspapers of the state to conduct an advertising campaign, telling of our plans and seeking the co-operation of the general public. Unfortunately, not all of our advertisements have been read by all of the people. Fortunately, a sufficient number of farmers, manufacturers and merchants have read of our endeavors to keep us busy.

But we have by no means let up in our work of development and improvement. Every day gangs of men go out over the L. & N. system grading for extension of main line or spur track; they are making preparations for roadbed, while workmen in other departments are making preparations for rolling stock and other equipment.

Our industrial and agricultural experts are co-operating in an effort to locate industries along the lines of the L. & N. and to improve and promote agricultural yield.

We are determined that L. & N. equipment shall be such as will supply L. & N. service, which has become traditional for its excellence. Different people have different ideas of how to carry on work of this character, but the hundreds of merchants, farmers and manufacturers to whom we have rendered service will testify to the satisfactory results produced.

We want to work with and for the people of the state for the profitable development of the state. Our property is located within the borders of the state, subject to the needs of the people of the state. We believe the people will recognize the superiority of our service and accord us their patronage in the shape of passenger travel and freight shipments.

Ask any L. & N. agent concerning routes and rates. He will cheerfully render any assistance in his power.

THE FLOOD GATES OF LOW PRICES

Have been thrown wide open. We have decided to quit the Clothing business in the shortest possible time. The short road to such a result lies in the power of LOW PRICES and we mean just this, tnat we shall not be swerved from our determination until our object ls accomplished. We have engaged the Consolidated Sales Co. (who are known all over the country as the world's greatest bargain givers), and placed our entire business in their hands for the purpose of disposing of our entire stock in any manner they see fit. It is not fair to judge this sale by any body else's, because we are determined to quit business. Everything will be sold for less than cost, beginning November 6th, 9 A. M., for 15 days only.

AGREEMENT

Having decided to go out of the Clothing business in the town of Clanton, Ala., Chilton County, H. Kanjutzky hereby agrees and does retain and employ

THE CONSOLIDATED SALES CO.

And turn over to them all my stock of goods, merchandise, etc., for the purpose of closing out the entire stock within 15 days. The Consolidated Sales Co. are the world's greatest bargain givers and will sell out in 15 days at prices far under the cost of manufacturing.

Signed,
H. KANJUTZKY.

EVERYTHING GOES.

All goods on the "Must-Go" list. The most gigantic slaughter sale ever attempted in Clanton. This is no fake money-raising scheme, but a bona fide going out of the Clothing Business Sale. The most gigantic slaughter sale of high grade merchandise to clothe man, woman and child from head to foot ever held in this town. A glance at the facts and figures will show better than words, that never was more seasonable up-to-date merchandise sacrificed at such unheard of low prices. We have made a plain statement but it means much to you. You will be doing yourself an injustice if you miss this bargain feast.

To learn the whole story, be on hand early Thursday, November 6-13. H. Kanjutzky, one of Clanton's most honorable and trustworthy concerns for the past ten years has decided to retire from the Clothing Business, and I was brought here to wind up the Clothing business affairs of the above firm. I realize the fact that to dispose of this stock in a few days, cost and loss must not be considered, and I assure you that this going out Clothing Sale of Mr. Kanjutzky's will be remembered as the bargain event in Clanton, Alabama.

D. P. SHARPE, Representative in Charge.

Will You! Can You! Dare You! During These Hard Times Overlook so Glowing an Opportunity as This?

A FOREWORD Your hopes will not be blighted, because there are bargains for everybody—not a few catch-penny headliners to entice you to come here, and then when you did come and found it not, go home disgruntled and disappointed. This is a true farewell, Going-Out-of-Business Sale, and we ask you to come, whether with the intention of buying or not, to prove our assertions.

Look for the Large Blue and White Sign With the Consolidated Sales Company in Possession.

Don't let other merchants mislead you with fake signes. There has been sales, there are sales, but there will never be another like this one. The biggest sale event Clanton and Chilton County ever knew.

FREE TRIP TO CLANTON. We will refund fare on all purchases of $15 or over for a radius of 20 miles.

READ—It is a stupendous undertaking to sell this magnificent stock in fifteen days, beginning Thursday, Nov. 6th, but the prices placed on so fine a lot of merchandise will shout louder than words and will make the two weeks the busiest in the history of our business.

Another Letter From Mr. Oliver

In Reply to Mr. C. Reese Mullins on County High School.

Verbena, Ala., Nov. 10, 1913.
Editor Union-Banner,
Dear Sir:

Be good enough to publish the following in this week's edition.

It seems that my very good friend, Mr. C. R. Mullins, seeks to engage me in a controversy upon an issue that has not been raised and in doing this he has tried to "Muddy the water", sure enough.

It is not often, that one will call his friend by such epithets as "ignorant, selfish, narrow etc" but sometimes we become so enthused over a matter that we actually forget some rules that should be observed,

And he thinks because I "spoke out in the meeting" that I am about to erect a politcal lightning rod. It is quite possible that Clanton has already groomed a sufficient number to fill all the officies that may be obtained through the electorate for a time possibly a decade so then "what's the use"?

Admittiug that I am personally, all that Mr. Mullins charges, what has that to do with the question at issue?

The citizens of Clanton, or rather those of the citizens having authority to speak for the town, asked the County Commissioners to furnish out of the County tax funds $4000.00. to help build a High School in Clanton. The Commissioners gave them a respectful hearing and after consideration of the proposition, postponed the matter indefinitely.

That should have been the end of it,

When the property owners of any place are willing to contribute to a proposition of this kind in proportion to the enhancement in value to the property that will follow it is easy to raise the required amount and I trust Mr. Mullins, with his unselfishness, broadness of vision and great intellect will try to raise the money in the regular way and as other places do.

If he has any doubt about the sentiment of the people let him call a mass meeting.

He might also at that time test his own strength for some of the "fat places" in case he should become a lover of "the dear people" and politically inclined. Yours truly,

H. B. Oliver.

A Night Of Terror.

Few nights are more terrible than that of a mother looking on her child choking and gasping for breath during an attach of croupe, and nothing in the house to releive it. Many mothers have passed nights of terror in this situation. A little forethought will enable you to avoid all this. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a certain cure for croupd and has never been known to fail. Keep it at hand. For sale by Upchurch Drug Co.

County Health Officer's Report

I beg to submit my report for the month of October. As required by law, I inspected the county jail and found it to be in good condition. I visited the poor house on October 7, and found same to be in good condition.

All the doctors, who are in active practice, have reported births and deaths except the following: Dr. N. S. Johnson, Clanton, Ala. and Dr. V. B. Potts, Maplesville, Ala.

The vital statistics are as follows:

Births, white 48; colored 7; total 55.

Deaths, white 16; colored 4; total 20.

The following cases of infectious diseases were reported, and were carefully looked after: Two cases of typhoid fever, and one case of small pox.

Respectfully submitted,
V. J. Gragg, M. D.,
County Health Officer.

Cotton Report

The report of the National Department of Commerce shows that the number of bales of cotton ginned in Chilton County prior to October 18, 1913 to be 10,145, as compared with 8,132 ginned up to the same date in 1912. The general sentiment is that the cotton crop in this section is at least ten days earlier than last season, and the idea is substantiated by the ginners report given here. It is also a general opinion that the crop is much smaller.

Alabama Soul Winners Meet.

True and Intelligent Church Workers Exchange Opinions.

On Sunday the four days session of the Alabama Soul Winners conference commenced at Marbury in an earnest Christian spirit, looking to the betterment of the cause of our Redeemer in saving souls for the life to come.

There were a large number of prominent Alabamians present—too many to mention here—but it is of the local people that special mention is appropriate.

Mr. D. H. Marbury, E. L. Thornton, Rev. O. W. Greer, Benjamin Gray, Major C. A. Gung, Thomas Henderson, The Culver Brothers, G. W. Coburn Mr. Rissell, and many other good people, residents of Marbury and Mountain Creek, were attentive to strangers and untiring in their work for the Master.

The singing led by Mr. Mallery, was excellent; The addresses of the Rev. O. W. Greer were interesting, instructive and entertaining. The Presiding officer, Mr. Leon C. Palmer, acquited himself with the well wishes of afl who attended the conference.

In a single sentence the work can be sumed up, composed of a few words: The Conference was a grand, glorious success, and will result in much good.

Congregational Conference

The General Congregational Conference of Alabama was in session at Thorsby from Nov. 11 to 13. The event was one of state-wide interest, and brought many noted and prominent workers to its session. Not only the noted workers of the denomination from Alabama, but also many from other states of the North and East. The work done was in the interest of the Congregational church, and much good was done toward arousing a keener interest among the adherents of that faith and order.

Rev. E. W. Butler of Thorsby, the Registrar of the Conference in Alabama, is due great credit for the interest he showed in the meeting, and the way he exerted himself in entertaining the many visitors to Thorsby.

Many Attend Road Meeting

Montgomery-Birmingham Highway Association Holds Live Meeting in Clanton.

Much interest was shown in the meeting of the Montgomery-Birmingham Highway Association at the Court House in Clanton Monday. Many prominent men from over the state were present to lend their interest to the project, and several who could not be present sent letters, assuring their hearty sympathy with the aims of the Association.

The meeting was called at 11 o'clock by president W. S. Keller, who, after a few introductory remarks, left an open discussion to members of the meeting.

Judge Dan A. Green of Birmingham was next heard. His representation of Jefferson county's feeling toward the Highway showed that the people for whom he spoke are ready to do their own part toward building the road, and then assist any other county that needs it.

Letters from Dr. Baldwin of Montgomery and Mr. Bowdon of Shelby were read. Their tone was the most enthusiastic for the aims of the Association, and gave assurance of valuable assistance an co-operation from these two advocates of good roads.

The Constitution and By-Laws which had been drafted by Hon. F. W. Lull of Wetumpka were read before the meeting. After considerable discussion and slight amendments, they were declared adopted.

Mr. W. W. Fox, executive committeeman from this county, was empowered to appoint a committee of eight members, to look after the securing of a right of way for the highway in this county and to solicit subscriptions for aid in constructing it.

A remarkable feature of the meeting was the enthusiasm of the delegation from Elmore county. They had about the strongest representative of any county along the route.

A good sum of money was contributed to the Treasury of the association by the individuals present at the meeting.

Besides several farmers and citizens of Chilton county, the following were present:

H. H. Hall, H. C. Cobb, W. O. Massengale, R. M. Rawlinson, C. M. Turner, W. S. Keller, E. B. Deason, H. B. Oliver, W. C. Robinson, W. D. Smith, F. W. Lull, T. A. Curry, R. W. Solomon, W. W. Fox, H. G. Reynolds, B. M. Roberts, Judge Dan A. Green, E. A. Matthews.

When the business of the session was over the Association adjourned, to meet again subject to the call of the President.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.00.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

Again we are publishing a long article in regard to the Candidacy of Ex-Governor Comer. We wish to state, as we did before, that we are not doing so because we Champion his cause, not that we at all support his candidacy, but we print the matter as paid advertising, and are asking no one to support him.

The Commissioners Court of Chilton County has agreed to give Eight Thousand Dollars toward the construction of the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway through this county. Four thousand dollars of this amount is to be available after the first of December, and the other four thousand will be given for use after December 1st, 1914. The county is, by law, entitled to four thousand dollars of State road funds; all these taken together make for Chilton a total of Twelve Thousand dollars for building the road already in sight. But that is not all she will do. The individual citizens of the county who are interested in the movement can be depended upon to donate liberally to the cause. So by the time all the sources are tried it is quite certain that Chilton will place along with the other counties an amount for this road that her people can be justly proud of.

CHILTON COUNTY TEACHERS READING CIRCLE.

Time after time the Teachers Reading Circle work has been inaugurated in Chilton county, and a full set of officers elected; but just as many times have the teachers shown a lack of interest and let the move go down to a near failure. Just where to place the blame for this sad act of negligence is a hard proposition. The fact is no one really wants to shoulder the responsibility for allowing the movement to fail. What needs to be done is to right the wrong, anyway, but there again arises the necessity of locating the wrong and determining the nature of it.

Everyone is well aware of the good that is being accomplished in other counties in the state, and knows the possibility of doing the same in Chilton, if the necessary interest could be aroused among the teachers. Educators who are well informed along the line of the circle work have been at teachers institutes in this county for several years past, and tried to impress upon the teachers the value of the time spent with it. That they have caused some to be interested in the work is not denied, but the majority of the teachers, for some cause or other have not yet seen the good in it. They have exerted no effort toward forwarding the plan in this county.

But now there is no way to recompense the neglect that has already been allowed to hang over this work except to get busy and make up for it by increased interest and work in future. There is no use to complain over the way the thing has been done in past. Let us give our attention to improving in future.

In this issue is a call from Prof. Cecil E. Harris, president of the Reading Circle in Chilton county, for a meeting at Thorsby on Saturday, Nov. 22, for the purpose of organizing this work. Every teacher can attend this meeting if he or she will only make an effort; and it is certainly a step in the right direction. It means a broader insight into, and increased interest along literary lines, than which nothing adds more to the capability of a teacher.

THE SEVENTH GRADE EXAMINATIONS AND THE COUNTY HIGH SCHOOLS.

All the while since the Seventh Grade Examination plan for rural schools was launched by Prof. N. R. Baker, State Rural School Supervisor, local educational workers have realized the necessity of instituting the plan in Chilton County. But there has been and is yet one thing above all else, that puts an end to most any kind of enthusiasm one might have for the inauguration of the work: that is the question of where these boys and girls would next go to school if they are graduated and dismissed by the country school. Yes, that question has been a puzzle, and so far, has throttled the movement to secure tha examination plan. But natural developments are inevitable. Certain things which are neceesitated by the onward march of educational progress are not to be long held in abeyance by little and frivolous puzzles. One of these things is, beyond a doubt, the Seventh Grade Examination Plan. All over the state it is being put into operation, and to say the least, it is one of the greatest uplifts that has ever come to rural education.

Our County Superintendent of Education is progressive—as much so as any other Superintendent in the State—and he is doing all he can to bring to us all the educational advantages that any other county enjoys; and one of the first things that has confronted him in this course, is that same Seventh Grade Examination Plan. The only way he can consistently dispose of it is to establish it, regardless of where the boy or girl goes next year. He is going to do this. Next spring there will be quite a number examined upon the work done in the rural schools, and they will receive diplomas entitling them to High School entrance. Our same old puzzle again, What shall be done with them?

Here we reach the last phase of the discussion, which, like every other subject concerning our educational future, points us to one and the same solution—the Chilton County High School—the bridge across the great chasm that lies between the country boy and college training, or leadership in life. Men who have faith in the supremacy of right, and believe that justice will triumph, think that the Chilton County High School will be built and put in operation in time to receive these boys and girls from the rural schools next year and carry them on through the high school course, giving to them that which justly and rightly belongs to them.

A FAKIRLESS SHOW.

A Tented Show That Will Spring a Surprise. Something That the People Have Been Wanting.

The Sun Brothers' World's Progressive Shows that are heavily billed to exhibit at Clanton, Nov. 20th. for two performances, is one of the legitimate out-door amusement institutions of this country. It has a record of twentytwo years of continuous service before the people of this country and futher has the distinction of being the very cleanest tented exhibition that ever traversed the good old United States. It has never allowed any Gamblers, Fakirs, Fortune Tellers, Oriental dancing girl concerns, no catch penny devices, no ticket scalpers, no short change artists, no people to follow it from town to town with questionable prize schems, no street corners-in and in fact nothing that can in any reflect on a first class, well conducted, educational, attractive and real entertainment enterprise; The Policy of the managemeni is to be entertainers of the public and not yart and parcel of a bunch of grafters.

The show this season is the finest and best ever devised by this well known and liberal firm of managers. Many new wild beast subjects; atl new big top artists; ncw band and orchestra; new tents and in fact a brand new splinter show all around, and with no increase in the prices of admission.

This big tented show will appear afternoon and night on Nov. the 20th. at Clanton, Ala.

I TOOK PE-RU-NA

Was Able to Sleep and Eat Again

MRS. M. MUELLER,
P. O. Box 321, Hawley, Wayne Co., Penn.

Mrs. Mueller says: "I keep Peruna in the house constantly. When I am not feeling well I take a few doses. It always restores."

Mrs. Mueller's story of her experience with Peruna fully explains why she always keeps Peruna on hand. A few years ago she was very sick. The trouble seemed to be the stomach and liver. She suffered great pain. Was unable to get anything to help her. She was growing weaker and weaker. She became tired of life.

Somebody suggested that she write to the Peruna Co. She did so. Through their advice she began to use Peruna. In a letter from her at this time she says: "Through the use of Peruna I have regained my health. I took only a bottle and a half when I was able to sleep and eat again and my nervousness disappeared." No wonder Mrs. Mueller keeps Peruna in the house. Under similar circumstances Peruna would be in every house in the land.

Any one taking Peruna ought to have a free copy of the "Ills of Life." Address Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio.

People who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.

WHITES POOR PEARL DIVERS

Tried in Australia, but All Engaged In the Business Are Either Dead or Paralyzed.

Efforts have recently been made to employ white men as pearl divers off the coast of Australia, and legislation for the purpose has been adopted, in order to more fully open that industry to Europeans.

But it now appears that the experiment has been by no means satisfactory. A very interesting statement on this subject has recently been made by Captain Talboys, who has had wide experience of pearling on the Australian coast. He says emphatically that white divers are an impossibility.

He had hoped that the white man would have proved a successful diver, but he says that, after a very lengthy experiment, the idea had been abandoned.

The divers, six or eight of them, who were brought to Australia by the master pearlers, from Messrs. Siebe, Gorman & Co., and Messrs. Henkie & Co., submarine engineers, about two years ago, were all either dead or paralyzed.

In view of the further facts alleged, there appears to be no scope for white pearl divers in Australian waters. For, as the result of a year's diving, says Captain Talboys, the best returns of the white divers did not exceed a ton, whilst the average yield of an Asiatic's work was between four and five tons.

Besides, the Asiatic worked for $10 to $15 per month, plus a commission on the shell raised, while the white man received $70 per month, with a similar commission, in addition to which the cost of keep for the white man was about three times that expended on the Asiatic.—Far East, Tokio.

How to Test Tea's Purity.

A remarkably simple method of testing the purity of tea for coloring matter is to use an ordinary table knife and a sheet of white paper, upon which a small quantity of the tea to be tested is placed. The tea is then rubbed with the knife. When the leaves have been reduced to a powder the paper is dusted clean with a brush made of common bristles and its surface examined with the naked eye or a microscope. If the tea is artificially colored little spots or streaks of vivid Prussian blue will appear in the fiber of the paper. These stains are so distinct in their coloring that they cannot possibly be confused with any other stain that may be in the paper.

DISCONTENT NOT ALL GOOD

True That It Has Its Uses, but There Are Other Things to Be Considered.

It is perhaps true that some writers and teachers have over-emphasized the gospel of contentment with our lot. It is not always well to be contented with our lot. Avancement in every line has been made by people who were discontented with their present opportunities and broke through to something higher. But, even allowing this it is undeniably true that there is a vast amount of unholy and wasteful discontent. We are apt to think pretty constantly how much more and how much better we would do if circumstances were different. While history presents many cases of people who broke away from humble task to force their way to something higher, it is fuller of instances in which a man or woman, by doing with patient faithfulness an insignificant task, has been celled to greater things.

The answer to the problem is the old rule of living by the minute. It is almost never right to leave a task unfinished. This day, this hour, this minute, puts a task into our hands.

"Because of the nail the shoe was lost; because of the shoe the horse was lost; because of the horse the rider was lost; because of the rider the battle was lost." So it was the blacksmith, after all, who lost the battle. If he had done his work well, the cause might have triumphed.—Christian Herald.

CURIOUS CUSTOMS OF INDIA

Dancing Girls Married to Idols Representing Gods, Is One of the Oddities.

Parrots are taught in India to spend a large portion of their time in repeating the names of gods, and such a spokesman brings a good price, especially among business men, who imagine that by owning such a parrot their spiritual treasures are accumulating while they attend to their usual occupations.

Many of the dancing girls in India belonging to the temples are called the wives of the gods. At an early age they are united in wedlock to the images worshiped in the temples. This strange matrimonial connection is formed in compliance with the wishes of the parents, who believe it to be a highly meritorious act to present a beautiful daughter in marriage to a senseless idol.

The only foreigner who ever saw the inside of the great temple of Jugernaut was an English officer, who succeeded in gaining admission by painting and dressing himself like a native.

When the Brahmins discovered that their holy place had been thus defiled they became so enraged that all the English residing at the seation were obliged to flee for their lives.

Suspecting their pursuers to be more desirous of gratifying their avarice than their revenge, they strewed silver money by the way, and while the natives stopped to pick it up they gained time and succeeded in reaching a place of safety.

NOT REALLY HEROIC ACTION

Mr. Snibbles Expelled Burglar All Right, but Had Not Much Credit Coming to Him.

Mr. Snibbles got out of bed and slipped on his shoes.

"This must stop," he muttered irritably to his wife. "I'm going downstairs to teach that young man to keep away from my house in the future."

"John," cried his wife, "stop! Don't go—"

But before she could say more he had slipped out of the door. She heard him steal downstairs to the drawing room; she heard sounds of a struggle and of the breaking of glass; she heard him drag his adversary to the hall and kick him down the front steps. Then when he returned she flung herself upon him and clung to him admiringly.

"What's the matter?" he demanded.

"Don't you know?" she answered. "That was a burglar!"

"Great Scott!" he gasped, turning pale. "Why didn't you tell me before? I thought it was Ethel's sweetheart."—Harper's Magazine.

NOT THE SHOCK EXPECTED

Seemingly, Debutante Would Have Been Willing If It Had Been Otherwise.

After the Spanish melon, while awaiting the cold consomme, a young Japanese diplomat took the fan from the white hand of a debutante, and opened it—from the right to left delicately.

"You noticed how I opened it?" he said. "From right to left?"

"Yes," she returned indifferently. "But everybody opens fans from right to left."

"And do you know why? No? Then I'll tell you—I'll warn you—so that you yourself may never, by any chance, open a fan from left to right."

He sipped his amber-colored chablis and resumed:

"Fans originated in Japan, and from time immemorial the Japanese fan-makers, whose morality is not like western morality, have constructed fans in such a manner that, opened from right to left, they reveal innocent and lovely things—flowers and temples and tea gardens—while, opened from left to right, they reveal scenes of an indecency and obscenity passing belief.

"Of course, all Japanese fans are not of a double entendre such as this, but many are, and hence Japan has taught the world to open its fans in only one way—the safe way."

The young lady opened her fan, very cautiously, the unsafe way. Then she said:

"Pshaw, my fan is all right."

And then gave a little disappointed shrug of her white shoulders.—Chi-

NOVELTY FOR NEW YORKERS

Surprised Man Discovers Place Where Diners Are Not Ashamed to Be Heard at Prayer.

"Every day I learn something about this old town," said the New York city salesman. "Yesterday I picked up this item:

"I was invited to luncheon by a young man engaged in evangelistic work. The restaurant he suggested lunching at was several blocks out of our way. As I was in a hurry, I proposed some place nearer at hand, but he insisted upon that particular restaurant, so we went there. It was a nice place, very clean, and the cooking good. The only peculiarity I noticed was a group of clerical looking men in the rear of the room.

"'Are those fellows all clergymen?' I asked.

"'Yes,' said my friend, 'they are curates and missionaries who eat here every day. If obliged to lunch out anywhere they try to come here, because this restaurant has the reputation of being the only place in town where a man can ask a blessing without perhaps attracting disagreeable attention.

"'The proprietor used to be pretty strong in the preaching line himself, and he encourages the blessing habit. Of course many people eat here who do not say grace, but so many of the patrons do say it that the place has been nicknamed "blessing" restaurant.'

"And then before beginning our meal my friend prayed, and as nobody even turned around to look at us I found that the restaurant indeed merited its novel reputation."

All Blood Disorders Quickly Driven Away

Astonishing Results With the Greatest Blood Purifier Ever Discovered.

Strength, Power, Accomplishment are all Typified in S. S. S.

Some blood disorders become deeply rooted in the glands and tissues, and the mistake is made of resorting to drastic drugs. These only aggravate by causing other and worse troubles. A host of people know this to be true. They know from painful experience.

To get right down into where the blood is vitiated requires S. S. S. the greatest blood purifier ever discovered.

This remarkable remedy contains one ingredient, the active purpose of which is to stimulate the tissues to the healthy selection of its own essential nutriment and the medicinal elements of this matchless blood purifier are just as essential to well balanced-health as the nutritious elements of the meats, grains, fats and sugars of our daily food.

Not only this, but if from the presence of some disturbing poison there is a local or general interference of nutrition to cause boils, carbuncles, abscesses and kindred troubles, S. S. S. so directs the local cells that this poison is rejected and eliminated from their presence.

Then, too, S. S. S. has such specific stimulation on these local cells as to preserve their mutual welfare and a proper relative assistance to each other.

In a very brief time S. S. S. has the reconstructive process so under control that remarkable changes are obseved. All eruptive places heal, mysterious pains and aches have disappeared, and from head to foot there is a conscious sensation of renewed health.

From the fact that S. S. S. is purely a botanical preparation, it is accepted by the weakest stomach and has great tonic influence. Not one drop of drugs or minerals is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and insist upon having it. And if you desire skillful advice upon any matter concerning the blood and skin write to The Swift Specific Co., 205 Swift Bldg, Atlanta, Ga. GREAT WRITER A REAL BOY

Charles Dickens, Like the Average Youngster, Had His Dreams of Becoming a Pirate.

The English boys of years ago—there never was any doubt as to American boys of that or any other period before or after—had romantic ideas as to becoming ruthless robbers by land or pirates on the high seas is shown by a recently discovered speech made by Charles Dickens and reported in the London Times of April 13, 1864, from which the following quotation from the London Dickensonian is taken: "Mr. Dickens said his first recollections of the northwest of London (this was in 1824, when he was twelve years old), were connected with a certain waste plot of ground used almost exclusively for beating carpets. The only ornaments of the locality, were a piece of stagnant water, a few straggling docks and some stunted greens. With it, however, was associated the romantic story of the 'Field of the Forty Footsteps,' according to which a duel had been fought there between two brothers, the forty dreadful paces over which the victor pursued his victim being marked by the withering up of the grass in forty distinct places. Dickens had often gone there, he said, accompanied by an adventurous young Englishman, aged eleven, with whom he had intended going to the Spanish Main as soon as ever they could amass sufficient wealth to buy a cutlass and a rifle."

The University of London afterward was erected on this site. Dickens as a boy in April, 1827, saw the cornerstone laid and "the ceremony of laying the first stone of a new and splendid public building" of which Mr. Pecksniff was the architect, as narrated in "Martin Chuzzlewit," was a reminiscence of this event.

He Obeyed Orders.

Sir Henry Roscoe tells this of the scientist Faraday and his assistant, Sergeant Anderson: "Anderson was the sole assistant to Faraday and of course was utterly uneducated in scientific matters, but he could obey orders, which is not always a characteristic of an educated man. One day Anderson was told by Faraday to keep stirring a pot containing some chemicals over a fire until he returned. Faraday, being in the habit of going upstairs to tea in his rooms and coming down directly afterward to work in the laboratory during the evening. For some reason he was prevented from coming down again and forgot that he had told Anderson to watch the pot. On coming down the next morning he found Anderson still stirring the pot, having been at it the whole night and thus carrying out the order which was given him."—World's Work.

WANTED THE STAGE SETTING

Village Undertaker, Called to Shave Visitor, Not as Welcome as He Might Have Been.

"I had a queer shave last week," said a New York salesman. "Business took me for a day to a small country town way up in the state, where I had the bad luck to fall ill. I was laid up in a little one horse hotel for four days.

"One afternoon I thought a shave would make me feel more respectable, but my hands were so unsteady that I didn't feel up to tackling the job myself, so I asked to have a barber sent to my room.

"Well, I guess that was the first time on record that anybody'd ever asked for such a thing. After a wait of over two hours a tall, solemn looking man in a frock coat and a silk hat came to my door and said he'd come to shave me. I felt too weak to ask any questions, so I just settled myself in the least uncomfortable chair in the room and told him to go ahead.

"'You'd better lie down,' he said.

"'Not a bit of it,' I answered. 'I'm feeling a lot better and can sit up all right.'

"'But I can't shave you unless you lie down,' he insisted.

"Rather than have any talk about it I lay down on the bed.

"'Shut your eyes,' was the next order.

"'See here,' I said, 'what's all this for, anyway? Go ahead and shave me and I'll take care of my eyes. If I lie down and shut my eyes I'll feel as if I were dead.'

"He chirked up at that.

"'Yes, make believe you're dead,' he said cheerfully. 'That's just what I want. You see, I'm the village undertaker and I'm only used to shaving corpses.'"

Singularly Productive Tree.

Perhaps the most productive of all trees is the carnamba tree, similar to the palm which flourishes along the Rio Grande. When it is young it produces vinegar, while the roots have a taste similar to sarsaparilla. The branches give forth nuts which when roasted can be used as coffee. The tree's wood is serviceable to make musical instruments. Lastly there is a wax extracted from it that is used to make candles.

Declare War On Colds.

A crusade of education which aims "that common colds may beeome uncommon within the next generation" has been begun by prominent New York physicians. Here is a list of the "don'ts" which the doctors say will prevent the annual visitation of the cold:

The World at Your Door

The vast expanse of sea and land makes a fascinating appeal to those of us inflicted with the wanderlust.

The queer, the mystic, the unreal; the rush and whir of commerce; the dash and noise of the busy city; the imagination is stimulated and day dreams of effort and conquest hold sway.

There is the pleasing picture of powerful floating palaces, plowing the sea, bound for foreign ports; the vision of upholstered coaches drawn by great and swiftly moving engines to the wonderful capitals of the globe.

The world—a mighty empire of land and water, of ease and effort, of content and contest, of sincerity and sin—with its ever shifting kaleidoscope of human emotions, is at the door of those living along the lines of the L. & N.

The L. & N. supplies unexcelled facilities to the traveler to or from any part of the civilized globe. Through its highly developed and efficient organization it has formed connections that enable the man in Alabama to travel to Boston or Bombay at a minimum of expense and maximum pleasure.

Whether a shipment of freight is consigned to or from Manila or Mandalay, the L. & N. can supply the swiftest surest service to those in its territory.

Every intricacy of transportation has been explored and solved by the L. & N. organization. It is on the basis of satisfactory service and pleasant dealings that the L. & N. appeals for freight and passenger traffic. It stands without a superior among the railroads of the world. It is a successful organization working in co-operation with the people, for the profitable development of the territory through which it operates.

We solicit your patronage, good will and co-operation.

LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY

EX-GOV. COMER AT CULLMAN

Summary of His Latest and Strongest Speech.

Facts and Figures About His Administration.

Demands That We Go Forward in War for People's Control of their Government.

The following is a summary of an address delivered by ex-Governor B. B. Comer, at Cullman on Monday, November 10, 1913. It's a re-statement of the issues of the campaign and a re-announcement of the policies which he has advocated and the platform on which he has stood—and a strong recommendation that everybody should carefully study:

Let the people—not the railroads—rule. The control of State government by the people rather than control by the Louisville and Nashville Railroad company.

Equalize the taxes of the people—also equalize the freight and passenger taxes, that is, railroad rates.

An administration based upon education and progressive principles. Alabama should not be a laggard in the sisterhood of States. Full and equal protection of all property, individual and corporate, coupled with fair and firm State regulation.

TRUE THEORY OF TAXATION.

The sole revenue of government is taxation. A government that protects and educates must be supported. Every good citizen is willing to pay his part, levied on a fair basis. Therefore, fairness requires the equalization of taxes and the wise expenditure of money to the end that all citizens share in the benefits and burdens of government.

In our own business, we require that a dollar spent shall secure a dollar in service or in value. The State should be run on this principle.

IF USELESS, ABOLISH THEM.

If during the Comer administration any useless office—whether administrative or judicial—was created, it should be abolished. The same should be done with every office in the State, regardless of when or how created. Not only this, but every officer, whether clerk or head of a department, in the State's pay, should do the State's work No head of a department has the right to use his department or any other department for his private gain—either politically or otherwise. Offices are primarily created to develop and protect the State. When not responsive to this policy, they should be abolished.

GO FORWARD WITH EDUCATION.

No backward step in the encouragement of education and school facilities. Progress means greater State responsibility to schools. The State's best asset is its boys and girls. An adequate State school system is vital.

Efficient citizenship depends on the equipment which education gives the rising generation.

Without good roads, the prosperous era on which our farmers have just begun to enter, will find a limit at nc distant day. Every encouragement that the State can give, must be freely and persistently offered to all the agencies that are now awake and striving to forward this development.

Liberality, justice and gratitude should be continued in the pensions and care of our old soldiers.

The legislature of 1907-10 utilized the moneys of the State to develop every facility along the above lines.

APPROPRIATIONS THAT WERE WISE INVESTMENTS.

There was approximately seven and a half million dollars more expended during my administration than during any previous administration. Approximately a million and a half of this expenditure went as fixed investments, which investments are now the properties of the State, and will show usufruct for all time.

To the Speigner dam and power equipment	$ 50,000.00
To enlarging and re-equiping the cotton mill at Speigners	75,000.00
Balance payment on new wing at Capitol and refitting and furnishing Capitol	100,000.00
Attorneys' fees and expenses of railroad litigation	100,000.00
To aid the rebuilding of Agricultural School at Athens, Ala., damaged by storm	6,000.00
To aid the rebuilding of Agricultural School at Wetumpka, burned	10,000.00
To the Boys Industrial School, East Lake	50,000.00
To aid the rebuilding of Medical College at Mobile, injured by storm	50,000.00
To aid in building and repairing rural school houses, approximately	195,000.00
Building Girls' School dormitories at Montevallo	200,000.00
To Waterworks, Engineering Hall and Agricultural Building at Auburn	260,000.00
To repairs and new buildings at the University	400,000.00
	$1,496,000.00

The above is permanent investment and well made.

INCREASE IN MAINTENANCE FUNDS

The Legislature also increased the amounts paid.

To the Insane Asylum over any previous administration	$ 428,509.60
Increased expense to Industrial School for white boys at East Lake	50,000.00
Increased amount for keep of old soldiers at Mt. Creek	25,000.00
Increased amount paid old soldiers	1,768,621.95
Increased appropriation to Medical College at Mobile	20,000.00
Increased appropriation to the University	100,000.00
Increased appropriation to Auburn	56,000.00
Increased appropriation to Montevallo	51,000.00
Increased appropriation to Normal Schools	95,000.00
Increased appropriation to Agricultural Schools	72,000.00
Appropriations to County High Schools	198,500.00
Appropriations to Public Schools	2,393,393.52
	$5,754,525.07
To this add fixed investment of $1,496,000.00	1,496,000.00
	$7,251,525.07

The difference between these amounts and the $7,500,000.00 increased expenditures went in the attempt to secure greater efficiency in the departments, the largest part of which went to the judiciary, medical and agricultural departments, and to the railroad commission.

FALSE REPORTS CORRECTED.

The report is not correct that the Legislature of 1907-10 exempted cotton mills from taxation; created a horde of offices and made useless expenditures. Neither did it entail heavy debts on the succeeding Legislature, or administration; neither did it leave unpaid warrants. A report from the joint House and Senate committee of the succeeding Legislature, made March 14, 1911, showed a large sum of money on hand and the records show that it was not necessary to borrow any money until after the end of the fiscal year succeeding my administration.

If the laws enacted in 1907-10 were wrong—if the appropriations were useless or excessive, the succeeding Legislature had abundant opportunity to correct both and it's not becoming in anyone, posing as the friend of the present administration, to condemn the laws and appropriations made by the Legislature of 1907-10.

The Legislature of 1907-10 used $7,500,000.00 in excess of the previous administration, used it in the upbuilding of every department of the State and the lion's share, as it should have done, went to the schools and old soldiers.

The above outline shows where, either in fixed or continued appropriations, the amounts were invested, and I challenge any one to show that the State and citizens were not greatly benefited and respectfully ask which office and which appropriation will be repealed?

THE GREAT CORPORATION FUND.

In 1904 the Louisville and Nashville railroad used in Alabama elections $142,385.25 to debauch the voters in the endeavor to elect its candidate president of the railroad commission. What did the Louisville and Nashville railroad want with the Alabama railroad commission?

In the year 1913, the same railroad company is endeavoring to elect its candidate governor. What does the Louisville and Nashville Railroad company want with the Governor of Alabama?

The Louisville and Nashville railroad is now seeking control of the Alabama Legislature, House and Senate. What does it want with the Alabama Legislature?

The Louisville and Nashville in the past has sought to control every function of our State government, whether administrative, legislative or judicial; has sought through these sources the trusteeship of the State to develop its properties, uncontrolled or unregulated, free from competition, according to its own methods and with its own charges.

AN ERA THAT IS PAST.

President Wilson, in his New York speech, said that this kind of trusteeship and property development no longer appeals to the people and Mr. Underwood, in his Birmingham speech, said that this kind of business created a monopoly, and that in our government monopolies of whatever nature must be controlled or regulated.

TREAT ALL ALIKE.

If the charges of the Louisville and Nashville, the Central and the Western, both as to passenger and freight rates, are not regulated, then the restrictions on the rates of the seven railroads of the State which have been observing the law for six years should be removed and all their original high charges restored. This is common justice, as our laws should carry alike for every property and every interest of the State.

In plain terms, if the State is to be bossed and controlled by the railroads, it should be by all of them and not by one of them.

WHAT STATUTE RATES SAVED THE PEOPLE.

The Louisville and Nashville railroad had the State rates, passenger and freight, in effect for three years. Their own testimony shows that the difference between their rates, passenger and freight, and the State rates, passenger and freight, was about $700,000.00 per year—or $2,100,000.00 for three years.

Their own statement made in the Wall Street Journal, published July 14, 1912, shows that in 1910, the first year the Louisville and Nashville had in the Alabama freight and passenger rates, they earned 17.35 per cent; in 1911, 14.26 per cent; in 1912, 16.04 per cent, and this on par value of stock, which had been watered double, and this in addition to the immense sums spent with the press, with the courts and lawyers and in other debauchings of the people which had been charged to its expense.

This $2,100,000.00 was saved to the Alabama patrons of the Louisville and Nashville railroad on passenger and freight rates.

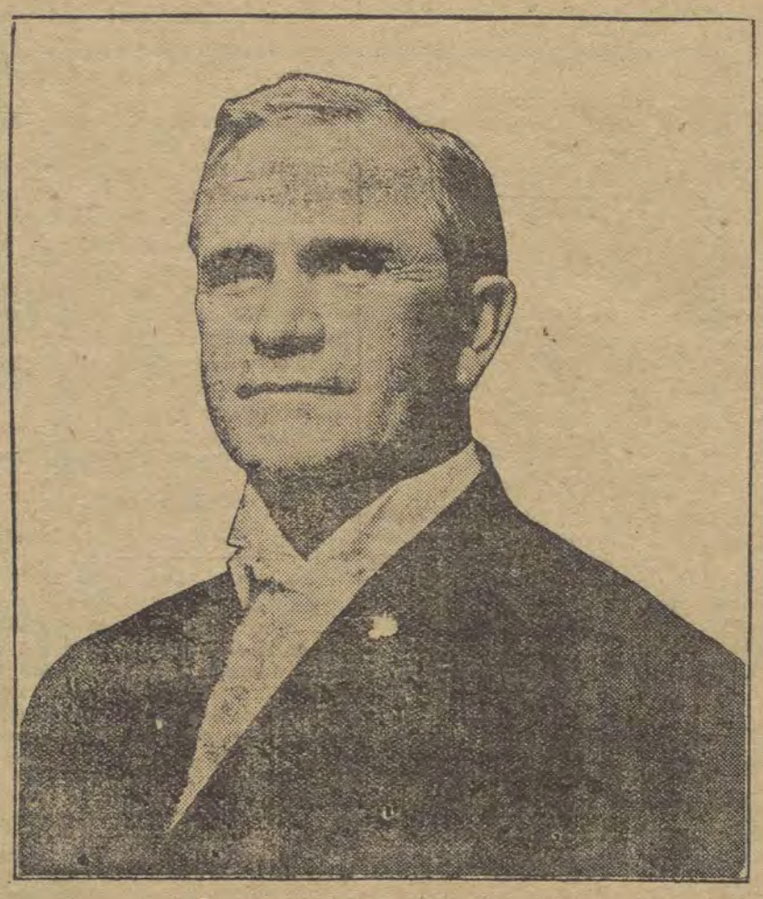
I estimate that this railroad system is one-third of the railroads of the State. All of the roads observed the rates for three years, and for these three years the patrons—that is, passenger and freight—were saved $6,300,000.00.

NINE MILLIONS SAVED IN ALL.

More than half the roads have had the rates in for six years—saving to the people an additional $3,000,000.00, or approximately $9,000,000.00 in all.

From this record of saving to the shippers of the State, and which saving the Georgia farmer has had for thirty-two years, the people will understand why this railroad system seeks through every debauchment of government to obtain control. They throw every environing influence around our politicians, whether bank president or the citizen, whose vote and influence is for hire, for the purpose of obtaining control. They plead that if they are not allowed to make their own charges against the people of the State they will not continue development, a development which every understanding man knows is made by super-taxing the people of the State to build property with the money of the State, not for the people of the State, but for the owners of the railroad, and in the end this secures to them an additional tax on the people.

Every influence in Alabama which could be approached has been approached and we have many instances of press and individuals essaying to be leaders, both in State and national democracy, and yet who are in every act



BRAXTON B. COMER.

the agents of this company and their allies to do that against the people of Alabama which every attitude of good government demands should not be done.

TRUE STATESMANSHIP.

To justly equalize tax assessments and wisely distribute the moneys of the State, constitutes statesmanship.

The $100,000.00 invested in attorneys' fees and court costs in the railroad litigation has already saved the shippers of the State—in passenger and freight charges—nine millions of dollars.

COMPARE FOR YOURSELF.

Let any shipper compare his freight receipts under the rates on the 110 commodities of common consumption, production and use—called the Comer rates—for the three years in which they were enforced on the N. C. & St. L., L. & N., Western, and Central, with the charges today on the same commodities as made by the same railroads. Also let any shipper on the seven other railroads, including the A. G. S., which have been observing the statute rates on the 110 commodities for six years, compare their rates, with the rates which were paid before the law went into effect, you will then fully understand the difference the Alabama shipper—and remember always that the farmer pays the freight—has been paying, and is on some of the roads now paying, more than the Georgia farmer has paid for thirty-two years. Remember again that the seven roads have had the rates in effect for six years and the other systems had the rates in for three years and there was no confiscation or destruction.

TOTAL RAILROAD LEVIES ON THE PEOPLE.

The total railroad charges against the shippers of the State for the four years of 1907-10 were $132,294,720.42. The State taxes for the same years were $18,712,745.00. The railroad taxes against the people of the State were $113,577,972.00 more than the State taxed its people for their own use and benefit. The State taxes have exact constitutional limitation of six and one-half (6 1-2) mills and the law limits the assessment to 60 per cent of value, and this is right, because the people should be protected even against their own assessor, and against excessive taxes for their own use.

IS OUR COMMISSION DOING ITS DUTY?

The State has a railroad commission law, drawn by Mr. Selheimer, and passed in 1907-10, made from the laws of the most progressive States for the protection of the shippers; and to more fully protect the people, the commission was made elective.

This is the only protection, outside of the Legislature, that the people have against this immense sum taxed for freight and passenger carriage. Is the commission discharging its duty? The freight charges against the State last year were $39,900,000.00, practically half as much as the value of Alabama's cotton crop, and more than double the State taxes for four years.

IS THE COMMISSION HELD CAPTIVE?

The only defense that Alabama can possibly have against these charges is the execution of the law in the establishment of reasonable freight and passenger rates. Is the commission doing it? Have the railroads captured the commission? If the commission will not act, if Governor O'Neal will not act, then the only relief is a new administration and a new Legislature which will act.

OUR TARIFF VICTORY.

The National Democratic Party, after a fifty years' struggle, have just accomplished a tariff victory, that is, reduced the tariff tax on all ordinary articles of common consumption, production and use, those things which save most to the common people.

They reduced the tariff two cents per pound on sugar, notwithstanding the people of Louisiana claimed that it would destroy a great property interest engaged in producing sugar.

They reduced the tariff eight cents per pound on wool, notwithstanding the sheep growers' protest that it would ruin the industry.

They largely decreased the tariff on all cotton and woolen goods against the protest of every manufacturer.

They decreased the tariff on all hardware and on every meat product. They even came to the Birmingham district, at Corey, now Fairfield, and reduced the tariff, even to the free list, on nails and wire goods.

These things were accomplished in the face of the strongest adverse lobby, a lobby in which it was shown that immense sums of money were used in the debauchery, of not only the voter, but of the Legislators also. The democratic argument used was that no interest should be allowed to write its own tariff, and today the strongest democratic argument, for endorsement by the people, is the immense sum saved from these protected industries in their charges against the people.

TAXING WEALTH, NOT POVERTY.

The Democratic Party went further than that and in the income tax law declared that taxes or money to run the government should be levied on incomes and not on consumption—that is, should be levied on the wealth and not the poverty of the country.

In the reduction of the Tariff, it has been said a thousand times that on the goods reduced in price by the removing of tariff charges, the profit would go to the middle man and not to the consumer—a statement as rotten as ever a demagogue or paid hireling got off.

The Alabama congressmen and senators, all elected as democrats, are now preening themselves on this great tariff reduction victory and it is well. The fight was long, hard and costly, but the value of the victory will be immense

All the evidence in this contest showed that no individual or corporation could be trusted to fix their own charges for any service or product; that in the end, it would be an excessive tax on the people.

ASKS GOV. O'NEAL TO APPEAL THE STATE'S FREIGHT AND PASSENGER RATES ENJOINED BY JUDGE JONES.

I call the attention of our national representatives, just returning home in the full flush of their tariff reduction victory, and ready to accomplish the further success of currency reform, to the fact that here at home we have also won a partial victory in our railroad tariff regulation laws. The Federal law requiring three Federal judges instead of one to sit on an injunction case, against the State law or against the railroad commission law, has had a most important bearing as has the impeachment of Judge Archbold of the interstate commerce court for liason committed with the Louisville and Nashville road. The abolition of the Federal interstate commerce court, evidently because of their interference with the interstate commerce commission, and the decision of the Federal Supreme Court in the Minnesota, Missouri and Arkansas rate cases sustaining the State's control of intra-state rates, has had a most beneficial effect. While the agitation is now on, we trust for a speedy, successful adjustment of our freight and passenger contention and particularly that all of our roads will speedily recognize the right of the State to control and adjust rates. I will suggest to Governor O'Neal that since this Supreme Court decision the rate cases in Alabama enjoined by the inferior Federal judge take on a new aspect and a new importance; that while it's true the appeal to the Supreme Court would cost quite a sum of money, yet the suit is so vital, of so much interest—even money—to the people involved that the importance of the appeal would justify and greatly outweigh the expenditure; that every citizen should ask the Governor to carry these cases to the Supreme Court.

LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE CLAIMS.

The Louisville and Nashville road still insist on the vested right to make their own tariff or taxes against the people—freight and passenger fares—their own way.

This claim of the Louisville and Nashvillle road is obsolete, and no longer has place in the government of a progressive people.

COMPARISONS WITH GEORGIA.

The Georgia farmer who ships a ton of fertilizer pays an average rate of $1.10 per ton. In Alabama, the same service is $1.50 per ton, or 40c per ton difference.

In Georgia, a builder pays an average rate of $10.00 per car on lumber. In Alabama, $50.00 per car.

In Georgia, the merchant can ship ten barrels of flour for $1.75. The Alabama merchant pays $2.40.

A farmer or truck gardener ships 100 pounds of potatoes in Georgia at 9 cents. In Alabama, the rate is 21 cents.

In Georgia, a carload of watermelons, average distance, is $10.00. In Alabama, $50.00.

In Georgia, a carload of cotton seed hulls costs $10.00. In Alabama, $17.50.

The average difference in the Georgia and Alabama freight rates on the 110 commodities is $1.00 as compared to $1.40. In other words, the Alabama farmer has to pay $1.40, where the Georgia farmer pays $1.00.

A GREAT BANKER'S HERESY.

An eminent banker, who possibly rides on a pass, advises the people to stop agitation for lower passenger and freight charges and allow the railroads to name their own rates; that we will get more railroad buildings, which would increase our population; increase our trade; increase development and thus greatly benefit the State, and if generally practiced, would not cost very much to any one citizen. He specially names the Louisville and Nashville railroad, after the judge of the inferior Federal court at Montgomery enjoined the State passenger and freight rate last year, as using twelve million dollars in double tracking, and also states that they would have built a short line to Mobile if it had not been for the railroad agitation.

GROSS DISCRIMINATIONS.

The Louisville and Nashville charges out of Birmingham, going towards Nashville, 3c per mile, and is contesting a 2 1-2c rate. The Louisville and Nashville charges out of Atlanta, going towards Chattanoga and Montgomery, 2c per mile, and the Louisville and Nashville charges on the 110 commodities out of Birmingham, towards Montgomery and Nashville, $1.40, where they charge for the same carriage out of Atlanta, going towards Chattanooga and Montgomery, $1.00. In other words, there is a difference against Alabama of $50.00 on the $100.00 in the passenger rate and $40.00 on the $100.00 in freight rate.

It is a strange argument that Georgia is hurt and Alabama benefited by such a discrimination in charges.

Alabama could take the overcharge and soon build, own and operate its own railroads. Such arguments as this belong to the out of date class and there is not a banker, business man or paper in Georgia who would advocate permitting the Louisville and Nashville, or any other road to change the Georgia freight and passenger rates to the higher Alabama rates claiming that it would aid and develop railroads in Georgia or any other property. Mr Wilson has well said that this species of trusteeship over the people for the development of personal property no longer appeals to the people.

All authority agrees that a power to tax is a power to destroy.

THE BANKER'S CLAIM REPUDIATED.

The people, in two successive elections in the State and one in the Nation, repudiated the destructiveness and untenableness of the claim put forward by the railroads, and I am astonished that it is so gravely set forth by so intelligent an authority as the Banker whom I have quoted. This claim is a direct repudiation of every principle of democracy; a direct repudiation of our tariff bills, so hardly won by the democratic party at Washington, and properly belongs to the environments of an Aldrich or a Smoot, and I don't know of any State other than Vermont or Utah which would endorse it as a State Policy.

STATE AND RAILROAD TAXES COMPARED.

The State taxes in Alabama are six million dollars per year for its own use and benefit, and the railroad taxes thirty-nine million dollars per year for their own use and benefit. Would the same authority allow the State Assessor a free hand in naming the taxes, on the general plea that it would greatly increase the State's power to accomplish good for all the citizens—even though it should be applied to the development of schools, increase of pensions and building of public highways?

OUR WATERWAYS.

Alabama is rich in waterways. A few days since, a great demonstration was made at Tuscaloosa on the arrival of the first steel barge. Many speeches of congratulation were made and future successful river-carriage prophesied. I will caution the barge projectors that the Age-Herald, unchallenged, published that the railroads would not allow freight carriage on Alabama waters; that the Louisville & Nashville Railroad in the last few years used $60,000.00 spent through Captain Staples in a single effort to destroy water competition running into the port at Mobile.

RELEASE OUR RIVER HIGHWAYS.

While, in every sense of the word, this is a reflection on our State and National Government, as no railroad should be allowed to obstruct by any tactics whatever a waterways channel or carriage, I appreciate that with Mobile awakened to its possibilities, and the Panama Canal opened, that these great resources of the State will be of much more use than any new railroad in the State, no matter where built. So I say, as one of the prime platform articles of the future: RELEASE the railroad embargo from our rivers and untie these greatest assets of the State.

A BANKING ILLUSTRATION.

Recently, the banks of Birmingham were in controversy with the banks of Montgomery over a question of exchange. Montgomery had advanced the rate from 1-8c to 1-4c and against this increase the Birmingham banks protested and fought. The Montgomery banks could easily claim that with this additional charge they could better do the business and while on the subject, would it be a very tenable proposition for the First National Bank of Birmingham to ask the right of charging 10 per cent for money instead of 8 per cent on a general proposition that with this increase of interest it could do more business, develop more land, and help in the general upbuilding of the State? Would it be a tenable proposition for the Avondale Mills to demand the right to charge 1-2c per yard more for goods on the general claim that it would be able to build more mills, give more people work, etc.? Or still again, how would it appeal to the First National Bank that its State and county taxes should be doubled in order to establish more schools, build more roads, etc., all of which would increase our population, increase our trade development and greatly benefit the State, and if generally practiced, would not cost very much to any one citizen?

Congress, under the leadership of Wilson has just demonstrated the absurdity of all such propositions, and for the full protection of the people has written the laws of the land.

ALABAMA AND WASHINGTON.

Is the Democratic party at Washington of any different material from the Democratic party in Alabama? Is the Democratic policy at Washington any different from the Democratic policy in Alabama?

Over the great Democratic tariff reduction victory at Washington, we should shout our vivas.

A REFEREE AND HIS PAPER.

What sort of a proposition is it to have the would-be Washington sponsor and Alabama referee in National Democracy, with the jingle of the corporation loot in his pockets, fighting the accomplishment of all these things in Alabama?

What sort of a proposition is it to have a paper that sold its columns to this great corporation to commit libel; whose columns are on the mercenary and not the patriotic side; to be the leader to carry Alabama back into the plunderings of the invisible government?

Esau sold his birthright for a mess of pottage. The dearest right that Alabama can have is the right to govern our State our own way by our own people and not from the offices of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad at Louisville, Kentucky.

THE SENATE TO INVESTIGATE.

Under the resolution of Senator Luke Lea, the Federal Senate by a viva voce vote instructed the Interstate Commerce Commision to investigate the methods and practices of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad and all of its subsidiary lines and companies. I suppose some Louisville & Nashville improvised decoy duck will say that this will hurt business and stop them from building roads, buying rails and cross ties, etc.

THE REAL RAILROAD WRECKERS.

Senator Lea said: "It is fashionable nowadays to accuse those who insist upon railroads obeying the law, of impoverishing the widows and orphans whose investments are in railroad securities. The railroad wreckers are those officials of railroads who, blinded by egotism and brief authority, are determined to ruin their railroads in defiance of law and without respect or regard for public opinion."

THE NEW ENGLAND EXAMPLE.

He says also that the President of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, Mellen's management, was directed more toward monopolizing the territory his road served, buying out and ruining competition and directing legislatures and coercing public officials, than in running trains safely, carrying passengers, and transporting freight.

ITS SOUTHERN COUNTERPART.

He says that "the Louisville & Nashville Railroad is the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad of the South. It's a defiance of public opinion, and an attempt to control Government by directing legislatures and coercing public officials. That they continue to oppose giving their patrons the benefit of a 2 1-2c fare when other railroads in Tennessee and adjoining states are making money in charging 2c and 2 1-2c fares; in fighting and defeating just legislation like the employers' liability laws; in crushing out competition and spending its stockholders' money in campaigns to punish public officials who have done their duty; to employ counsel to invoke the aid of courts

VANITY AND EGOTISM.

He says further: "Tennessee has always and always will be, not only friendly, but cordial to investment in its boundaries, when that capital comes to obey and not make its laws. Tennessee needs and will welcome more railroads, provided they will not try to create monopoly, will not tax their patrons sums beyond profitable rates for the purpose of enabling them to maintain a lobby and legislative agents that harm the railroad, and whose work only please the vanity and egotism of those who happen to be the temporary officials. Let every corporation in Tennessee and every corporation that will come to Tennessee remember that they are created by law and are not the creators of the law, with powers to coerce the lawmakers and direct the desires of the lawgivers, and there will be no anti-corporation fight in Tennesee."

THE GOVERNMENT CAN STOP IT.

I recently appealed to the National Government for help to stop this great interstate road from taxing the people of one State to debauch the voters of Alabama and to see to it that they quit coercion in the politics of Alabama. There is power in Washington to see that the Government of Alabama is left to the people of Alabama, and that the railroads shall be restricted to the running of their railroads. All railroads or any other interests should be run under the protection and control of the Government. If I succeed in accomplishing this, I have discharged the greatest service that could fall to the lot of a citizen of any State.

FROM FEDERAL COURT TO FEDERAL COURT.

The tragedy being committed by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, in going around from Federal Court to Federal Court seeking an injunction against statute rates—passenger and freight—of Alabama, can be equalled only by the red-headed peckerwood as he flies from tree to tree sounding for some rottenness in which to get a worm.

The late decisions of the Federal Judges and our Federal Supreme Court indicate that the people's rights—State's rights—are again above the horizon and we trust that the future will always insure this foundation to safe, good government.

AVOID DELILAH'S LAP.

In thanking Senator Lea and the Federal Senate for this reply to my appeal to the Federal authorities, God grant the Interstate Commerce Commission success in putting a stop to the most unrighteous interference with our State Government. To the people of Alabama, I declare again and again that my position in politics is to hurt nothing but to build up everything, but again and again I caution them to remember the story of Sampson not go to sleep in Delilah's lap. You will be delivered to the Philistines, your eyes put out and you be made to grind and grind and grind.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

The State of Alabama, Chilton County.

In Chancery at Clanton, Ala., District, N. E. Chancery Division.

J. D. Wesson vs. Eula Wesson.

In this cause it is made to appear to the Register, by the affidavit of Robt. H. Knox, solicitor for complainant, that the Defendant Eula Wesson is a non-resident of the State of Alabama and resides in the Town of Arkeny, in the State of Arkansas, and further, that in the belief of said affiant, the Defendant is over the age of twenty-one years.

It is therefore ordered by the Register, that publication be made in the Union-Banner, a newspaper published in Clanton, Ala., once a week for four consecutive weeks, requiring her, the said Eula Wesson to answer or demur to the same within thirty days after the 28th day of November, 1913, and failing so to do, a decree pro confesso will be taken against her in said cause.

Done at office, in Clanton, Ala., 28th day of October, 1913.

H. M. SIMPSON, Register.

Notice of Petition to Sell Lands to Divide

The State of Alabama, Chilton County. } Probate Court Oct. 29th, 1913

In the matter of the Estate of James Weldon, Sr., Deceased.

To the Sheriff of said County:

Whereas Peter Weldon of the Estate of James Weldon, Sr., deceased, has filed his petition in said Court for a sale of the lands described therein, belonging to said estate, for division, upon the ground that the same cannot be equitably divided among the heirs, and the 29th day of November, 1913, has been appointed for the hearing of said petition.

You are therefore, hereby commanded to cite Martha Littleton, Rina Littleton, Mary Goar, Katherine Baker, Lizzie Jones, Lishie Rhodes, Willie Weldon Ada Weldon, Walter Weldon, Henry Weldon, Minnie Weldon and Ada Mae Weldon to appear before the Court on said day to contest said petition if they think proper.

Witness my hand this 29th day October, 1913.

E. B. DEASON, Judge of Probate.

Prof. Herbert Solves Problem

A card from Rev. E. M. Butler, who submitted a problem in arithmetic some time ago to the school children of the county through the county papers, states that only one correct answer has been received by him, and that is submitted by Prof. S. H. Herbert, Principal of Thorsby Institute. The following is given by Mr. Butler as the correct answer: "The cars are moving at the rate of a mile in 4 minutes, 16 seconds."

Cotton Report.

Up to Nov. 1, 1913, the number of bales of cotton ginned in Chilton County was 11,845, as compared with 10,501 ginned in this county prior to Nov. 1, 1912.

Thanksgiving At Soldiers Home

On Thursday afternoon, commencing at two o'clock, weather permitting, a thanksgiving service is to be held at the old soldiers Home, in the large auditorium hall, especially for the benefit of the old men who are aged and otherwise prevented from attending church. The churches at Marbury and Movntain Creek have determined to participate. Rev. Greer and Mr. D. H. Marbury are both intending to deliver short addresses. The young ladies in the two towns and the neighborhood are to sing and assist in the observance of this service.

All are invited. It is desired that those who are yet on the bright side of life to come and engage with the old veterans in acknowleding their Creator and rendering to Him thanks for the preservation of their lives until this late day.

This announcement Maj. C. A. Gunn, who is active in the matter, wishes it known is made subject to the weather conditions. Visitors are cordialfy invited to be present.

J. H. Wallace To Speak Here.

John H. Wallace, Jr. State Game and Fish Commisioner, has announced that he will speak at the Court House in Clanton on Monday, November 24th. at ten o'clock, A. M. His address of course will be devoted to setting forth the principles of his claims to the Democratic nomination for Governor.

His 75th. Birthday.

Capt. J. M. Simpson visited Birmingham to celebrate his 75th Birthdy. He was accompanied by Mrs. Carrie McMasters. There they met seven other members of the family, one son and six grown daughters: Mrs. Anna Allen of Virginia, Mr. Rush Simpson and his wife, Mrs. Bessie Hestler, Mrs. Braem of Montgomery, Mrs. Breweer Miss Lucy Simpson, and Mrs. Smallem were present, as were also a large number of nephews and nieces.

Another Death At Lock 12.

Charles Harpes, a white man, about twenty four years of age happened to a fearful accident at the River Tuesday afternoon that resulted in instant death. He was working on a tower 90 feet high, and somehow lost his balance and fell to the foot of the structure, striking on a solid concrete basement. The injuries he received were almost innumerable. His skull was burst in several places, and the bones of his body and limbs were nearly all broken. The remains were brought to Clanton Tuesday night and prepared for interment, which will take place in Avondale, his home. A wife and two children survive him.

Meeting Of Fair Association.

At a meeting of the Stockholders of the Chilton County Fair Association at Clanton on Saturday, November 15th, Mr. W. H. Conway was elected President and Business Manager, and Mr. J. N. Dennis, Secretary and Treasure for the coming year.

A resolution was voted that it was a wish of the stockholders that gambling and immoral shows be eliminated from the Fairs as much so as possible.

Alabama Soul Winners Meet.

There was closed at Marbury last week one of the most ernest and praisworthy meetings that has ever occured in Alabama.

The Soul Winners Alabama Conference will pass into the religious history of our state as an undertaking that will grow as future years roll on.

The local interest as manifested by Mr. D. H. Marbury, Rev. O. W. Greer, and others was greatly aided by representatives from different portions of the state. Hon. H. S. D. Mallory, Rev. Dr. Batemen, Hugh F. Labimer, L. C. Palmer, J. E. Ramsey, Bunyan Davie, Mrs. W. G. Moody, Miss M. E. Kennedy, Miss Lillian Forbes, Mrs. M. A. Barrett, and others from different localities were present and during the four days session delivered telling speeches, all pertaining as to how to win souls to the Creator.

Bowman Speaks Here Monday.

We are authorized to say that Hon. P. G. Bowman, of Birmingham, will speak at Clanton on Monday November 24th 1913 at 10 A. M. and he requested that all who are interested in the issues of the day be on hand.

Clanton High School Notes

By Hoke Pipes and Willie Edwards.

"MORE TROUBLE."

There he is! There he is! exclaimed a voice as I was getting upon my feet again. I looked up and found myself again in the hands of a cop. He carried me to jail and in a few days I was brought before the judge. He pronounced me an outcast and sent me into the woods to take whatever might happen. I traveled all day long till late in the afternoon, when it began to snow. I came to a large evergreen tree the dense foliage of which offered an inviting shelter from the snow. Just as I started toward this tree I heard a low growl like that of a fierce animal. Quickly climbing the tree I looked down to the ground and faced an ugly hungry lion. The raving beast lingered around till night came on and caught me still "up a tree."

Kate Goodgame served as referee in the prize fight between Zoda and Nany the other day.

The owner of the 348 made a flying business trip to town the other day to get some shoes. He visited Kress's and observed a 10c pair of bolloons. Dock put them on and started. Well of course the thing began to ascend, for Dock can furnish the gas. He rose high in the air and started a lively aerial sail with the pleasant November breeze as his propellor. He passed over a hunter who saw him and taking him for some monster bird, took a shot at him and down he came. When he landed the hunter saw that his game was something not of the ordinary type and to avoid all danger of approaching it he shot it several more times to make sure it was dead. But fortunately the bullets didn't reach the vital spot, and for an account of the proceedings of the meeting between Dock and the hunter, just ask the former.

Annie Gragg was playing ball the other day. Failing to make a hit with the bat she tried hitting with the base. Failing again, she next took up a side of the house, thinking surely she could not miss with that. And she didn't. The ball just went through a window.

Oscar Jones, better known at "Tight Wad" has a clever scheme. He allows the kids to beat on him continuously and offers no resentment. The other day Annie Gragg pelted on him till he was swollen up in great knots. Oscar says where he gains by this is an increase in flesh.

Omar Reynolds is a very good boy. Why? Because Ed Teel does all the meaness and doesn't give Omar a chance.

Red Headed Wyatt, better known as Jean, has a black eye where Izora hit him the other day.

Oliver and Felton Mullins happened to an accident the other day; will tell you about it next week.

CARD OF THANKS.

I wish to thank Prof. Pickens for moving Bessie and Grace from near me. No machine could be invented to keep them quiet. Felton Mullins.

Dock Maddox has objected to us putting his name in the paper; so we have decided to write about Dock Yak instead. Do not get their names confused, for they are the same person.

A great prize fight was witnessed in our room the other day, between Izora and Annie. In the course of the combat some wild blows were made, the result of which was a stove flue knocked down by Annie's fist, and the ceiling riddled by a "swipe" which Izora aimed at Annie's head.

The world's series is not over yet. A tast game was played here recently by the girls. The features were the batting of Willie Belle Sartor, the serious fall of Libby McKee, the expert catching of Sallie Driver and the "fit" Dock had when she caught a fowl, the fast running of Izora Callen, and best of all Annie Gragg nabbed a hot liner which was about to break a window.

The foot ball team is getting along fine, but will be more lively when joined by Fatty Palmer and Joe Kanjutzky, better known as Rule Books.

Ed Teel has discovered a bit of natural history. He says a bee stung him the other day, and he soon was over the hurt of it. But shortly afterward a girl stung him, and it seems that he will never get over that.

Felton Mullins gives the following as his reason for being curly headed:

One night I fell into a barrel of syrup and of course it stuck all in my hair. I have ever since been well enough pleased with it to let it stay ond not comb it out.

District Sunday School Conven'n

Thorsby Items.

The Mayor of Thorsby called for a mass meeting to be held last Thursday night, to talk over the matter of raising funds to support the public school. Some of the citizens had assed their property so low that it was impossible to furnish tax money sufficient to run the school. Several took part in the discussion, and all agreed to pay a reasonable tax and have a public school. The Mayor presided over the meeting. Many went home feeling glad that they had been there, as they understood matters more clearly. Some of our people blamed the Mayor and Council for being short of school funds. It was shown clearly at the mass meeting that it was neither the Mayor or Council, but those who tried to put the value of their property so low in order to pay small tax, that there was no money for school purposes. It would surely be a disgrace on the intelligent people of Thorsby to have no public school. We trust this mutual agreement of the people will do for all time and a better feeling prevail.

Miss Evangeline Simonton left Thorsby last week to enter the Methodist Academy at Harlena, Ky.

Miss Grace Michelson left last week to enter a Girl's Training School in Birmingham. After spending one year there she will enter a hospital in Chicago to finish her course.

The moving picture show of Thorsby is meeting with great success. They furnish high-class pictures, and give the best entertainment possible for the small sum of ten cents each. Everybody ought to attend these entertainments every Tuesday night at Bates Hall. Come once and you will never miss another. The many friends of the young men who are furnishing the public with thhse entertainments wish them every success. Let's encourage them in their new enterbrise.

Dr. Smith and wife made a trip to Birmingham Saturday to see the famous Ball game.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

We have an abiding faith in the masses of the people to look after their interests aright. Sometimes a would-be-leader gets a partial view of the facts bearing on certain questions, and gives them to the public in a distorted way, influencing the people wrong for a while; but in due course of time the full facts are made known, and the misinformer is repudiated. This Editor has his opinion on the County High School question, but knowing that right will win, he has not been bursting his shirt displaying his ideas to the people. We think all discussions should be void of prejudices and personalities.

It seems from the discussions going on in the papers that some people are really determined to bring about the establisment of the High School. We have refrained from saying much on the subject, but it is an evident fact the Chilton County tax payer is not getting what justly belongs to him. For four years now he has contributed his pro rata to a fund now amounting to over half a million dollars, for the specific purpose of maintaining a system of high schools in other counties of the state, and as has been stated before, thirteen thousand of this should have come to our county.

Clanton is in the line-up for a full stock of political discussion during the next few days. On Saturday Capt. Hobson is scheduled to submit to our people his principles and views of the senatorial campaign. On Monday John H. Wallace and P. G. Bowman will speak here on the issues involved in the race for the gubernatorial nomination. We are expecting some big guns to be fired on these occasions, but somehow we do not prejudge they will be of those kind which produce a very effective echo.

HOUSEKEEPERS Must be Watchful

For great efforts are being made in this vicinity to sell baking powders of inferior class, made from alum acids and lime phosphates, both undesirable to those who require high-grade cream of tartar baking powder to make clean and healthful food.

The official Government tests have shown Royal Baking Powder to be a pure, healthful, grape cream of tartar baking powder, of highest strength, and care should be taken to prevent the substitution of any other brand in its place.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price per pound, and is cheaper and better at its price than any other baking powder in the world.

Women's Ailments

The ailments from which women suffer are many and varied so far as the symptoms indicate, yet they are all dependent upon a disorder in the female generative system, and a remedy that acts on the cause of the trouble puts an end to all the distressing symptoms as soon as the unnatural conditions are removed.

French Market Coffee Is Never Sold in Bulk!

No one can offer you "bulk coffee" that is a satisfactory substitute for French Market Coffee.

In the first place, the blend of coffees that produce that rich, aromatic flavor peculiar to the genuine French Market Coffee is a secret of the French Market Mills.

In the second place, even if the right blend was known, it would be impossible to reproduce the old time French Market slow roast and grinding process only obtainable by the splendid machinery of the French Market Mills.

In the third place, no one could reproduce the French Market process of packing coffee—untouched by human hands—in perfectly sealed cans.

If the leading coffee experts in the world cannot pick out the best coffees until they are roasted and served in the cup, how can you, Madam, afford to buy coffee in bulk that's without any guarantee as to its quality.

Let this coffee tell its own story. Serve French Market Coffee at every meal for several days. Be convinced by actual test that this is the best of all coffees.

FRENCH MARKET MILLS

NEW ORLEANS

DIRECTIONS—We recommend that you make French Market Coffee in your usual way. If you find it too strong, reduce quantity until strength and flavor are satisfactory. French Market makes more cups of good coffee to the pound than other brands, thereby reducing your coffee bill. (113)

MRS. JAMES A. HALL, Box 36, Norris City, Illinois.

In October, 1910, we received a letter from Mrs. Hall, from which we make the following extracts:

"About twelve years ago my health began to fail. I couldn't eat anything without suffering for it. I had heart burn, sour stomach, palpitation of the heart, smothering spells, pains in my sides and back. In fact, I suffered all over, and a cough almost like consumption. Doctors failed to relieve me; in fact, they didn't seem to know what ailed me. I continued to grow worse until I was able to sit up only a part of the time. I had almost lost all hopes of ever being any better.

"But one day some one threw some books in at my door. I read them and found them to be Peruna books.

"They described my feeling so truly I sent at once and got a bottle and began taking it. You pronounced my ailment systemic catarrh, and gave me some advice.

"When I had taken two and one-half bottles I began to eat without suffering. I continued to improve.

"When I had taken eight I was like a new person. That was nine years ago.

"I think Peruna the greatest family remedy there is, for so many ailments are due to catarrhal trouble. I would advise any one afflicted with catarrh to take Peruna and I am sure it will leave."

In the Revised "Ills of Life" we have many similar testimonials which should interest sick people everywhere. Sent free by the Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio.

C. R. MULLINS AGAIN ON HIGH SCHOOL.

Clanton, Ala., Nov. 17th, 1913
Editor Union-Banner,
Clanton, Ala.,
My dear sir and friend:

I thank you very much for the space given me in your issue of Nov. 6th, in which I set up my views on the County High School, and in reply to Mr. Oliver's letter in your paper written the week before. When your last weeks issue came out, I looked it over hoping to find something from some one citing me to at least one point wherein I was wrong, if I was wrong, in my views as set out in this letter, but finding nothing, except a little brain storm from Verbena, signed by H. B. Oliver, which failed to meet any of my argument for the high school, for its erection in Clanton and for the County to help build its school, I would now like to say a little more on our County High School if you will grant me the space, and I will be just as brief as possible. Mr. Oliver says I am raising a question over which there is no issue, and he is one of the first to come out in the paper and raise this issue.

Again, if Mr. Oliver had any logical reason for his objection to the county Commissioners helping to build this school, why didn't he come before this body and set up his claim, instead of shooting his little squirt gun in the paper and running; he was invited to come. I agree with him in saying now there is no issue, for his vain attempt to raise one has fallen to the ground, and I believe that the majority will be willing for the county to help build this school, as they are bound to see that it will be a benefit now and for all time to come, to all people alike in this, our good old county of Chilton. Now it is not as to my opinion where and how this building is to be erected, which will be an honor to us all and to our county for all ages to come. Neither is it as to Mr. Oliver's opinion how and where it shall be erected, but the question is, shall we have the school; and yet the $3000.00 appropriation from the State; and whose duty is it to build this school? Mr. Oliver says if its built in Clanton let Clanton's community build it, as they would be the sole beneficiaries. Well, we might say with the same propriety that if Montgomery is going to have the Capitol, let the city of Montgomery build it, as they would be the only community in the State benefitted. Well I don't know, Montgomery may not be the proper place for the Capital, and Ben may have it changed. But back to the Chilton County High School, as stated in my former letter, if Clanton is not the place for this school to be built with all of its advantages as set out in my letter, then where is the proper place? And if it is not the duty of the County to help, why not? As it is for, and will benefit all the people. This is what I would like for Mr. Oliver to answer. I would also like for him or some one else to name a site for this school that would be more in touch with all the people of the county than Clanton. Can you do it? Think of this, and think of it seriously; its not a frivolous matter, but one of vital importance. Where is the $13,000.00 that our children have lost already, by us not building this school at first? We have paid in the taxes to the State, and its gone from our boys and girls forever. Are we going to keep this up? And continue to rob our own children, or if we have none of our own—our neighbors children. There is one thing sure, we are going to pay in the taxes just as we have been doing, and the State is not going to give us back one cent of this appropriation until we build our school. Suppose the county had built the school out right, at an outlay of $12,000.00, we would have already had this back distributed among our children in the way of training, both [illegible] and intellectual. Don't you think this would have been a good investment for the county, and an honor to the Commissioners, and to the entire county?

Now, Clanton is not asking the County to build it all, which is perhaps its duty to do, but only to give $4,000.00 which will only be about $700.00 of the County's money, out side of a radius of five miles of Clanton, as within this scope according to the tax books, most of the taxes are derived. It would mean only about 60c to the man in the rural district paying taxes on $1000.00 worth of real estate and nothing to the tenant at all, yet giving to all the same benefits of the school alike. Is it possible there is a man in this county that would not be willing to contribute as much as one dollar to the erection of this high school? For his children; grand children and great grand children to reap the benefits for all time to come? And is there a man in this county but what believes that Clanton is the proper place for this school? If so, let him speak out for himself, for Mr. Oliver has utterly failed to defend this proposition.

We must get broader on this question of education along all lines. This school when built, expects to instruct the boys also along the agricultural line, which will be the only school of this kind in the county. Don't you think this will be worth a great deal more to our county than the pitiful sum of $4000.00 or $5000.-00? Or do you want our boys to drift back to the days of old scooter plows and wooden plow stocks like I use to plow up in Stumps Hills, and Mr. Oliver over in Coosa County? No, we are not going to do any such thing as this. Mr. Conway has got the boys going and we are going to keep it up.

Now, as to Mr. Oliver's opinion as to Clanton's would be politicians, you see he is just as unreasonable in his remarks along this line as he is for the county to help build the county high school, when he says that they have the political trail blazed out for the next decade. So you see Mr. Oliver is wrong in this, and don't you all believe he is wrong about the county helping to build its high school, which will mean advantages to the boys of this entire county, and qualify them more fully to fill our offices, not only for the next decade, but for all time to come. I believe if I was Mr. Oliver, before writing many more articles on the county high school, I would go to some specialist on surgery and have my brain opened up and turned over, take some get right heart drops so that I could think and figure a little. Surely he has been taking some knock out drops, for he has failed to meet my argument in a simple instance, or to carry his point to the satisfaction of any fair minded man, I submit let him be Democrat, Republican, Progressive, Bull Moose, or Independent. Talk to me about this school not benefitting more than five miles around where it is built; we all know better than this, and I believe Mr. Oliver does too. This is a question that appeals to us all alike as I see it, and of equal benefit.

Now, Mr. Editor, I hope that I will not be forced to appear again on this subject. I feel that every fair minded man in the county agrees with me, as well as yourself, but if you need me, let me know and I will be Johnny on the spot. I have a few more loaded shells. There is no such thing as intimidating a man when he is on the right side. Where is the County Superintendent of Education, and the other leaders of the people? Why don't they speak out and let us see where they stand on this great and vital high school question and its erection; don't leave me to fight it out by myself. I have no axe to grind. Gentlemen, come to the front; speak out for the right; Chilton county folks are no fools, and leading them around by the nose by designing parties is a thing of the past. Our people know when a thing is reasonable and right. So speak out if you want to hold your office, and then you have done this, I feel sure that we will build the school, which will carry out the old motto of equal benefits to all, and special favors to none.

Now Mr. Editor, I am just beginning to think of a few things I would like to say, but I will not attempt to assume on your space and time any longer, but I do hope for the sake of the Chilton county boys and girls, that are now ready and waiting for this school, to see it built at once, and for all future generations to live in this, our God blessed home, old Chilton.

Now as to the political outlook in and around Clanton, I am not so well posted perhaps as my friend Mr. Oliver, but I am inclined to agree with him on his coming in the next decade.

We must educate our children; this is the only hope of our people and of our country, and as B. B. Comer well said in his speech the other day in Cullman, we must go forward with education; no backward step in the incouragement of education and school facilities. Progress means greater state responsibillty to schools. The state's best asset is its boys and girls; an adequate state school system is vital; efficient citizenship depends on the equipment which education gives the rising generation.

So, now let's get busy and build our school. We have no further time to wrangle over this question of such vital importance to us all, life is to short; let's build our school, and put old Chilton on the map.

Now, in conclusion I want to say, I hope to see this school built, and I believe it is going to be done, and when the boys and girls begin to come in from the rural districts to attend this Chilton county free high school, which will be a revolution in education for good old Chilton, that all will be benefitted and satisfied.

Thanking you for your kind indulgence, and with best wishes for one and all, I am sir,

Yours most truly,
C. Reese Mullins.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Philately and History.

An interesting chapter in philatelic history, and in the history of Europe, is closed by the decision to suppress the foreign postal agencies in Crete as the result of the union of that island with Greece. Austria, Great Britain, France, Russia, and Italy have all maintained post offices in Crete, as in Turkey, and there is at the moment much speculation in philatelic circles as to whether the Levantine post offices maintained by the powers, among which Germany is also included, will not be closed as well.

Tackle Catarrh Now Be Free All Winter

Avoid Colds, Stall Pneumonia, Keep Your Nose Clear and Your Throat Free.

Don't Wait Till You're All Bunged Up. Use S. S. S. Now.

If you will go into any first class store and get a bottle of S. S. S. you are on the way to getting rid of Catarrh. But don't let anyone work off that old trick of something "Just as good."

S. S. S. is taken into the blood just as naturally as the most nourishing food. It spreads its influence over every organ in the body, comes through all the veins and arteries, enables all mucous surfaces to exchange inflammatory acids and other irritating substances for arterial elements that effectually cleanse the system and thus put an end to all catarrhal pollution. S. S. S. cleans out the stomach of mucous accumulations, enables only pure, blood-making materials to enter the intestines, combines with these food elements to enter the circulation, and in less than an hour is at work throughout the body in the process of purification.

The medicinal components of S. S. S. are relatively just as essential to well-balanced health as the nutritive properties of the grains, meats, sugars, and fats of foods. Any local irritating influence in the blood is rejected by the tissue cells and eliminated by reason of the stimulating influence of S. S. S.

You will soon realize its wonderful influence by the absence of headache, a decided clearing of the air passages, steadily improved nasal condition, and sense of bodily relief that proves how completely catarrh often infests the entire system.

You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores. It is a remarkable remedy for any and all blood affections, such as eczema, rash, lupus, tetter, psoriasis, boils, and all other diseased conditions of the blood. For special advice on any blood disease write to The Swift Specific Co., 202 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Do not trifle with substitutes, imitations or any of the horde of "Just as good" Counterfeits of S. S. S.

James Burges Killed At Dam.

Assistant Supt. of Construction at Lock 12 falls from Derrick to instant death.

The latest addition to the death list at the construction of Lock I2 on Coosa River was made on Tuesday about nine o'clock when James Burges Assistant Supt. of the McArthur Bros. Co. fell from a derrick about 35 feet high and was killed instantly. His fall was clear, having nothing to catch to, and he struck the ground on his head. The only wound received was a large fracture of the skull caused by striking the edge of a large timber on the ground where he fell.

Mr. Burges was about forty years old, and unmarried. His home was in New York. His brother, who was also working at Lock 12, left Tuesday to accomyany the corpse to his home for burial. The deceased and his brother have both made many friends in Clanton while employed here, and every one is sorely grieved to hear of the sad misfortune.

J. Damsky of Maplesville.

Mr. J. Damsky, the big merchant of Maplesville, and one of the largest in the county, was in Clanton Tuesday on business. Some weeks ago Mr. Damsky announced his intention to discontinue his mercantile career, but he informs us that he, like other wise men sometimes do, has changed his mind. He has decided to continue in business at his same place, and is to place before the public in the near future, some wonderful opportunities. Watch the papers for his announcement.

Former Teacher Practicing Med.

Many people in this community will remember Prof. L. C. Ellis, who once taught in the public schools of this county, and will learn with pleasure the success this young man is now making in his medical career He is practicing his profession in Memphis, Tenn. A long letter from him to one of his friends here says he is enjoying a promising career. Dr. Ellis is a native of Coosa county, and taught in this county about six years ago. He gave up teaching and went to the Birmingham Medical College and from there to Memphis where he graduated, and last year entered his practice. His many friends predict for him even greater success in future, and wish for him the full realization of every lofty aspiration he may have.

Wedding Bells At the Home.

Strange occurrences sometimes happen at the Old Soldiers Home, near Mountain Creek, but none so far that eclipses the marriage of Mr. T. B. Hunt, a wealthy farmer residing near Prattville, and Miss Lila Strange who has heretofore resided near the Old Soldiers Home.

Mr. Hunt has seen 63 pleasant winters, which have had a tendency to streak his locks with silver gray, while the blushing bride—a pretty girl of 23 summers—with sombre blonde tresses and winning features, has grown up like a healthy flower to blossom.

The ceremony was a prearranged affair. The pretty girl and her mother, and younger sister came to the Soldiers Home and there met Mr. Hunt with the license, Rev. O. W. Greer and a "big bunch" of old veterans, and after a few minutes the pretty wedding was commenced and ended by the happy couple dining with the old veterans.

The Home bell served a double purpose by ringing out for the noon hour, and "wedding bells" at the same time. They left the Home, followed by "showers" of well wishes at 2 p.m., for their colonial residence in Autauga county.

Monday Was A Political Day

According to previous announcements several political lights loomed up in Clanton early Monday morning, and when Judge Pearson arrived to open Circuit Court he found that the court house was filled with an audience listening to the political speeches of John H. Wallace, P. G. Bowman and Len F. Greer.

Mr. Greer's speech on his candidacy for Commissioner of Agriculture was made in an earnest way and fairly well received.

J. H. Wallace was heard on his claims to the Governorship, and P. G. Bowman spoke in the interest of Capt. R. F. Kolb.

Before the end of the political discussions was reached Judge Pearson called for the court room.

Circuit Court In Session Here

Fall Term Being Held Before Judge Pearson.

The Fall Term of the Circuit Court for 1913 convened at the Court House on Monday morning, before Judge W. W. Pearson of Montgomery. Hon. F. L. Tate of Wetumpka was at his post as Solicitor.

The grand jury was drawn and with a very impressive charge from the judge, started on their labors. Judge Pearson, as he has always done, made an appealing charge, filled with the soundest judgment. He touched on the subject of good roads, and other matters pertaining to progress of the county.

Hon. Tipton Mullins Is Up Again

The many friends of Hon. Tipton Mullins are glad to meet him on the streets of Clanton again. For many weeks he has been confined to the sick room, and has spent most of the time in an infirmary in Birmingham. Mr. Mullins states that he is feeling well, and thinks it only a matter of time and patience till he will enjoy good health again. His absence at circuit court is particularly noticeable. It has been for many years that he was present before the bar every term, but this time he is not participating.

We sincerely hope Mr. Mullins will continue his progress toward normal health again.

If Underwood and Hobson are each such men as the other says he is, it seems to us that neither deserves the place he aspires to.

Read the article by Prof. Pickens on the High School question in this week's issue. It is the real argument, and can do nothing but open up the exact situation. His contention is strictly facts and figures, and is founded on reliable records.

We must ask our patrons and supporters to still be patient with us in getting out our paper. We have started on the solution of the matter which has had us handicapped, and expect soon to be over the hard place. Then we assure you a reward for your consistency.

Mr. J. L. Smith, a good old Progressive of Beat 15 was in our office Wednesday, and spoke many words of encouragement for our paper. It causes us to feel thankful to listen to such men. It makes us feel the reality of having the appreciation of our patrons, and is encouraging to know they are in sympathy with us and our cause.

Circuit Court is going on now, tha Grand Jury is in session, business is lively, and things in general have a kind of progressive moving spirit. And before long election time will be coming around to add its part to the onward move of things. Get ready for the game by paying your poll tax now.

Don't forget that December 18th is the day set by the Commissioners Court to decide the matter of giving the four thousand dollars toward establishing the Chilton County High School At this time the Commissioners want to hear all arguments, for and against the matter; so if you have any plea to make, you should be on hand to present it. Don't lie idle till they act, and then criticize their judgment in the matter.

"STARVING TO DEATH"

Was Mrs. Bell, of Florida, When She Began Taking Peruna.

"Yes, I was starving to death," said Mrs. Emma Bell, of Fort Pierce, Florida, Box 204, "when I began to take Peruna. I could not eat anything. If I swallowed anything it soured on my stomach. My stomach was very much swollen. My bowels acted as if I had acute dysentery. I was in great distress and pain. Three doctors had been employed, but gave me no relief. I was continually growing worse.

I Was In Despair.

"In my despair I caught at every straw. Picking up a newspaper I saw some account of Peruna. There was a testimonial from a woman who had been troubled much like myself. I concluded to try Peruna.

I Wrote to Dr. Hartman.

"At the same time I wrote to Dr. Hartman. He pronounced my case catarrh of the stomach and bowels. I soon began taking Peruna. At once I began to improve. After taking half a bottle my stomach was so improved that I could eat some."

I Began to Recover.

Then this good housewife goes on to narrate in detail her rapid improvement and final recovery. She said, "After taking two bottles of Peruna I was strong enough to stand up to wash the dishes." When she began taking Peruna she weighed 102 pounds. After she had taken five bottles of Peruna she weighed 122 pounds. She concludes by saying that she is well.

It Was Twelve Years Ago.

The letter from which the above quotations were made was received January 29, 1901. In a later letter, written September 11, 1904, she says, "I sing the praises of Peruna far and near. It is used a great deal in our vicinity. This seems to be a bad place for catarrh." We have received letters from her since. The last time we heard from her, December 1912, she was still a friend of Peruna.

For other testimonials on catarrh of the stomach, see "Ills of Life," sent free. Address Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio.

The stomach and bowels are lined with a mucous membrane. They are therefore subject to catarrh, the same as the nose and throat. Catarrh of the stomach and bowels will derange the functions of these organs. The stomach can no longer digest food. The food lying in the stomach, even for a short time, without digestion, immediately sours. The souring produces gas and irritation.

Food Sours In the Stomach

A portion of the undigested meal is absorbed into the system by the blood vessels of the stomach. This poisons the whole system, producing a condition now known as autointoxication; self poisoning. The fermenting, irritating mass, as it passes down into the bowels irritates the bowels, producing sometimes a chronic diarrhea, sometimes producing the very opposite, constipation.

The average dyspepsia medicine helps to artificially digest the food. Even when such medicine does its work it is only temporary. A permament relief can only be expected when the catarrh is overcome.

Symptoms of Catarrh of the Stomach.

The symptoms of catarrh of the stomach are: First, heartburn. Second, food rises in throat after meals. Third, sour stomach. Fourth, heavy feeling after eating. Fifth, stomach bloated, belching of gas. Sixth, palpitation of heart. Seventh, poor digestion, have dyspepsia. Eighth, tongue coated light brown. Ninth, tenderness over pit of stomach. Tenth, cannot bear tight clothes around waist.

People who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.

Much the Best for This Climate!

The French Market Roast and Blend Make It Essentially a Southern Coffee

Great Travelers and Explorers agree that the food and drink peculiar to the country where it is used should always be adopted in that country.

French Market Coffee is the coffee of the coffee-producing countries, where climate most nearly corresponds to that of our Southern States.

It is therefore, much better suited for Southern consumption as regards food value, etc., than coffees roasted for other climates.

This accounts for the marvelous success of French Market Coffee; and why it is called the National Drink of the South.

Formerly it could only be had at the old French Market, where the quaint old stalls were crowded with the most brilliant society of the South, drawn together to enjoy the matchless coffee known nowhere else in America.

Now by the establishment of the French Market Mills with the special machinery necessary, this wonderful old blend is preserved for their descendants.

The invention of perfectly-sealed tins allows shipment all over the United States without loss of freshness and flavor.

Try it once upon your own table and see if anyone of your family would be willing to use again the ordinary kinds of coffee.

French Market Coffee is Now The National Drink of the South

DIRECTIONS—We recommend that you make French Market Coffee in your usual way. If you find it too strong, reduce quantity until strength and flavor are satisfactory. French Market makes more cups of good coffee to the pound than other brands, thereby reducing your coffee bill.

Ambition

"Ambition is a fiery steed to be ridden with a curbed bit."

Please note, however, that the author says that ambition is to be ridden.

Don't let ambition ride you. Let it be a powerful moving force in your daily life, carrying you to greater effort and accomplishment. But remember, always, that you were made with a set of brains, to think, and that out of thought should come judgment.

Judgment is the curbed bit. Use it, to guide the fiery steed, ambition, safely along the right road. Do not use it to hold ambition to too slow a pace; to tire it down and break the spirit. Don't ride so slowly that your more pushing competitor will outstrip you in the race for success.

Pity the man without ambition! And pity the man with ambition but without judgment to guide it!

Men are moving daily through opportunities. The farmer, if he is ambitious, can have the best farm in his community. The merchant, with ambition, can do the largest business in his community. The manufacturer, with ambition, can make the best article and sell the most of it in his territory.

Provided, the ambition put behind the effort is the genuine article, and not a weak counterfeit.

The L. & N. is anxious to co-operate with ambitious individuals, be they merchants, farmers, or manufacturers.

It has in its employ men of expert knowledge and long practical experience whose business it is to specialize along various lines of human endeavor.

The service of these experts is free, because the L. & N. is ambitious to develop the territory through which its lines operate. It wants to see the country prosper, so that the L. & N. will prosper.

Our ambition to supply the best service supplied by any railroad anywhere is as nearly realized as is humanly possible under existing conditions. We now want to supply that best service to the best territory anywhere.

Keep your ambition to the fiery point all of the time. Don't work hard and determinedly for a short time, and then get discouraged. Genuine ambition does not give way to discouragement. The Clanton Mercantile Co.

Mr. Pickens On High School.

Clanton, Ala., Nov. 22, 1913
Editor Union-Banner,
Dear Sir:

Whenever any question comes up wherein the interest of some are involved more than those in a different location, a difference of opinion arises as to what is the best way to serve the best interest of all, or the best interest of the greatest number. For some time I had felt that the Chilton county tax-payer, his boy, and the right were unconsciously discriminated against from an educational standpoint. The public records show that the Chilton county tax-payer has paid his pro-rata part of $573,000 for the specific purpose of maintaining County High Schools in other counties of the state, and that during this time Chilton has been due from this county high school fund $13,000. No one disputes that, and that the county will continue to lose $3,000 annually, and possibly more, until some community in the county meets the state's requirements for a suitable building and land.

Being unable to find any community in the county willing to raise the amount of funds necessary, I went before the county Commissioners and explained the conditions and asked them to contribute one-third, the necessary amount, which would amount to $4,000, to any community raising the other two-thirds, or $8,000. The difference of opinion is in the county donating the $4,000. I contend it is right, others contend it is wrong. There is no issue as to whether anyone favors a high school or not. All say they favor it, yet I must admit that their educational enthusiasm is very weak if they understand all the facts in the case. Everybody agrees and our past experience proves that no individual locality in the county is willing to raise the full $12 000 for a county school, and that the county would now be $1,000 to the clear if the county officials had paid the full $12,000 in the beginning to the most desirable community.

Those who oppose the county giving the $4,000 offer as their reason—when they give any—that the school is not a county school, that it is wrong fundamentally, and that they are going to have such school abolished. In the last ten days I have received letters from nearly every one of those schools, and they average between 85 and 90 pupils, and 36 per cent of those, or between 30 and 35 pupils, come from beyond a two mile radius. They all report pupils from every section of the county and that the schools are looked upon with favor by the people of the county. Of course all talk about abolishing the schools is absurd, but for arguments sake we would like to ask a few questions. Of course if those schools are abolished the people will have to elect a legislature to do the work. Judging from what the people have done during the last two elections, we fail to see that the people have anything like that in their minds. Comer and his legislature were elected by about five-sixths of the voters of the atate and they gave us the High school; and during one of their special sessions, they passed an act permitting the county Commissioners to appropriate money for the erection of suitable buildings for such schools. Later on O'Neal and his legislature were elected by a like majority, and they increased the appropriation to the schools from $2,000 to $3,000, and now it seems that the people are going to send Mr. Comer back to Montgomery for another four years, they like his school laws so well. These being the facts in the case, I fail to see who the "they" is. The people of Chilton county elect their officers and I think I have talked to every one of them on this matter, and they, with one exception, say they see the facts as I do. Can those who are opposing this matter say that the people are incapable of self government? I have an abiding faith in the people's ability to look after their interest aright, when they are brought to a full knowledge of all the facts concerning any question. It is true that certain designing politicians for selfish or sinister reasons hane often times in the past led the people astray, but when they had had time to reflect on their acts they have ever steered themselves onward and upward. Of course I do not intend to impute ill motives to anyone in the matter now under consideration, but I do feel that some have a distorted view on the question. As a further argument to the abolishment of such schools, I would like to call your attention to what some of our leading educators have to say about them. Prof. J. B. Hobdy, the man who has done so much for the corn club movement, and who was president of the Alabama Educational Association, last April in Montgomery in his opening address said: "I regard Alabama's County High School system a part of and an important factor in rural education. Important, first, because more than 95 per cent of the pupils who attend them, never attend school elsewhere; second, because these schools give training to a large number of rural teachers; and, third, because the larger per cent of the pupils attending them come from agricultural homes. I am convinced that these legislators creating this system were promoted by a desire to afford an opportunity for a high school education to every boy in his home county, such as would better prepare him for the life he must live. It appears to me that Alabama's law makers could do nothing which would make for better rural life, more speedily or surely, than by providing these classes of schools with means sufficient to meet these crying needs." Dr. George H. Denny, president of the University of Alabama said: "The articulation of the University with the four year high school, I conceive to be the most constructive educational achievemedt of a generation in this common wealth. There has not been a single event in our life that has done so much to reveal to the popular mind the unity of the educational process."

The foregoing statements were made in Montgomery last spring and are expressive of the educational thought of the teachers of the state. Again I might say that these gentlemen have behind them an organization of 3500 teachers who make and shape all our school legislation. Instead of abolishing them, don't you see in Mr. Hobdy's speech a call for more money "to meet those crying needs"? Will we sit idly by and continue to pay our tax money for the purpose of educating the boys in the other counties of the state and deny our home boy an equal opportunity?

Having shown that the schools are really county schools by having 36 per cent of their pupils from outside a two mile radius, and from all sections of the county, and that subsequent elections have proven that the people approve of them, I think you are ready to agree with me that it is foolish at least to talk about abolishing them.

Some say that the Commissioners would be taking the people's money and building Clanton a high school. There was nothing said about giving the funds to any community. I want it to go to the community most convenient to the masses and where most good can be accomplished. But for argument's sake we will go into that phase of the question and say that the school would be located in Clanton. The assessed valuation of taxable property of Chilton county is $4,670,781, of this amount 77 per cent or $3,596,501.37 is owned by corporate interest, 23 per cent or $1,074,279.63 is owned by individuals. The tax collector said approximately one-fourth of the individual tax property would lay within a two mile radius of Clanton. If the foregoing statements be true, then the 23 per cent of the $4,000, which is $920, would be paid by the individuals and of this amount Clanton would pay $230, leaving the entire individual citizenship outside of Clanton paying only $690. But the records show that 36 per cent of the pupils come from beyond the two mile radius, and 36 per cent of the $13,000 already lost is $4,680. Now subtracting the $690 from the $4,680 and we have a loss of $3,990. This is the people's money sure enough, not Clanton's nor the railroads, but the country people's living outside of a two mile radius from Clanton.

I still hear them say that they are in favor of education. Don't you believe that 90 per cent of the teachers of Chilton county see this proposition as I do? One man agreed to this and explained his answer by saying that they wanted a job. There will not be over four teachers in the school, then aren't the teachers a very weak set morally to hazzard principle for such a meager prospect for a position? Do you believe you could find 90 per cent of the people of Chilton county that would sacrifice principle for such meager prospects for a position? Certainly not. Then does not that reasoning indict the principles of education and prove them damuable in their influences? Have not the teachers generally speaking avoided themselves of more than the average ability in education?

Now, I have faith in the people of Chilton county seeing this matter in the best light to their interests as tax payers. My figures are correct unless some error has been made in calculation. Study them, and if my contention is not right in your sight well and good, but don't listen to this talk of abolishing the schools.

In conclusion I want to say that about one-third of the counties of the state have either assisted in the building of those schools, or are assisting in their maintenance. They are doing a great work for the agricultural uplift of the counties in which they are located.

The Commissioners, I understand will give a hearing on the matter on Thursday, December the 18th. Mr. Conway suggests that we have the meeting at one o'clock in the afternoon, so that those desiring may come.

With the very best wishes for all, but with an uncompromising conviction in the right of my contention, I am

Good Roads Association.

Reports of the Seventeenth Annual Session of the Alabama Good Roads Association, which met in Mobile November 20th 22nd, show that that meeting must have been the most interesting and profitable in the history of the same. This body has made great progress during the past seventeen years in arousing public sentiment in favor of good roads. It has led every fight has had for its object the betterment of the roads of this State. The Mobile meeting passed strong resolutions advocating the placing of convicts on the public roads, urging State and national aid and endorsing Good Roads Days for 1914, which proved so popular in Alabama during the years 1912 and 1913. A movement has been started to make the Days permanent, seems destined to become nation wide and observed in every State in the Union. This is certainly a praise worthy movement that was started by the Alabama Good Roads Association. We hope to see every patriotic Alabamian observing these days in 1914. They can and should be made the greatest success possible

An Interesting Visitor.

Last Friday we had the pleasure of entertaining and being entertained by Mr. Calvin Moates, a young man from Verbena, who is deaf and dumb. He is fairly well educated, being able to read and write very legibly, and as the editor is not very well acquainted with the curious way in which correspondence is usually carried on With such a person, we had to resort to writing as our medium of conversation.

Mr. Moates had been vistitng relativer here, and was just returning home when he came in to see us. He leaves about December 15th for Talladega, where he completes his education at the school for deaf and dumb.

We were very much impressed with his friendly bearings, and would have been pleased with a much longer visit. It is our hope to see him again when he chances to be in Clanton.

Rev. Fancher At Baptist Church

Announcement has been made to the effect that Rev. Henry Fancher of Montevallo will preach at the Baptist Church in Clanton next Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock hour. He is well known in Clanton as a minister of ability, and it is hoped that a good congregation will be present to hear him. Everybody come.

GOVERNMENT COSTS $1,108,631,777

Amount Required to Operate U. S. in 1915

Congress is asked to appropriate just $1,108,631,777 to operate the government of the United States during the fiscal year 1915, accordin to the estimates prepared by each department and sent to the House Monday by Secretary McAdoo to the treasurer.

With this sum the government will maintain the battleshtps and forts and the armies in the states and in the countries that border the seven seas; it will keep the scales of justice balanced, endeavor to retain the friendship of foreign nations, look after domestic prosperity and seek at entervals to discover new ways in which to better health, improve living conditions and investigate the merits of the thousand new things in industry and commerce that come to its notice.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.00.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

The regular session of the Sixty-third Congress opened on Monday. The entire Alabama delegation answered the roll call; even Hobson was there.

The chief actions of this Congress will be centered around the Currency Bill. The provision for government control of the trusts has been given a great deal of study,and this, with banking reform measure, is expected to occupy the principal discussions for the greater part of the winter.

You should not fail to keep in mind that this is the time of the year to pay your poll tax. Do not wait till the firsf of Feburary gets here and find that you have waited too late. Pay up now, and thus be assured of the privilege of supporting your own convictions in the elections which are to come up next year.

Mr. W. H. Conway of Jemison was caller ar our office Thursday. He has in this issue a statement regarding the high school question, and urges everyone to be present at the meeting of the Commissioners Court which ss set for December 18th. Mr. Conway has a long argument upholding his views of the school and his contentions are backed by facts and figures which he has obtained from records. Everyone should come to this meeting and hear the claims of both sides, and see for your selves the conditions that surround the matter in question. Personally the Editor is in favor of the school, but at the same time he stands ready to be convinced that he is wrong if anyone can produce the argument necessary for such conviction. We are anxious to hear the arguments brought out in open meeting.

We are very sorry that there are some of our subscribers who fail to see how it is that we cannot give them a full size paper now as we have always done. Several times we have tried to make this clear, but it seems that we have almost failed.
We are aware of the fact that we cannot just at present give what you justly deserve in a newspaper, and are very sorry of it, for it is our desire to make the paper measure up to the standard of the best. But however much we may want to give you a better and bigger paper, we absolutely cannot do it under the handicap we are having to bear now. We must have some time to rearrange things, and get a new Press that is able to do our work. Buying printing machinery, like any other business investment, should not be made in a rush, without knowing what you are getting. That kind of trading is exactly what has gotten us in the "bad row" we are in now. We hope to have the patience of our people till we can have time to consummate our arrangements, and get to working on a basis that will yeald us dividends in the form of a bigger and better paper, and command the support of those who are looking for something clean and reputable in the way of newspaper service. We ask you again to please bear with us, and promise you that as soon as it is possible we will have everything in a prosperous condition again.

Report Of Grand Jury

To Hon. W. W. Pearson, Judge 15th Judicial Circuit.

We, the Grand Jury, duly empanelled and sworn for the fall term, 1913, of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama, beg leave to submit this our final report.

We have investigated 76 alleged violations of the law and returned into your Honors Court 37 true bills.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

We have made no examination of the County Officers' books, in view of the fact that one of the State examiners recently made an examination of the same, and under the circumstances we deemed a further examination a needless expense and waste of time. We did, however, have a committee of this body make an examination of the books of the Treasurer, and check up his report to this body, and append hereto his report as to the finances of the County, which said committee found correct. We ask that said report be made apart of this final report.

We note that there is a sum of over $4000.00 to the credit of the fine and forfeiture fund of the county, and recommend that the County Treasurer transfer so much of said sum as is permissable to the General Fund or the road fund of the County as is provided under Acts of Alabama, 1907. P. 178.

COUNTY PROPERTY.

We find the property of the county in good condition. The jail has been newly repaired and is in good condition. The building is clean and the prisoners properly provided for. We recommend however, that the commissioners court have a high fence erected around the jail, as we learn that persons are in the habit of loitering about the jail, and as it is now arranged it is an easy matter for outsiders to transmit things into the jail through the windows of the jail. A high-fence enclosing the jail would remedy this defect.

COURT HOUSE.

We find that certain repairs recommended by former grand juries to be made to the Court House have not been made yet, but we learn that the Commissioners Court has made provision to have this done. This is certain repairs needed to the roof and window sills. We urge that this be given immediate attention.

COUNTY POOR.

The committee visiting the Poor House report that the inmates are receiving as good attention and food as the allowance granted by the commissioners court will permit. They report nineteen inmates: One colored male, six white male and twelve white female. They report an unusual circumstance existing there, in that it seems that more than eight years ago marriage license was granted to one of the inmates to marry another inmate. As a result of this union, two children have been born to the parties, who are being provided for by the county. One of the children, a girl about eight years of age is attending school every day. While we might consider this as evidence of the fact that Chilton county is more than willing to provide for her poor, still we think it a bad precedent to establish, and while we have no remedy to offer in this case, we do recommend that no more marriage licenses be granted to inmates of the Poor House so long as they remain upon the bounty of the county. We find that the sum of only about $6.60 per month is allowed for each inmate of the Poor House, this sum to provide both food and clothing for each inmate. In view of the recent advance in the cost of living, both as to food and clothing, we recommend that the commissioners, even if they cannot do so now under their existing contract, at least so soon as possible, increase this sum to at least $10.00 per month, as we believe that this is about as little as a person can be provided for comfortably.

GENERAL CONDITION OF COUNTY.

We believe that the general condition of the county is better in many respects, as we do not find that so many violations of the law are being presented to the grand jury. It is true that the county court has disposed of many matters, and has in that way relieved the grand jury somewhat of many of its labors, still we believe that general lawlessness is on the decrease, especially as to the illegal sale of whiskey and the carrying of concealed weapons. We believe that this is due largely to the fact that former grand juries of this county have recommended hard labor in both concealed weapon cases and cases of violating the prohibition law, and that petit juries have seen fit to impose hard labor in cases of this kind where convictions have been had. We endorse the recommendations of former grand juries in this respect and urge that in all cases of concealed weapons and violations of the prohibition law that hard labor sentences be added, where there is no doubt that the case is flagrant, and that it is a wilful violation of the law, as we believe that this is the only way to effectively retard these two growing evils. And we believe that the present condition of the county as to law and order, is largely due to the fearless manner in which petit juries have discharged their duty in these cases, and to the vigorous manner in which they have been handled in the county court.

PUBLIC ROADS.

We find that the public roads of the county are in as good condition as they can well be placed under our present system. Road overseers seem to be doing their duty so far as returning those who to work the roads is concerned. However, the roads are not as they should be, and will never be in the condition that the citizenship of our county demands until a different system is devised for working our roads. The majority of this body is in favor of a bond issue for building roads, and all are in favor of an educational campaign along this line so that the people of the county may be informed as to how a bond issue is to be had, how roads are to be constructed under this plan, how the money will be handled and spent, the cost per mile of such roads, how, when, and where such roads will be built, and all questions pertinent to a bond issue, which the people have a right to know. It is the sense of this grand jury that now is the proper time to launch a campaign of education in Chilton county for the purpose of building roads. We believe the people of the county are ready and willing to listen to arguments along this line, and believe that they are intelligent enough to adopt any method that will give them good roads speedily and at a reasonable cost.

The following prisoners confined in jail have had no indictments returned against them by this body, and we respectfully ask that your Honor issue order as is required to have them discharged from custody: Albert Bettice, Ned alias Joe McCall, Jesse Fitzpatrick, and T. E. Ludlum.

Thanking your Honor for your able charge covering our duties as grand jurors, also the Solicitor for his aid and assistance in our work, and the Sheriff and his Deputies for the prompt manner in which they have executed the summonses of this body and the Baliff for his services.

We respectfully ask that we be finally discharged.

JOHN B. MOORE, Foreman.

November 24th, 1913

To the Honorable Solicitor and Gentlemen of the Grand Jury of the fall term, 1913, of Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama.

I beg to report to your honorable body that I have cash oh hand to the credit of the following funds:

Nov. 24th to cash on hand, general funds	$ 3403.78
Nov. 24th to cash on hand, fine and F. funds	4401.43
Nov. 24th to cash on hand, Special R. funds	2204.02
Nov. 24th to cash on hand, redemption of land	197.99
Total	$10,212.22

I, J. W. Littlejohn, Treasurer of Chilton county, Alabama, do hereby certify that the above report is true and correct statement of the finances of Chilton county as appears from books. Respectfully submitted,

J. W. LITTLEJOHN,
County Treasurer.

COUGHS THAT PREVENT SLEEP

These coughs are wearing and if they "hang on," can run one down physically and lower the vital resistance to disease. Mr. Bob Ferguson, 319 Pine St., Green Bay Wisc., writes: I was greatly troubled with a bad cough that kept me awake nights. Two small bottles of Foley's Honey and Tar Compoud completely cured me.

Why It Failed.

Visitor—"Why did your little paper fail?" Bogville Editor—"Why, Mrs Chinn, the village gossip, had the news spread through the town before I could set up my type."

Salves Can't Cure Eczema

In regard to skin diseases, medical authorities are now agreed on this:
Don't imprison the disease germs in your skin by the use of greasy salves, and thus encourage them to multiply. A true cure of all eczematous diseases can be brought about only by using the healing agents in the form of a liquid.
WASH THE GERMS OUT.
A simple wash: A compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, and other ingredients as combined in the D.D.D. Prescription. This penetrates to the disease germs and destroys them, then soothes and heals the skin as nothing else has ever done.
A 50 cent bottle will start the cure and give you instant relief.
We have made fast friends of more than one family by recommendating this D.D.D. Prescription to a skin sufferer here and there, and we want you to try it now on our positive pay guarantee. D.D.D. Soap keeps the pores clean; ask us.

This Coffee is Never Sold in Bulk!

You buy coffee for its flavor—its aromatic stimulation—which is so largely due to its flavor. The old secret blend—the genuine French Market Coffee—is a combination of many different coffees that are grown in different countries, hence that peculiar delicious flavor cannot be imitated.

If you would have the genuine French Market Coffee ask for it by name; see that you are given French Market—not the ordinary kind of coffee. The picture of the old French Market on the label assures you of the genuine French Market Coffee—accept no other.

Let French Market Coffee tell its own story. Serve it several days with your every meal—then see if anyone in your family wants to go back to the ordinary kind of coffee. Remember, Madame, that the flavor of coffee is everything.

Mr. Bice Again on High School

Thorsby, Ala., Dec. 2, 1913
Editor Union-Banner,

Dear Editor:—I can't understand why Prof. Pickens and Mr. Reese Mullins continue to say so much about the County High School, or the question of people opposing it. No sensible person does or will oppose a high school except where it is taking the poor peoples money, and also taking it away from the rural schools. If Prof. Pickens and Mr. Mullins are so anxious for a high school, why don't they get out and hustle amongst the people of Clanton and raise the money and build the high school. There are enough people in Clanton who have money that would and could build a high school if they wanted it as bad as Prof. Pickens evidently does. But Prof. Pickens and Mr. Mullins wants the poor boys and girls, or their parents to pay for it. They talk as though it was for the poor boys and girls benefit, but there is not one poor boy or girl out of every twenty who will reap any benefit from the high school they talk so much about. When we talk about the poor boy and girl going to school or getting an education, let's begin at the foot of the ladder when they have to begin. Why not use common sense and say that a poor boy or girl cannot enter high school until they have passed the grades in the public school any more than a rich one can. And if the most of them cannot go to a rural school for lack of time, how can they go to a high school? If more money was provided for the public school, the poor boys and girls might get a better education during their young years—supposing a nine months school was furnished for the first ten or twelve years of a childs life. Wouldn't that give them a better knowledge of things than if they only had a seven months school during that few years? But how can they get it if there is not money to furnish a nine months school, and a few people want to rob the public school of that little and put it into a high school. I suppose Mr. Pickens knows if he wants to confess it, that the only difference between the high schools already established eight miles from Clanton, and the one he wants is the little tuition fee of about two dollars a month, the poor boys and girls would have to find money to pay board, room rent, lights, fuel, laundry and so on. If they can find money for all these things, they could find $2.00 more for tuition. I say two high schools in a county the size of Chilton is sufficient for all the boys and girls who are able to get a high school education. I am utterly opposed to the county Commissioners giving one cent of the poor peoples tax money to a high school, but I am willing, and would be glad for the county Commissioners to give an equal share according to the population of each beat in the county for rural schools, where the farmers, as well as other laboring men could have their boys and girls get the benefit of it. I am also willing to be taxed in order for the county to pay the same amount into the public school fund as the state pays, and that would double the amount we already have. Then we could have free schools all over the county.

I still stand on the same firm foundation as my first letter indicated, and I fully endorse Mr. Oliver's letter of recent date in answer to Prof. Pickens, and I suggest that the people be taxed a reasonable amount in order to raise the school fund so we can have a free public school all over the county. That's what we need for the poor boys and girls. Just as sure as you take the poor peoples money and give it to those who are able to pay their tuition through school, in the day of judgment the very rocks will cry out against you. My warning to you is be very careful how you use the people's money.

Yours very respectfully
J. BICE.

Mr. Scott's Views of High School.

Jemison, Ala., Nov. 30, 1913
Editor Union-Banner,

Dear Sir:—I see some rather hot letters in our paper from Mr. Mullins and others in regard to the County High School, and they rather insist that it be erected at Clanton. Please give me a little space to reply.

Though I never got farther in my books than "Horseback" in the old Blue Back Speller, I advocate educating the children. But I don't think there is much real good accomplished for the farm or the boys that plow "Old Beck" to take the county's or rather the tax payers money and build one high school in the county and that in town. There are lectures being made by all classes of people for the farmer to keep his boys and girls on the farm. To do that they need to help build up the schools in the country, for there are not many farmers boys and girls that go to the city schools. Why? Because board is so high they are not able to pay it. But even if they were able to pay it, town is not the place for farmers boys to go to school. If you once send them to town they don't plow "Old Beck" many more rounds. I claim that the high school ought to be in the country, and let the city boys and girls go out to them, where everything to eat is raised and board will be cheap. Let the city boys each day try "Old Beck" a few rounds, and by so doing they may take a delight in farming where they are now loafing. Everything possible seems to be done to force the farmer and his boys to town, but nothing gotten up in the country to draw the town boys out. Remember that we will always have poor with us, and some are not going to be educated, but the poor are to be helped, and if the state and county Commissioners have any money to donate let them divide it up among the rural schools, and keep the farmers boys out of town.

Mr. Mullins seems to think he knows just what everybody needs all over the county. He doesn't seem to have much regard for Mr. Oliver, and I guess he will get me with one of those other shells. He must be afflicted a little around the heart from the way he wants things to go. But as I am a kind of a doctor, I will give him a dose or two for the trouble. I want to ask him a question. What caused you to throw down that old wooden plow and go into other business? Was it too much hard work or too much money? Well, I will give the prescription free. Follow directions carefully. Take "Old Beck" out of the stall early next Monday morning about six o'clock. Hitch her to that old wooden foot plow stock and keep her going until about six P. M. Continue that for six days, then attend Sunday School and preaching on the Seventh. Study the scriptures well "for in them ye think ye have eternal life." Don't think of sending country boys to city high schools, and I think you will be much better by that time. If not let me know. I have another remedy.

Yours for the most good to all.
J. N. SCOTT.

Simple Cement.

For mending ornaments and delicate china there is nothing better than rice-flour cement. It is very easily made, it being only necessary to mix rice flour or ground rice thoroughly with cold water, simmering gently over a slow fire until it thickens, thereby forming a most durable adhesive substance which can be used hot or cold, in the usual way.

Simplicity in Higher Life.

The higher we rise the simpler we become. There is a childhood into which we have to grow, just as there is a childhood which we must leave behind; a childlikeness which is the highest gain of humanity, and a childishness from which but few of those who are counted the wisest among men have freed themselves in their imagined progress towards the reality of things.—Geo. Many a rheumatic sufferer has been to the drug store for a bottle of S. S. S. and been handed something claimed to be "Just as good." Truly, to ask for bread and be given a stone is still in practice. If you are troubled with rheumatism in any form be sure to use S. S. S. and note its wonderful influence.

S. S. S. has the peculiar action of soaking through the intestines directly into the blood. In five minutes its influence is at work in every artery, vein and tiny capillary. Every membrane, every organ of the body, every emunctory becomes in effect a filter to strain the blood of impurities. The stimulating properties of S. S. S. compel the skin, liver, bowels, kidneys, bladder to all work to the one end of casting out every irritating, every pain-inflicting atom of poison; it dislodges by irrigation all accumulations in the joints, causes acid accretions to dissolve, renders them neutral and scatters those pecu formations in the nerve centers t cause such mystifying and often baffl rheumatic pains.

And best of all this remarkable rem is welcome to the weakest stomach. you have drugged yourself until stomach is nearly paralyzed, you w astonished to find that S. S. Mr. Conway On High School

I see a great deal said about the County High School through the colums of your paper.

I don't wish to enter into any discussion through the news paper, but if nothing happens I will meet the commissioners court on the 18th. of Dechmber and will make my defence in person.

As it seems I am the man Mr. Pickens is refering to. I will ask Mr. Pickens and Mr. Mullins to shut off their hot air and deal with facts and figures. And I am sure that I am voicing 90 per cent of Chilton County tax payers and of the state of Alabama.

I will be prepared to give the facts and figures of every high school in the state and after they hear the facts if they then want to appropriate the $4.000 from the County Treasury for the purpose of building a high school in Chilton County I have no more to say.

I am representing the F. E. & C. U. of A. of the Chilton County branch also the state Union. All that wish to hear this discussion will be at the court house on the 18th of December 1913, at one o'clock.

Yours truly,
W. H. Conway.

AN INCESSANT COUGH.

A severe cough is always a grave symptom. It may not indicate organic disease of the lungs. Even though the cough is a functional disturbance it is of sufficient gravity to demand prompt attention.

The dropping of mucus from the back part of the nose into the throat indicates nasal catarrh. Sometimes this goes on a long time before the patient pays any attention to it. It is stated on good authority that mucus dropping into the throat in this way is apt to excite catarrh of the stomach. At any rate, the condition ought to be corrected as soon as possible.

Mrs. Bourland, of Frankston, Texas, found after using Peruna that not only did the incessant cough disappear, but the dropping of mucus into the throat had also ceased. Read what she says:

"For twenty-three years I was a constant sufferer from chronic catarrh. I had a severe misery and burning in the top of my head. There was almost a continual dropping of mucus into my throat, which caused frequent expectoration. My entire system gradually became involved, and my condition grew worse. I had an incessant cough and frequent attacks of bilious colic, from which it seemed I could not recover. My bowels also became affected, causing alarming attacks of hemorrhages.

"I tried many remedies, which gave only temporary relief, or no relief at all. I at last tried Peruna, and in three days I was relieved of the bowel derangement. After using five bottles I was entirely cured.

"I most cheerfully recommend the use of Peruna to any one similarly afflicted."

People who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.

GUARDING AGAINST CROUP

The best safeguard against croup is a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound in the house. P. H. Ginn, Middleton, Ga., writes: "My children are very susceptible to croup, easily take cold. I give them Foley's Honey and Tar Comyound and in every instance they get prompt relief and are entirely cured. We keep it at home and prevent croup. Sold by Dealers everywhere.

Had the Last Word.

Two ladies, during a friendly meeting on the street, got to quarreling about their ages, and used very strong language toward each other. At last as if to end the dispute, one of them turned away and said in a very conciliatory tone of voice: "Let us not quarrel over the matter any more, at least, have not the heart to do so. I never knew who my mother was, but she deserted me when a baby, and who knows but that you may have been the heartless parent?"

THE MAN WHO NEGLECTS HIMSELF

When his condition points to kidney trouble takes an unwise risk. Backache, pain and soreness over the kidneys, nervous or dizzy spells, lack of sleep, are all symptoms that will quickly appear with the regular use of Foley's Kidney Pills. They put the kidneys and bladder in a clean, strong, healthy condition. For safe by all dealers everywhere.

Sudanese Products.

Sudan is the chief source of the world's supply of two important products—gum arabic and ivory. About 15 per cent. of the ivory and 15 per cent. of the gum is shipped to the United States direct. The better quality of the gum are used abroad by confectioners in making candy and the lower grades in the manufacture of glue and mucilage.

GEORGETOWN, TEXAS. J. A. Ambro, says: For several years past Foley's Honey and Tar Compound has been my household remedy for coughs, colds, and lung troubles. It has given permanent relief in a number of cases of obstinate coughs and colds. Contains no opiates. Refuse substitutes.

Best of Friends.

"Are you good friends of the Browns?" "I should think so. We take care of their canary, bulldog and goldfish while they're away on their vacation."

NOT BEYOND HELP AT 87.

Sleep-disturbing bladder weakness, stiffness in joints, weak inactive kidney action and rheumatic pains, are all evidence of kidney trouble. Mrs. M. A. Dean, 47 E. Walnut St., Taunton, Mass., writes: "I have passed my 87th birthday, and thought I was beyond the reach of medicine, but Foley's Kidney Pills haved proved most beneficial in my case.

We Have Met Them.

Some men use sentiment and sympathy in a way that suggests grinding an ax on a tombstone.

W. LONZO BATES DIES WEDNESDAY.

Well known and Prominent Citizen Succumbs to Illness of Typhoid fever

The many friends of Mr. W. L. Bates, who lived about two miles from Clanton, will learn with deep regret of his death which occurred at his home early Wednesday morning, as a result of a short illness of typhoid fever. Mr. Bates had been sick only about three weeks, but for several days his friends realized that the end was near at hand.

He was about forty years of age and leaves a wife and a son to mourn for their irreparable loss. Mr. Bates possessed a wide and favorable acquaintance, and everyone who knew him could not help feeling that in him was the finest element of friendship and personal sympathy. His very bearing was that kind which draws men to it, and in his death many a heart will find just cause for deep and painful grief.

As a member of the Waxahatchie Tribe of the Improved Order of Red Men, Mr. Bates was especially prominent, and it was there that, by his profound devotion to the principles of the order, he caused to be wound about himself the tenderest chords of friendship with his brothers. Death could not have pierced the hearts of those who compose this body with a more severe sting than she did when she laid her icy hands upon the head of this beloved brother.

His last remains were laid away in Providence cemetery on Thursday, followed to the grave by a long train of his relatives, friends and brothers.

Marriages

Supper

There will be a box supper at Pleasant schoolhouse on Friday night, Dec., 3, 1913.

Wedding

Though, Cupid works slow, he is sure with those who are faithful. For many years he has been doing a great work between Miss Gussie Calloway and Mr. Grady Harris, but it was not until Wednesday evening, Dec. 3, that his works reached a climax. Theu it was that they were joined in holy wedlock by Rev. W. M. Olive; with Miss Rosa Parrish and Mr. Cecil Harris, Miss Bertha Calloway and Mr. Ephriam Smith as waitors. Friends and relatives began gathering about 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon and found servants at the gate to care for their horses and carriages. At the door was found Miss Grace Williams to receive the guests, and behold, on the inside was found everything that is beautiful and lovely, prepared by the skillful hands of a lovely lady. Among the beautiful things, nothing was more beautitul than the table which possessed everything possible to make an ideal wedding feast. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Newton Calloway. She is a young lady who possesses every feature of a lovely wife, and is a Sunday School teacher. She numbers her friends by the nnmber of her acquaintances. The groom is a unique young man of Clanton, who for sometime has been carrying the mail on a R. F. D. route. He is a young man of rare ability and is appreciated by those who love the right.

They make their home one mile south of Clanton.

We wish them a long and happy life, and hope that they will not follow the general rule and depart from their early training and leave the Sunday School work.

Music Recital At Thorsby

Music lovers of Thorsby and vicinity will have a treat next Monday night, December 15th, at 7:30 p. m., when the entire Music Department of Thorsby Inststute, under the direction of Miss Erva O. Finch will participate in a Music Recital, consisting of Vocal and Instrumental numbers. These entertainments have come to be one of the institutions of Thorsby and need only brief mention to fill Bates Hall with an appreciative audience.

Operetta at Schoolhouse

The mystic land of Mother Goose, the charms of which have infatuated many a youth, was presented in reality at the High school auditorium last Friday night by the music classes of Misses Watson and Wilson. The caste of the play was drawn from the primary grades of school, aided by a few of the larger pupils. Miss Libby McKee played the role of the real "Mother Goose" very completely. Frank Palmer made a very impressive imitation of King Cole, with Hoke Pipes, Willie Edwards and Erle Pinckard as his "fiddlers three." But none of these acquitted themselves as favorably as did the small actors, such as Jack Wade, Frank Mullins, Roberta Curry and Marjorie Murphy.

Aside from the presentation of the operetta, several musical selections were rendered, probably the most impressive of which was "The Cow-boy Girls," by a class of several young ladies—dressed as typical western adventures.

The audience for the evening was large, and evidence was loud in expressions of enjoyment of the occasion. It is to be hoped that the school will offer us another such entertainment in the near future.

Teachers Endorse The High School

At a meeting of the Chilton County Teachers Reading Circle which was held at the Court House last Saturday, and which was attended by about thirty teachers from over the county, a means was brought up for determining the sentiment of the body relative to the County High School proposition which is now being so much agitated. The result was the adoption of the following resolution, which goes without comment:

"Whereas, the teachers of Chilton county, assembled in session, realize the great need of a Chilton County High School, be it Resolved, that we want to go on record as unanimously favoring the county officials assisting us toward bringing said school to a speedy realization by requesting our county commissioners to appropriate money toward that end.

Circuit Court Ends Session

The Fall term of Circuit court for Chilton county adjourned last Friday with the completion of the criminal docket.

In the work of this term were not included many criminal cases of very great importance. Besides a number of violations of prohibition laws, the following murder cases were tried and disposed of:

Raymond Furgerson, colored, indicted for killing Walter Gray, a white man at Lock 12 a few months ago, was found guilty and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Emma Beeler, charged with murder in second degree, found guilty and sentenced to fifteen years imprisonment.

Isaiah Latham, charged with manslaughter, sentenced to one year imprisonment.

County Health Officer's Report

To the Honorable Probate Judge and Commissioners of Chilton County.

Gentlemen:—

I beg to submit my report for the month of November. As required by law I inspected the county jail on November 4, and found same to be in good condition. I visited the poor house on November 5th and found it to be in good condition.

All the doctors who are in active practice hvae reported births and deaths with the exception of Dr. V. B. Potts, Maplesville.

The vital statistics are as follows:

Births, white 54; colored 7; Total 61.

Deaths, white 16; colored 3; total 19.

The following cases of infectious diseases were reported: Three cases of typhoid fever, two cases of diphtheria, and one case of scarlet fever, and all have been carefully looked after.

In regard to the poor house, I will state that I have looked carefully into the conditions of the buildings, and find them amply prepared for the winter, except two buildings which have leaky roofs. The inmates are better cared for than could be expected with the amount per capita appropriated. If more was appropriated some extra comforts might be supplied those bed-ridden and infirmed inmates that are not now available.

Respectfully submitted,
V. J. GRAGG, M. D.

Meeting of County Union

The Chilton County Farmers Union will be held with Center Hill Local, No. 1194, two miles west of Kalona, on Thnrsday and Friday, Dec. 18 and 19, 1913. Those coming by rail will get off at Kalona, where you will be met by conveyances by writing B. L. Cobb, Jemison, Ala., Route 3. Forenoon of first day will be public. All locals are requested to send full delegation of the best workers. Officers will be elected for the ensuing year. Prominent speakers are coming.

Mrs. F M. McNeill and daughter, Kate, have returned home after spending a most pleasant week end at Ensley.

The young people of this place enjoyed a party Friday night given at the home of Miss Genie Thomas. Several games were played, after which a delightful salad course was served. About twenty guests were present.

Prof. Thompson, of Birmingham, was a visitor here Sunday.

Miss Mattie Hand is visiting in Bay Minette.

Mr. Irby McNeill of Oxmoore is visiting friends and relatives here.

Miss Genie Thomas spent Saturday night and Sunday with friends in Clanton.

Miss Lounette Cox has returned to her home in Plantersville.

Mt. Pleasant

The debating in our school on Friday evenings are fine and educating to those who take part. The speakers are Misses Eula Belle Foshee and Annie Fallon, Messrs. Edgar Barrett, Monroe Nelson, Oliver Duke and Dudly Smith.

Prof. Sibley, one of the state supervisors of rural schools, made quite an interesting and enlighting lecture accompanied by magic lantern pictures here on the night of the 2nd inst. Our efficient County Superintendent of Education Prof. W. T. Bean was also with us. We would be glad to have them again any time.

Mr. N. G. Ward recently visited his son Mr. Ed Ward.

Mrs. J. L. Burnett of Shelby county has moved here to make her home with her son Mr. B. G. Burnett.

Misses Mary Willie and Janie Wesson have been visiting in Birmingham.

SAD ACCIDENT ON L. & N. RAILROAD

Child is Run Over by a Freight Train.

Mountain Creek, Dec. 10—On yesterday afternoon young Hobson Abernathy had his right arm and leg cut off by an L. & N. freight train. After the fatality the body was found on one side of the track and the severed limbs on the other.

The body was taken to the store of his uncle, G. W. Coburn, and later carried to his residence.

Drs. Brown, Bell and Ellsberry attended the sufferer. Today he is doing quite well.

Have you paid that Poll tax? If not, do it now.

Come to the court house next Thursday and hear the high school question argued, and not only hear it argued, but help do it.

In this issue appears a sermon from the pen of Rev. W. W Carleton, a new minister in this section, who recently came here from Montevallo. We have made arrangements to use one of these sermons each week for this month, and we hope our readers will peruse them closely, for in them are some truths that are indeed rich and lasting.

Rev. Carleton is pastor of New Salem and Liberty Hill Baptist churches.

We have this week an announcement from Dr. V. J. Gragg, giving notice of some special lines of practice, which he will give particular attention in future. Not however, that he intends to "let up" in his general practice, but along with that, will give these special treatments to those desiring same.

Dr. Gragg needs no introduction to the people of Clanton and Chilton County. He is a native of this county, a graduate of Tulane University, and has attended other of the best medical schools of the south and southwest. Since completing his study he has enjoyed a wide range of general practice, here in his home community, and to say the least of it, his efforts have met with signal success. We commend him to the public as strictly reliable, and equal to any task he may undertake, which testimony anyone will confirm, when they have experienced dealings with him. Look for his announcement elsewhere in this issue.

John A. Hunter, Pres.,
Miss Roberta Collins, Secty.

Once upon a time in open session of a certain Chilton County Teacher's Institute in Clanton, the conductor of said Institute asked the question, "How many teachers, members of this body, have completed a high school education?" To the interrogation only five answered in the affirmative. This was thought to be an alarming state of affairs, and the matter even received considerable newspaper comment. It is an evident fact that the same or practically the same condition still exists among the teachers of the county, and truly it is a serious affair. Everyone knows that the teaching force of the county is in great need of added strength. It does not need strength in the way of numbers. It needs strength added to the efficiency of the number it already has. It is an admitted fact that nothing would help the rural schools more than better and more capable teachers to manage them. Money given to preparing teachers for teaching in the rural districts, would be given directly for the benefit of the rural schools. Money given to a County High School for Chilton county would be given directly toward enabling our teachers to prepare themselves to better serve the children in the rural districts, because it would place at their own doors in their own county, opportunities which they now have to go to Jacksonville or Troy to obtain. These are facts which are borne out by common sense and judgment and experience. Yet men will oppose donating for a county high school, upon the argument that we should give more to the rural schools, when they can easily see that the rural school will get an enormous advantage from a county high school in that it (the high school) will furnish directly to the country school a teacher with a high school education, where now, the teacher has never done more work himself than the seven grades which he is now teaching.

The Tortures of Rheumatism are aggravated during climatic changes because the impure blood is incapable of resistance and ordinary treatment seems useless—but the fame of Scott's Emulsion for relieving rheumatism is based on logical principles and scientific facts. This oil-food promptly makes active, red, life-sustaining blood corpuscles and its body-building properties regulate the functions to expel poisonous acids.

Scott's Emulsion, with careful diet for one month, will relieve the lame muscles and stiffened joints and subdue the unbearable sharp pains when other remedies fail.

Xmas Trade

Remember that I am going to sell everything CHEAP from now until New Year. Just received a fresh car of flour, every barrel guaranteed. A car of the very best shorts, a full supply of sugar, coffee and rice.

Sugar, 20 pounds to the $1.00; Rice, 30 pounds to the $1.00; Coffee, 8 pounds to the $1.00. A full supply of Wagons for little boys, Tricycles and Bicycles; a large quantity of Florida oranges, apples, candy and etc. cheap.

I am over stocked with winter underwear, clothing, ladies suits ladies cloaks, and all kinds of winter dress goods, which I am going to close out within the next 30 days regardless of price. If you are looking for the worth of your money here is the place to find it.

I appreciate very much the trade I had at my last sale, and if those that want to buy, will come in and see my line of goods before purchasing, I am sure that this sale will exceed the other.

Success

Different people have different definitions for success.

Some regard the possession of money as success, the more money the greater the success.

Some men—and in later years, some women—strive for political preferment, and having attained their desires consider themselves, and are considered by others, to have won success.

Others devote their energies to art, literature, music, stock marketing, manufacturing, farming, merchandising.

Whatever results may be obtained, there is no real success unless the individual has been of benefit to others.

The greater the benefit to others the greater the success.

The man who accumulates millions, but says to the world "root hog or die," is not much of a success. The hog may root up a very good living, and in doing so be of help to other hogs. Then the hog is a greater success than the man of millions who never helped any one.

The possession of money by a successful man is a very good thing; being a successful man, he knows how to use his money to be of genuine benefit to his fellow men.

Political preferment for the man of high character and unselfish patriotism is a good thing, for such a man is given opportunity to benefit his people and his section.

The L. & N. is regarded unfavorably by some. It is not reasonable to suppose that all of the people will think that all of the things we do are the proper things. We may make mistakes; and we regret them more than any individual. But "to err is human," and the human equation enters into every corporation.

But the L. & N. is striving for success, real success. It is working and will continue to work, with might and main and determination, to build up its property, and to build up and be of benefit to the territory through which its lines operate.

We feel that we have been successful in creating property values. There are sections of the state where land was sold for less than $5 per acre before the L. & N. came. Most of that land is now selling for many times that price, while some of it has been developed into beautiful and thriving towns and cities.

The people got the benefit of those increased values.

There are farms where the land was yielding a bare existence to its owners. The L. & N. experts loaned a helping hand, and now the farms are yielding a great deal more, at no increased cost.

Travel was once slow and uncertain, many hardships being endured en route.

The L. & N. has supplied unexcelled facilities, so that now the people travel rapidly in perfect comfort, and in absolute confidence that they will arrive in safety at their destination.

Let us work together for real success. The L. & N. wants to help you, the people, no matter in what line of constructive endeavor you may be engaged, because the L. & N. knows human nature and knows that a thoughtful, constructive citizen will co-operate with any man or organization working for the general good.

MEMORIES of the Old South in Every Can of French Market Coffee

The romance of the days of Andrew Jackson, of Henry Clay, of the picturesque pirate chief, LaFitte, and of the beautiful women and brave men of the old South, clings around every cup of delicious old French Market Coffee.

Enjoying its unmatched aroma and wonderful soothing flavor invokes the picture of the quaint stalls where belles and beaux congregated after every festive occasion for the crowning pleasure of a good-night cup of this most popular of all beverages.

The French Market Coffee that you get from your grocer, in perfectly-sealed packages, is identical with the historic French blend served in the old French Market in New Orleans.

Try it once and you'll agree there is only one real old French Market Coffee—only one coffee with a history.

Roasted by our unique, hygienic process.

READ THIS LETTER.

On Saturday, December 6th, Mr. J. E. Littlejohn, one of Chilton County's leading citizens, came into my office and made the following statement: "Doctor, my wife would not take $100.00 for the glasses you fitted her with. She don't have that DREADFUL HEADACHE any more. The glasses sure are fine, and she is well pleased with your work."

Friends and customers, if the leading men of your county make such statements as this about Dr. Higgins' Eye Work, can't you afford to risk A FEW MORE DOLLARS and have your eyes treated to suit your nerves and feeling? But if you want some cheap sorry "junk" called "specks" to wear over your eyes, Dr. Higgins has some to sell for 50c to $2.50, but the right glass and the right eye treatment will cost you more.

GOOD TIDINGS OF GREAT JOY TO ALL PEOPLE

ST. LUKE 2:10-11.

Salvation, as the angels from Heaven heralded it; as Jesus Himself proclaimed it in the villages of Galilee; as the first age of Roman civilization received it; it was good tidings of great joy, which, like new wine, wrought a contagious intoxication of joy among the common peopls, because it announced to them Salvation, deliverance from evil, and a present God on earth.

Well, I do not know in what other, or better phrases than these I can describe the conscious need of our time. I have preached perhaps to ten thousand people in the year 1913—to the high and the low; the learned and unlearned; to those who are free, and to those who are in prison, the most of whom are sinners, and I find that their hungry hearts are crying for Salvation. Those whose faces are familiar to my mind, and who haunt me even in my sleep; many of whom I have failed to reach in my weak effort, and bring to Salvation. But in my study for some sermons for Christmas I cannot find anything of more importance to preach than that which I have been preaching for the last nine years, since the day that Christ saved me from the gambler's Hell, and gave me "Good tidings of great joy," and that is Salvation to all the world who will believe.

"Twas mercy filled the throne
And wrath stood silent by,
When Christ on kind errand came,
To sinners doomed to die."

Of course I cannot hope to see again, all those people to whom I have spoken, and preach to them a Christmas Sermon, but I hope to reach as many as I can from the stand and through the Press, with this grand old story of Salvation for the lost. What else could I carry to a lost people? What else could lead the world out of darkness? Who but Christ—the Lord? Then it is "Good tidings of great joy" that I shall offer the paper for a Christmas present.

What is all this of which so much is spoken for which men have so freely given their time. their talent. their money, and even their lives, for the world to know and have? It is Salvation. Salvation means reconciliation to God; a change of heart (soul), a satisfied mind, a clear conscience and great joy to the one who accepts it. It satisfies a thrist that no one but God can satisfy. The joys of this life are not to be compared without christianity. In fact, the wealth, fame, honor and luxuries of life for which the human heart so much desires, is not joy. It makes them very unhappy. The most miserable men and women we have are those who are wealthy. But the great joy the angels speak of here, is the joy of the world to come. The joy of the Election through Christ's blood. It makes them love the communion of God from whom they were once alienated, and so much dreaded; the gospel which they had never before had considered worth anything to themselves or to the world. It makes them love the church they once ignored and despised. It makes them love the eternal welfare of others as well as themselves. It spreads sunlight into the homes where once it was all darkness. Man a wife and mother dreads to see the celebration of this day in which God was reconciled to man, because of darkness (sin). A great majority of our people do not respect the condescending love of God shown them, and they misspend their time and money for Christmas, which brings sorrow, dismay, and destruction to their benighted souls and their homes. But when the sunrays of God's eternal light shines into the soul and illuminates the life, then we hear the shout of "Good tidings of great joy." I remember on one occasion while holding a meeting at a certain place, I discovered a little house near the edge of the little town where the meeting was being held. I decided that I would visit that place, but I was advised not to go there. However I ventured on, so when I drew near the house, I heard the most profane swearing that [illegible] heard. What was the [illegible] Whipping his children—bringing hell to his home and sorrow to his wife. I did the best I could under such circumstances, and called again when he was sober, and succeeded in getting him to church, and when he had once gone he became interested, and on the last night of the meeting he was happily converted. The next morning as I went to tell them good bye, I heard his wife singing from the depth of her heart: "Jesus lover of my soul, let me to thy bosom fly." And as I stood still to hear, he joined the next stanza: "Other refuge have I none, hangs my helpless soul on the." What was it then? Christ had come into that home, had driven out sin, the drunkness had fled, and there was "Good tidings of great joy."

This salvation helps us literally. The thousands of dollars which are spent annually for the unnecessaries of life, as men become christians it changes the current of their money spending and they use it for that which would make their homes more pleasant and comfortable, and to educate and see their children well situated in life. The child who once knew no better than to break its father's Christmas "jug," hoping to get out of it the things that would make it happy with those around it, has been brought by this slow process of civilization to know the real cause of Christmas, and the meaning of Good tidings of great joy. It helps us to see the great need of spreading the gospel to all the world.

But few years ago Missionary work was very unpopular, and not half as much now as it should be, but the day is breaking and the shadows are fleeing away, and we can hear the cry of the dying world, and have a little of the great love for them that God had for us. As the light comes on we will be more able to carry out this great purpose of God: "Good tidings of great joy to all people."

This power of salvation shall increase. The time will come, and it will not be long, when Christ shall rule supremely. This present generation may not live to see it, and I hardly think we will, but it will be that God shall pour out this spirit upon his people with great power.

Then our government shall be controlled with better morals. There shall be less crime throughout our land; people shall take more and better care of themselves, therefore life shall be longer, and insanity will be less prevalent. May God speed the time when this "Good tidings of great joy shall come."

It shall be everlasting; when God has carried out his eternal purposes here with us, he then shall call us to great joys of His everlasting kingdom. Then we shall realize that we have only had the leaves of the tree of life. O joy of joys! when we shall see Jesus who loved us and washed us in His own blood; who redeemed us by His dying grace. We shall have a great reunion in that day, when we shall see Abraham, the father of the faithful; Moses who gave the law that made us know sin; Isaiah, the Stern Prophet who predicted this "great joy;" Jerimiah, who lived in the days of gloom, and Paul, with the rest of the Apostles who gave their lives for this same cause. They shall shine out and be called great by the living God.

Wey did God give us poor finite creatures this great salvation? That has been the most wonderful thing to me. But it was because He had created us. Everything God made was good but man was very good, in God's own likeness, and He loved him, and His love is unchangable; He still loves us and wills to have us with Him forever.

Because we were unable to save ourselves, we could not affect the plan of salvation; no one but an all-wise God could, and it would have been a reflection on God's goodness to have left us in a lost condition without a chance.

He promised to save us. He told Mother Eve when She and Adam were driven out of the Garden, that Her off spring should bruise the serpent's head and God cannot lie.

It was because of His goodness. God does not want revenge; He cries in the Spirit: "Come and I will give you rest." "If any man thirst let him take of the water of life." "Come unto me all ye ends of the Earth and be ye saved." Come now, just as you are.

"There is a fountain filled with blood,
Drawn from Immanuel's veins,
And sinners plunged beneath that flood,
Loose all their guilty stains."

There never was anyone who came to this fountain that was not washed white as snow. But there is no other cleaning power. Many have tried others and have come up wanting. You must come just as you are. Christ did not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance. So the vilest sinner may come and be made whole. You must come believing that Christ died for you; for your personal sin. Not that He died for those only who lived at that time, or personally for those who drove the nails, but for all the sins of that present, and for all future sin of the Adamic race. Why He died for your sins man, whoever you are. Believe that and you shall live forever. Believe and hasten to this fountain and be saved, for to-day is the only promise that we have. We may not live to see another Christmas. Nay we may not even live to see this one, and if we should live to be very old, it isn't long, so come now.

May the spirit of God aid the Ministers of the Gospel to preach with great power on this all important supject in the next thirty days. May the power of that spirit reach the hearts of men while His servants preach. May God's grace and mercy save us all together is the prayer of your humble servant. Amen.

THE BAND OF ROBBERS.

As I was very cold I walked in. I was not greeted very kind at first but after they found out I was not a detective they were very kind to me. They asked me to have some supper which I accepted. After supper they told me their occupation and asked me to join them. After thinking it over I decided to join them. It was very late in the morning and they did not attempt any robbery. I was treated kind the next day and I knew that they were trying to get on the good side of me so I would not report them to the detectives. We went to a small town and after examining the situation we found that it would be easy to break into a jewelry store which was well situated for our business. They said that I was new to the job and that, as that it was an easy job, I must take it while they watched. I made a success at this time and after coming to my new home they said I could own a share in their stock which amounted to several thousand dollars, but to own it I must stay with them.

Miss Edgar Teel is very popular with Miss Wilson. She kept him in after school the other day and they had a long talk. Now as to what they talked about we will say nothing as Mr. Teel does not.

Miss Edgar Teel and George Wyatt went into a fight the other day over a bottle which can be bought at 30 per dozen worth. The result was that Edgar got the best of George the first round and George got the best the second round and on the the third they were friends an played marbles again. The strength the battle renewed. In the struggle much blood, hide and teeth were lost.

I am tall as a monasitated pine in my phenominal systematic internal absence. I have the hunger of a raged lion when he is hungry enough to swallow his taster. My heart beats fast enough to run a dynamo to furnish electricity for the state of Texas. My veins of blood will chill the hottest boiler in the U. S. A. My sole on my shoe is thick enough to make the thinest element thick. I am a wide known oratorist in the base ball world. My brightness will light the whole world. I am as perfect as the earth as God made it. I am the guy who put the suffer in suffragetts. I am undoubtedly the greatest man known. Please let me be president of the Annanias club is my prayer to you all.

County Teachers Reading Circle

To the Teachers of the County:

I wish to call your attention to the fact that there are eighteen Libraries to be given to the rural schools of Chilton county by the State this year.

Now, the opportunity stands open for you to obtain one for your community, and involves upon you as a duty to put forth an effort to secure one of these Libraries.

The first year, every library was taken, but last year a few went lacking. Let the teachers of the county see to it that every one is taken up this year. You cannot serve your people in a better way. Only think, you can get $30.00 worth of good useful books for only $10. Go to work and get one of these libraries for your school.

Write the State Secretary of the Reading Circle for suggestions on raising the funds.

Very truly,
Cecil E. Harris, President
County Reading Circle.

DR. A. J. HALL DIES AT SOLDIER'S HOME

Dr. A. J. Hall, aged 67 years, a Confederate Soldier during the civil war, a physician of nearly 50 years practice in Chilton and Elmore and Autauga counties, and a genial gentleman, died at the Alabama Soldier's Home recently and was buried at Wellbrook, Ala.

The deceased had been in the Soldier's Home nearly 5 years, having been admitted there owing to the fact that his health had failed and refuge in the Home was sought where quiet and care was obtained.

The remains were prepared for burial and accompanied to the train by a number of old veterans and members of Camp 1711, U. C. V.

Dr. Hall leaves some relatives and a host of friends to mourn his death.

OPEN THE SCHOOLHOUSES.

We are astonished to hear from a farmer in one of the most progressive communities in the South that the principal of the school in his neighborhood has refused to let the Farmers' Union meet in the school auditorium. It is a pitifully narrow conception of the purpose of a schoolhouse and of a church building to think that they are made only for the preacher and the school teacher. They are made for all the people—not for just two individuals among the people. Both schools and churches must become real community centers if education and religion are to triumph effectually.

The church building should be open to every meeting for civic, social, or moral betterment; and the schoolhouse, belonging to all the people, should be open to any body of citizens for any purpose whenever it is not in other use. In this enlightened and democratic age, it ought not to be necessary to have such a law, but if it is necessary, then every State should have a law compelling the committee to open the schoolhouse for any body of citizens requesting it for any lawful assembly.—Progressive Farmer.

Agricultural Dept. Moving Pictures.

The moving pictures taken from exhibit work of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture were presented at the Lyric theatre last Saturday under the direction of Mr. J. Sterling Moran of Thorsby and Mr. Treat, who are employed by the government in the social and economic survey of Chilton county.

The pictures were indeed instructive and educational. Taking up subjects of great importance, the exhibition of it was made in a far more impressive way than if it had been explained by a lecture.

The series of views upon the proper handling of milk, made from actual routine of one of the country's largest dairies, showed the remarkably sanitary methods that are in use in order to prevent infection by disease germs.

A series of pictures on the life and habits of the cattle tick was presented. The method of how to dip cattle infected with the tick was shown very impressively.

Another, and probably the most practical feature for our farmers, was a selection of seed corn and cotton. The process was traced its entire length, and surely result in great practical to those fortunate who see the pictures.

OUR HOLIDAY SUBSCRIPTION OFFER.

We have made arrangements with the leading farm paper of the South for a club subscription offer during the holidays that has never been equaled before. It is not one of those offers that gives you a dozen worthless papers for a small price, but one that gives you two papers, the value of which, in their respective fields, cannot be surpassed, and both for the price of one.

THE OFFER:

During the next thirty days we will give The Union-Banner one full year, and The Progressive Farmer six months, both for only $1.25. The offer is good for both new subscribers and renewals.

The Progressive Farmer is by far the best farm paper in the South. It is published weekly in Birmingham, right here at home, and is edited by men who know Southern conditions, and are capable of giving real practical advice and not mere theory. It is distinctively a southern farm paper for the Southern farm. The regular subscription price of the Progressive Farmer is $1.00 per year, or 50c for six months, and those who are acquainted with its merits regard this as cheap for a paper of such value. To those who do not already know of it, we will stand as sponsor for it as being the best paper in existence for the southern farmer.

The Union-Banner for 1914 is going to reach a standard of excellence that has never before been attained in the field of a weekly newspaper in Chilton County. We are going to devote our columns to matters of home and local news, social, industrial, religious, educational and political, at all times championing the cause of right and justice in every phase of community progress. Our facilities and office equipment are being improved, and during the next year you cannot afford to be without the news of the county, and to get this news you cannot do better than take the Union-Banner.

Avail yourself of this superior offer now. It is the best chance you will ever have to secure these two valuable papers. If your subscription to the Union-Banner is about out send us $1.25 at once and we will renew you one full year, and send you the Progressive Farmer for six months. Remember this offer will last only 30 DAYS.

MADE THE WORLD BRIGHTER

Music Lovers Everywhere Acknowledge the Debt They Owe Felix Mendelssohn.

What musician does not love the name of Felix Mendelssohn? Those fortunate enough to hear symphonies and oratorios have revelled in the beauties of his greater works such as The Scotch Symphony, "A Calm Sea and Prosperous Voyage," the Fingal's Cave, and other overtures, St. Paul and the Elijah, which is so dramatic, it has lately been given with stage settings. The music to Midsummer Night's Dream makes Shakespeare's fairy comedy even more enjoyable than before. We realize more fully the lightsome grace of tiny elves, the merry jests of Puck, and above all, the happy union of Oberon and Titania. Their Wedding March voices the note of joy at how many a nuptial gathering, from those held in stately cathedrals with crowned heads attending, to those taking place in some remote village chapel where simple villagers form the bridal procession.

Many a woman's chafed spirit finds relief in playing those gems for the piano called Songs Without Words.

Mendelssohn's father, having embraced Christianity, desired Felix to add his mother's name Bartholdy to his own decidedly Jewish appellation. The full signature, Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy appears after some compositions, but Mendelssohn, the Musician, belongs neither to Judaism nor to Christianity, but to the whole happy world of music lovers.

How to Detect the Alum Baking Powder

"Which are the alum baking powders; how can I avoid them unless they are named?" asks a housekeeper.

Here is one way: take the can of a low-priced powder in your hand and read the ingredient clause upon the back label. The law requires that if the powder contains alum that fact must be there stated. If you find one of the ingredients named alum, or sulphate of aluminum, you have found an alum baking powder.

There is another and a better way. You don't have to know the names of the alum powders. Use Royal Baking Powder only; that assures you a cream of tartar powder, and the purest and most healthful baking powder beyond question.

This Wonderful Blend Is a Secret

It is entirely different from ordinary coffees. The secret of the wonderful blend was brought from the coffee-growing countries years ago.

Until recently the only place in America where this rarely delicious coffee could be had was at the French Market in New Orleans.

Here the beauty and chivalry of the Old South gathered, here every notable visitor came—and these visitors numbered some of America's most famous names.

The French Market was society's rendezvous. All because of the wonderful coffee served at the quaint old stalls.

But since the establishment of the French Market Mills, and the invention of the new perfectly-sealed can, French Market Coffee in all its purity and aromatic flavor can be had on any private dining table.

There is a great treat in store for those who have not yet enjoyed this delicious and famous French Market Coffee. Try it, and you'll agree there is only one real old French Market Coffee. Roasted by the unique hygienic process in expressly built mills.

"Involuntary Suicide."

A highly respected and prosperous Georgia farmer discovered that his corn cribs showed signs of nocturnal depletion. As this occurred with considerable regularit , his suspicions became aroused, and he rigged a spring-gun and watcher for results. The first night following, along in the small hours, he heard the report of a gun, and hastening to the spot, found a "dead nigger." The next morning he notified the coroner, which official summoned a jury and proceeded to view the remains. After a full investigation of the case, the coroner gazed solemnly at the jury and remarked that, while he was not entirely aware of the conclusions reached by them, he would suggest a verdict of "involuntary suicide." And that was the verdict.

Bad Misunderstanding.

When Uncle Joe Cannon was in congress he wrote a letter to a fellow-member, who was able to decipher the hieroglyphics with the exception of one word. He disliked to bother Mr. Cannon, so he went to several friends among the congressmen, but none of them could make out the word in question. This word seemed very important, as it was underlined, so at last in despair the recipient thought he would consult Mr. Cannon himself. Cannon looked at the letter, and then at the congressman, and then again at the letter, his face somewhat taking on a peculiar expression. Finally he looked at the congressman and with mingled anger and laughter, said: "Why, you fool, that word is 'confidential.'"

SHRINE TO BRING BUFFALO

Ancient Indian Ceremonial in Times of Drought and Famine Now in Philadelphia.

No longer fulfilling its ancient purpose of charm to provide large buffalo herds for the Indian of the plains, there is on exhibition at the University of Pennsylvania museum a sacred shrine of the Hidatsa Indians, which has been added to the Heye collection of American ethnological objects. It is believed to be the only shrine of its nature ever erected by the Indians.

The shrine was set up in a large earthen-covered hut near the line between Montana and the Dakotas. It consists of four posts stuck into the ground, on which rest two shelves. On the lower shelf is a very ancient buffalo skull resting in a bed of leaves from the pennyroyal plant. On the uppershelf are two human skulls painted red.

It was the custom of the natives to make gifts to the shrine whenever they wanted the gods to answer a prayer.—Philadelphia Dispatch to the New York Sun.

Restoration of Peace Through Christ.

ST. LUKE 2:14.

In my sermon for last Sunday I preached from the 10 and 11 verses of this same chapter—that angels heralded the "good tidings of great joy," which was wonderful to us wretches of sorrow. But when the multitude of heavenly hosts came, they carried the note higher still and far more wonderful, "Peace on earth. The most wondrous part was "peace on earth."

I do not think there could be a better word used in our language than the word, "Peace." I don't think the angels of the Almighty could have sung a better chorus to the dying world than "peace." Ah, I do not believe that God in His almighty wisdom could have sent his messengers with anything more needed or more appreciated than peace.

"Shout, ye bright angelic choir!
Praise the Lamb enthroned above!
While astonished, I admire
God's free grace and boundless love.
That blest moment I received him,
Filled my soul with joy and peace."

The angels had been accustomed to look upon the peace of heaven and its beauties where everything had found its resting peace, and everything is calm and sweet. That was why they sang this high stanza on earth "Peace."

I do not wonder that there is peace where God is; where there is always light: where there is purity and love. No angel would care to proclaim a thing so certain. But this was the marvel; this was the grace; this was the strange burden of the song, "Peace on Earth." How strange the sound to us poor discontented wretches. Peace on earth that sadly left us six thousand years ago in that gloomy day of sin.

The facts in the course of the world's history prove that we have no peace. Adam and Eve who were in peace and happiness in their own home, and in sweet communion with God until that moment of sin; but now they are in a wrangle as to which is the more guilty. Cain who, when he had wilfully slain his brother, contended with God as to being Abel's keeper, and cared nothing for the crime. From thence sin has gone, as an evil sun, to earth's remotest bounds; and the whole world became at enmity with God, and save a few elects, of every age, every creature perishes in one vast engulfing flood.

The earliest building for public use ended in confusion and fell, stamped as a Babel.

Abraham had to part from his kinsman Lot. Isaac quarreled with Ishmael; Jacob with Esau; and Joseph could have no peace with his brothers; Moses himself was wrathful, even to the point of evil speaking; and the whole history of the chosen race of God's people was a continuation of the bloodiest wars. The disciples of Christ called down fire from heaven, and the Prince of Peace found no peace at the hands of those He came to save.

Every phase of the nistory of our race is full of jealousies, hatred and cruelty. In ancient times there was peace at little intervals, just spreading its timid wings and flying back afrighted from scenes of blood.

What have we now? It is true we live above the day of the bad old time. We are far ahead in culture and in every way. It is a fact that our nation is almost at peace with the world and we thank God for it, and accept it as a precious Christmas gift this year. But who can go and see the great armaments for war and call it peace?

If you go to the homes, where is the household without a jar? Where is the family of which every member is in perfect union? Who has not someone with whom he is not quite on terms of love? How many are even at perfect peace with themselves? How many with God?

Peace, O peace, where is it? Where does she hide herself? Is she in the dismal valleys, or is she among the mountains? Is she in the highest mansions or is she in the lowest homes? Is she in the church, or is she, as she ought to be, in the heart of any man who walks the face of this earth?

Is there no peace at all? Were the angels just hoping for peace, or did they see something in the far future that was hidden from us in the womb of time? No, no, God sent them. They were singing of the Almighty's will, "Peace on Earth." Here and there some ftw have it to heart. It is breaking on the horizon. A few streaks tell us that the sun of righteousness is rising with healing in his wings. He is coming! The angels saw it. Peace to the Jews who are near and the Gentiles who are afar off. He has satisfied the law, made peace by his own blood, and become the umpire between God and man. Christ has brought peace already, and of the increase of that peace there shall be no end. The Prince of Peace shall reign. There shall be peace over all the earth, and when that day shall come every inhabitant of the earth shall verify what the angels sang, "Peace on earth."

How must that peace be had? You have been at war with God and would have ever been if Christ had not come and laid His hands on us. He, and He only is peace, and he who has Christ has peace. You cannot make peace with God for you cannot approach Him.

"His wrath like flaming fire,
Burned to the lowest hell,
And in that hopeless world of woe
He bade my spirit dwell."

But you can accept Christ, then you have peace. Christ has paid the full price. Not one thing more could be done, and God was satisfied. Ah, when he looked down on His son and knew his sufferidg he said, "It is enough, Justice is satisfied," and I am no more angry with man but tove them for Jesus sake. Every rebel who lays down his arms and accepts that atonement has everlasting peace. He may feel and should feel that he is uothing but a poor forgiven sinner, but whatever may befall me now my affairs stand right with God. God has said "there is no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus," and by the infinite grace of God I have peace, and I am his.

Talk of Christmas pleasures! What are they to that sense of safety, that deep inward peace? Can there be pleasure where there is no peace? Can you enjoy life when you are not reconciled to God, who may come at any moment and require us to give an account of our lives.

Boys, be sure you make peace with your own conscience, that witness within, that you are in Christ, and that you love Him; that yon would not knowingly do anything to grieve Him, and that your great aim is to please and serve and glorify him.

Young man, let Christ who has loved you more than his own life; who has paid the full redemption price; who is your only friend, and who only can be your peace here in this life and in eternal life, come into your heart, and be more to you in life. Launch out on His promises, and you will make your life more happy, and your parents shall be happy, and the grand old church will shout hosannah over your redemption, and the angels of God shall again strike the highest note singing, "Peace on earth."

May God carry this poorly constructed sermon to the hearts of men and women, for my Redeemer's sake. Amen.

Editor Union-Banner:—I see in the Union-Banner a sermon from Rev. W. W. Carleton, and as I have not written a letter to the Union-Banner this year, I would like to have a little space to say something about Rev. Carleton's subject. I am very proud to see the brother giving us such a grand subject. It is one of the best of all the subjects in holy writ; good tidings of great joy. So we can say hurrah for brother Carleton on this subject, if he will give the fullness of its meaning. How grand it is to think that our God has provided such a proclamation: "Adams lost race." We notice that the text says "Good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people." That of course would apply to all that went down in their graves, as well as the living. Multitudes have fallen asleep in death without hearing of the gladsome souud. Thank the Lord for our understanding on this text; it is a most wonderful sound to our ears.

I see that brother Carleton is bringing out some impressive thoughts on this subject. Tho' we could keep our readers and hearers from seeing the fullness of this text. Notice it says it shall be to all people; of course this would apply to the whole race of Adam. Some has had the liberty to hear and understand, while others have not.

We believe in an election, but there has never one been elected to be lost, Free grace comes to the elected ones first, and when the election is out, then free grace goes on to the whole world. The Lord is going to save all, and bring them to the knowledge of the truth, First Tim. 2:4. Is not this a gladsome sound? There is no other way only through the Savior. We must hear and believe on Him. All must be saved from ignorance, and come to the right knowledge. Infants have died, children have died, young men and young women have died without understanding the gladsome sound; some have lived on and had a chance to make a full rose, while others have not, They were cut off when they were buds. Will not God let them come forth out of the grave and make a raise if they will. Of course the text says they all shall be benefitted alike; in the times of the restitution age all of the blessings that were lost will be restored. So come on brother Carleton with this great subject; the Lord is spreading some mighty good things on the table in these latter days. Now, let all of the Lord's people think of these things; let the drugs of the false doctrine sink to the bottom and get the clear grease of the word. Look and see if all of the holy prophets did not preach of the restriction of all things, Acts. 3:21. Could not all of the Lord's people do the same. And if this is so, is not it better than we had thought? Hurrah for the gladsome sound the angele proclaimed, Luke 2:10.

How to Use Peruna for Coughs and Colds

If Peruna were used at the beginning of every cold, coughs would generally be prevented.

After the cough begins Peruna will generally stop it just as quickly as it ought to be stopped. To stop a cough before all of the expectoration has been removed is to do great injury. After the expectoration has been properly removed the cough will stop itself. That is the only proper way to stop a cough.

Occasionally a cough depends upon an irritable condition of the larynx or bronchial tubes, in which there is little or no expectoration.

The problem of stopping such a cough is a slightly different one. Even in those cases Peruna ought to be taken, but sometimes it is necessary that local treatment be added.

Every one who has a troublesome cough or a lingering cold should write the Peruna Company, Columbus, Ohio, for a free copy of the "Ills of Life." There is no free pamphlet distributed to-day of more real value to the sick and afflicted than the new "Ills of Life." It is filled from cover to cover with actual cases of cough, colds and other climatic diseases in all stages and complications. You could scarcely fail to find your case exactly described in this book.

To neglect to do everything possible to get rid of a stubborn cold or chronic cough is very unwise indeed. Peruna has enjoyed a great reputation as a remedy in such cases for thirty or forty years. As a rule, a person who uses one bottle of it is always afterwards an enthusiastic advocate of Peruna. Peruna itself is a means of selling more Peruna than all advertisements put together.

Those who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.

At the recent session of the Commissioners Court of Chilton County, which convened here the latter part of last week, a vote was passed donating four thousand dollars to the erection of a County High School building somewhere in Chilton County, this four thousand to be supplemented by four thousand raised by the citizens of the community, securing the location of the school and four thousand from the state appropriation.

Christmas Cheer At Soldiers Home

Christmas things for the old veterans at the Soldiers' Home have commenced to arrive. The gifts are money, clothing and fruits principally. Every indication is that the old men will fare well, as they have in the past. There are nine old ladies at the Home, wives of old veterans, who, it is hoped, will be included by the U. D. C. chapters this year.

The Underwood club here continues to grow in numbers. There are now 111 members and Capt. W. J. Bethune and Dr. Maddox expect to reach the 125 figure soon.

THE WORD MADE FLESH

A SERMON FOR CHILDREN

Through the kindness of the editor, I have permission to write four sermons this month to his paper, and this is the third issue, and I, as all other ministers do in their sermons, talks, and pastoral work, have neglected to say anything to or for the children. But I realize the fact as most all men do, that it is a hard task to speak or write to children, in a way that would interest and benefit them, yet we should never forget to try to help them, for they are the hope of the future; the life of our Sunday School and church; the unhewn material from the great quarry, for which we are much responsible. In the first place the children think that religious matters are for the grown up or the older people. The thought of being a Christian is in the far future, and they have plenty time to attend to eternal things later on. And the Bible truths are beyond their comprehension and they do not think that there is anything in their own common life that could cause them to understand and enjoy such savings as my text, "And the word was made flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld His glory, but I think there is.—Come let us see if we can find one. What shall we use? —Let us use the word "WATCH".

I knew a little boy whose father was very fond of watches. One night just before Cecil, the boy, was ten years old, I spent the night at that home, and his father had just bought a new watch, and he and I spent a great deal of time talking about watches and I noticed Cecil's eyes as they sparkled with joy as his father talked with inthusiasm on the subject. So after the conversation was ended, Cecil said to me, "Mr. Carleton, I will be ten years old in a few days", and I said "What would you like to have for your birthday?" and he said, "a watch", and I asked him if there was something else that he had just as soon have as a watch. No, he would like a watch above everything. So I promised to get the watch for him and I went on to tell him what kind of watch it would be, and how it would look, etc. At length the watch came, and I sent it by a gentleman up to Cecil's home. He knocked at the door, and Cecil came running out on the porch. The man told him his business and gave him the watch. "Watch" had only been a word but now it was a word no longer. The word became a real watch and dwelt with him, and he beheld its glory; yes, he could have used John's very word, "glorious". He shouted it; for all dullness had gone out of him; his soul was alive with delight, for he had actually received the watch, and that is what John meant when he said that we behold His glory. Christ, himself came and dwelt among us; was actually a man.

I knew of a boy once who had heard about pet goats, how they could be broken to work to wagons and play on the lawn, and be affectionate playmates, until his heart was full of love, and great longings to have one for himself. And the wish was gratified. An uncle to whom he had confidently told it, had an opportunity of buying him one already tamed. You can imagine how its new little master felt when he saw it, and knew that it was for him and to be his own. Now fancy them together. At first the goat and the boy stood and looked into each other's wondering eyes. It was their hearts that were really looking, and they felt by that that they should be friends. Then the boy half-timidly clasp the goat around the neck with his arms, and the goat half-timidly rubed its face around the boy's and bleated. They were growing fast friends. Now he feeds it with bread from his hand and it eats and the boy's heart almost burst with joy. It skips across the lawn and looks perfectly lovely. The child's eyes gleams with delight, and he laughs merrily. It follows him into the house, lies down with him on the rug and the two are happy, and drink the sweet influence of eaeh other's affection. Now do you not think tuat the little boy's heart khew the difference between the word and the flesh. The goat was only a name heard with his ears; had become a life in his house, a tumult of joy in his heart, so in that family they beheld its glory; and so shall it be with you children, when you thereby understand what Christmas means. It means Christ made flesh and dwelt among you, and you shall behold His glory in your mind, heart, and home.

Here is yet a better illustration for our purpose,—the case of an orphan child. There was a little boy once who was carried from his native state to another. He was taught that his mother was dead. He heard the name, mother, and read it too, but he did not know one. He heard the word on the happy lips of his playmates and read of it in his Bible, comforting sorrow and brightening child-hood. He perhaps thought it was a tower of strength to which the other children fled and were safe. He too learned that the word, mother, meant long suffering, merciful, and slow to anger. It was a very present help in things of need. It was all sorts of heart-riches. But only to others; to him it was only a name, a sorrowful name, that was all; his mother was dead. Years passed on since she had gathered her children around her knees, since he had felt the sweet charm of the soft voice, the look, the touch we call a motnerly. He thinks he has a faint recollection of the time when they said she died and the farewell. Long, dreary years have past since then. Nothing had filled the void, nothing could fill it. But now the day had come for this great mystery to be reunited, perhaps when he least expected it; some one told him, that back in his native state his mother yet lived. With perhaps half faith he came back to see, and it was as though the heavens had appeared and the old familiar mother had come back, and clasp the bewildered boy in her strong, kind arms, looking with pity and wiping her tears, and lifting off life's load of sorrow; then she drew him near her side and he lived again in the light of her dear face; she had become his living mother. What a great change! Regrets and sorrow have been turned into delight and gratitude. The word "mother" which had been a word only, and nothing more, has bee made flesh aud dwelt with him and he beheld his glory. So was God once a name. His goodness, mercy, patience, ways, were all written in the old testament but only in words; "God" was a dear word. When Christ came he changed the words into things; we see the sweetness of his character and feel its charm. The god of paradise is in fact brought down to earth; Christ has become personal in the power and influence of the holy spirit and we behold his glory. The glory began at Bethlehem where Jesus was born in the weakness and lowliness of a little babe. It ended on Calvary, where jesus died, in the patience and mercy which have made Calvery the hope of the world. And this is the reason why it was all so glorious, 'God was in Christ."

A Sure Enough Fox Chase

Mr. Charley White and Robert Allen started a fox on the Soldiers Home farm, and after chasing the animal 3 1-2 miles brought the carcass home.

"Charley" wears his hat on the back of his head at an angle of 40 degrees now, in fact the hat is too small for him now. He says, "Well I tell you when 'Ben' started we knew there was a race on, and when we came to Squire Sims' six or seven wire obstructions we had to 'negotiate' it by going around and lost some ground, but we got 'stra'itened out' again and I knew it was all with the fox."

"Yes that dog, 'Ben' is a 'whole pack,' all by himself when he gets started. The trail was 2 hours old, but we got him just the same."

"Yes, the next time I go out," said Charley, "Mr. Sims shall go too, for I tell you, that's the way to keep things running smoothly at home."

The Death of Captain Bell

The funeral services over the death and burial of Captain Wm. Bell, 14th South Carolina regiment, were held at the Soldiers Home on the 20th of December. A son and daughter from Montgomery came on the morning train and a large number of the old veterans attended the burial. Captain Bell entered the Home five years ago, and was then an invalid almost continuously until his death.

Suits Against Governor's Staff

Attorney General Says Inauguration Expenses Were Illegal.

Several suits, aggregating about $700, were brought Saturday by Attorney General Robert C. Brickell against certain members of the governor's staff to recover money paid by Treasurer John Purifoy upon accounts for the expenses of the members of the staff in Waseington, when President Wilson was inaugurated.

The suits were filed at the request of State Auditor C. Brooks Smith, who was advised by the attorney general that the payments were made without authority of law. The attorney general held in his opinion that the governor had no authority to order his staff to accompany him to Washington, and that although the various accounts were approved by the governor that the state was not liable for the cost.

There are 10 defendants, this number composing the members of the staff accompanying the governor to Washington. They are: Adjt. Gen. Joseph B. Scully, Gen. W. J. Vaiden of Uniontown, Col. J. T. Reeder of Florence, Col. R. L. Gleen of Florence, Col. Gardner Green of Pell City, Col. Hector D. Lane of Courtland, Col. C. E. Thomas of Prattville, and the following local members: Col. G. W. Covington, Col. J. S. Pinckard, Col. E. H. Jackson and Col. L. S. Betty.

Marriage at Mountain Creek

Last Sunday afternoon at two p.m., at the home of Mr. Thad Kicker, the Rev. O. W. Greer, pastor of the Baptist church, united in marriage, Mr. S. H. Dean and Miss Zella Lee Kicker, a beautiful and accomplished girl. These two young people are both of excellent families, and both enjoy the esteem of all the people who know them. Mr. Dean is one of the most industrious young men of the community, and Miss Zella is one of the set who has improved each day at school, until now, she is regarded as one of the most intelligent girls in Chilton county.

Along with the other things which the people's tax money is being paid out for, we would like to know the opinion of the people regarding the state's paying the expenses of the Governor and his staff at the inauguration in Washington.

Some of our party people are watching the senatorial and other campaigns with great interest, and getting eager to get into a race of their own. But let them not become impatient. We are sure they will have some combats a little later on, that will be interesting enough. Already some political fires are being kindled, and it will not take much agitation till the pot will begin to boil in real earnest.

Now that the Commissioners Court has passed a measure, giving four thousand dollars toward building a County High School, it behooves the communities which desire to get in the contest for the location, to get busy at once and raise their individual donations to meet the state's requirements aud invite the State High School Commission to look into their claims and consider the advisability of giving them the school. This is a privilege which any community in the county has.

The year nineteen hundred and thirteen has almost passed. Has it been one of success or failure? This probably is a question too broad for the average person to attempt to answer. But anyway, be that as it may, all of us have had successes, and all of us have had failures. We have received blessings, for which we need to give thanks, and we have done wrongs and broken resolutions for which we need forgiveness. Let us get busy with these duties, for soon the new year will be upon us, and then we will have new resolutions to make and new duties to perform. The person who lets the new year overtake him, with a load of past obligations undone, will soon find himself in a ridiculously complicated state of affairs. Let us give thanks for the blessings we have received, and ask pardon for wrong doings, and with a conscience clear and content greet the new year as a precious endowment from the benevolent hand of God.

OUR HOLIDAY SUBSCRIPTION OFFER.

We have made arrangements with the leading farm paper of the South for a club subscription offer during the holidays that has never been equaled before. It is not one of those offers that gives you a dozen worthless papers for a small price, but one that gives you two papers, the value of which, in their respective fields, cannot be surpassed, and both for the price of one.

THE OFFER:

During the next tirty days we will give The Union-Banner one full year, and The Progressive Farmer six months, both for only $1.25. The offer is good for both new subscribers and renewals.

The Progressive Farmer is by far the best farm paper in the South. It is published weekly in Birmingham, right here at home, and is edited by men who know Southern conditions, and are capable of giving real practical advice and not mere theory. It is distinctively a southern farm paper for the Southern farm. The regular subscription price of the Progressive Farmer is $1.00 per year, or 50c for six months, and those who are acquainted with its merits regard this as cheap for a paper of such value. To those who do not already know of it, we will stand as sponsor for it as being the best paper in existence for the southern farmer.

The Union-Banner for 1914 is going to reach a standard of excellence that has never before been attained in the field of a weekly newspaper in Chilton County. We are going to devote our columns to matters of home and local news, social, industrial, religious, educational and political, at all times championing the cause of right and justice in every phase of community progress. Our facilities and office equipment are being improved, and during the next year you cannot afford to be without the news of the county, and to get this news you cannot do better than take the Union-Banner.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS

"HE'S BEEN HERE"

The Children

This is the age of girder, beam and rail.
We have forgot some things that once we knew.
Some books are closed: we read a different tale.
Brown smoke curls where the virgin wind once blew.
But year by year when Winter, from his cave,
Sweeps out and sets his chill upon the air,
We still bethink us what the Christ-month gave.
And what it brought to us, we tender fair.

The children are as new as rail or beam—
More new than last night's snow upon the street.
And they, and not the rails, are all our dream:
The rails are but the passage for their feet.
Our Christmas shall live again in them,
With all the added Christmas of this time.
The day of steel, the day of Bethlehem,
Linked, joyous, bridging far from clime to clime.

Let us fare out into the eager throng,
And find renewal in the shining eyes,
And catch the treble ecstasy of song,
And drench ourselves in laughter and surprise.
This is the breath—this is the soul—of things.
It shall go on when iron husks are shed.
The roe, the dove, the biplane, all have wings.
Let us the children feed, and so be fed!

—FRANCIS HILL.

Quite Original.

"What are you going to give your darling little brother for Christmas?" the Sunday school superintendent asked Eddie on the Sunday before Christmas.

"MALIHINI" CHRISTMAS TREE

How Americans in Honolulu Introduced Yuletide Festivities Which Are Now Observed Annually.

SEVERAL years ago a number of tourists who were spending the winter months in Honolulu wanted to celebrate Christmas in some way. They could hardly realize that it was the wintry season, as the trees and grass were green, and crowds of people were on the beaches and swimming in the ocean every day; and so they thought of a novel idea; they would have a Christmas tree out of doors, and in-They procured a very large tree, and after having set it up in a park in the center of the town, they decorated it lavishly with popcorn, tinsel and all other ornaments that are used for the purpose. Cotton was strewn freely over the branches to imitate snow, which has never been seen by the little folks in Hawaii. The decorations complete, and everything in readiness, the children were all notified of this wonderful tree through the newspapers, and on Christmas morning thousands of little ones of all nationalities represented in these islands made a picturesque sight, dressed in the costumes of their parents' home country. They eagerly watched Santa Claus as he unties the dolls and the jump-ropes and jackknives from the heavily laden branches and distributed them freely to every one. It was evident by the happy little faces that the day was a huge success, and ever since then this idea has been carried out by the community, and is called the "Malihini," or strangers' Christmas tree.—Dorothy M. Hoogs, in St. Nicholas.

THE TRUE CHRISTMAS.

'Tis a beautiful custom—this Christmas
Remembering each old friend,
With some little tardy memento
Which takes with it love without end;
'Tis sweet to be thus held in memory
By one you hold close to your heart,
But at Yuletide let's not be forgetting
That the gifts are but one little part.

There's a far grander, holier lesson
To be gleaned from this season of cheer.
It isn't just jewels that are craved for
By the ones to whom we are near;
Give kindness and love and assistance,
Not only to body, but soul,
And you'll find that you're drawing much closer
To the season's significant goal.

Give a word of sweet solacing comfort
To those who are laden with woe,
Give sympathy where you can mete it—
Hold no such thing as a foe;
Send some little glimmer of sunshine
To the lives that are far from the light,
'Tis then that you'll know the full meaning
Of that star that shone forth in the night!

Strong Resemblance.

"Say, Billie," said Tommy, "do you believe in Santa Claus?"

"You bet I do!" returned Billie. "I've seen him. I peeked while he was fillin' my stockin' last year."

"What did he look like?" asked Tommy.

"Well, if pa'd had a twin brother I'd ha' thought it was him," said Billie.—Judge.

FIESTA IN MEXICO

How Christmas Is Celebrated Across the Rio Grande.

Religious Services and Festivities Mingled for Nine Days—Breaking the Pinyata Takes Place of Christmas Tree for Children.

Nellie Rust Jones.

THE Christmas season in Mexico, like all Christian lands, is the happiest time of the year, but it takes on more of the nature of the ancient customs, in that land of romance and sunshine, than it does perhaps in any other country. At least there is nothing approaching it in the western part of the world. The holiday season begins nine days before Christmas and winds up with "Twelfth night."

All solemn feasts in the Roman Catholic church are preceded by "novenas" or special church services. The Christmas celebration is semi-religious, beginning on the sixteenth of December, or nine nights before Christmas, and is repeated every night until Christmas eve. This is called "las posadas" and commemorates the eight successive, but unsuccessful days of search for an "inn" or place of rest in Bethlehem, by the Holy Family when they had gone up to Nazareth to pay their taxes in the city where they belonged as lineal descendants of David.

Day after day Saint Joseph and the Holy Mother asked in vain for admittance to some "meson" or place of retirement, only to be refused admission everywhere.

In vain did she plead her great necessity, the inns were already crowded and there was no room for the pilgrims, so they were repeatedly turned away.

On the night of the sixteenth of December bands of from five to one hundred gather together at some one's house and start on the rounds of visiting the houses of their friends. These bands are supposed to represent the three wise men seeking the infant saviour and the Holy Family seeking shelter. The origin of this quaint custom has been lost since the Spanish conquest. It is called "pidiendo posadas"—asking shelter—and at every house they are all invited in, offered wine and food and after some argument they are "offered the house." They finally depart and go on to the next house only to repeat the previous performance.

During the visit one-half of the company go outside the house and form in a solemn procession, the other half remaining inside and each carries a lighted candle. The leaders bear a small lighted shrine in which are the images of the "Santos peregrinos"— holy pilgrims, Joseph and Mary. They slowly march back and forth in front of the house or around the "patio," chanting the litany to Saint Mary in a high minor key; then they stop at the door and knocking ask for admittance. There are about twelve verses for this which are chanted first by those outside asking admittance, then answered by those on the inside refusing to open the door, and the denial of the personality of the Holy Family.

After the pleading petition and curt refusal those within are finally convinced that they who ask for their hospitality are really the Holy Pilgrims, when they open wide the doors and bid them enter: "Enter, holy pilgrims, honor my poor mansion," etc.

The "pilgrims" then enter, the images are placed in a small grotto which has been especially prepared for the purpose; a lighted candle or bright-light is held above by some one in a manner to represent the star of Bethlehem; some person present, either priest or layman, leads in the Ave Marias, short prayers are said, more hymns sung and the religious features for that night are at an end, and at once the festivities of the night begin which usually last until nearly morning.

On Christmas eve the same program is followed except that an image of the Hold Child, lying naked in a small manger filled with straw, is carried between the godfather and godmother, who have been appointed by the hostess to this great honor, and singing the litany and other hymns they proceed as on previous evenings until at 7:30 they begin singing the song of the "noche-buena" or Christmas night. Then follow Ave Marias, glorias, litany to the "Nino Dios" or God-child, when the image is placed in the grotto prepared for the reception, where it remains till the end of the holiday season.

Groups of friends and relatives combine for these posadas, a different family taking it each night until the rounds are made by Christmas eve.

The Christmas tree is unknown to the Mexican child, but the religious ceremony is always followed by the breaking of the "pinyata." If the Christmas tree is joy itself to the American child, the "pinyata" means even more to the humble Mexican child.

They are made of large or small "Ollas" (jars of pottery), gaily decorated with colored paper and tinsel to represent some figure, either grotesque or pretty. One may buy a bride, clown, baby, goose, swan, pineapple, or anything the fancy has dictated in the making, and at any price from fifty centavos to twenty-five pesos. The jars are entirely concealed in their fancy coverings, with a stout rope around the top to suspend them from the ceiling. A little brown boy will trot along by your side and carry your pinyata home for you for a few cents, no matter how heavy it is.

Thereafter they are filled with nuts, candies, raisins, small oranges, bananas, dates, pieces of sugar-cane and a few small simple toys as, dolls or animals; the pinyata is hung ready for use. The servants and their children are permitted to come in and share the fun, no distinction of class being made at this time.

One after another of the company are blindfolded and allowed three strikes each at the pinyata with a heavy cane as it hangs, suspended from the ceiling. When it is finally broken and the contents tumble to the floor of the "patio" there is a grand scramble for the good things that have fallen out, and each person is permitted to keep whatever he or she can get hold of first. Woe unto the poor child who is timid and slower than the others, she is liable to get very little indeed.

After the pinyata the servants retire, a more or less elaborate supper is served, according to the station of the host; favors are distributed, usually some odd little figures of china or bisque, filled with candy; dancing and music follow until a late hour. Wine or cognac is plentiful, but very few become intoxicated. The churches celebrate these "fiestas," leaving out, of course, the social features. On Christmas eve at midnight is celebrated the mass, when the image of the holy child is carried through the cathedral by the high dignitaries of the church, and the people are allowed to kiss the toes of the sacred infant to show their adoration, after which it is placed in the grotto followed by the litanies, etc. After the mass is celebrated the bells ring out joyously and noisily and one knows that another Christmas day is at hand.

No one gets up early on Christmas morning except the devout women who in their black dresses and with their black mantillas over their heads attend the ten o'clock mass.

A visit to the booths or "puestos" during the holiday season is full of interest as well as surprises to the foreigner in a Mexican city. The sight of these queer and varied looking booths going up on the side of the street adjoining the sidewalk on two sides of the alameda or park is the first indication of the approaching holidays. Each booth is erected by the humble merchant who is to occupy it, according to his own fancy, and as they do not conform to any rules or regulations as to size or shape, they are a queer jumble of gaily lighted "puestos."

There one can buy jumping-jacks for two centavos; clay dolls for two to four cents, beautiful and curious pottery, made from the identical aztec and toltec designs for from twenty to fifty cents, beautiful baskets of imperishable weave and color and every size and shape from twenty-five cents to one peso; clay figures of men and women with bits of bright calico fashioned into clothes; figures of ungainly looking animals shaped like nothing ever seen before, sacred images, jewelry, clever whistles, rattles, "electric sparklers," fireworks of all description, delicious candied fruits, conserves, in fact anything and everything is to be found at the "puestos." The Mexicans are especially clever at making candied fruits.

All day and until midnight great throngs of people crowd and push each other, good naturedly, going and coming, crowding the walks in front of the booths almost to suffocation, making their purchases, visiting, laughing and talking. But at midnight, when there is no possibility of more sales the merchants spread their blankets on the mats or "petates," blow out their torch lights, drop down their one window in front and all crawl into the one bed, or roll up in their single blankets, and crawl under the rude counter and go to sleep. No one thinks of going home, in fact some of them are regular nomads and have no fixed home.

One by one the lights go out and the tropical moon looks coldly down on one of the strangest little gypsy camps in the world.

CHRISTMAS OF OLD

It Was a Boisterously Gay and Glad Time.

Animating Spirit of Holiday Is Same as One Hundred Years Ago and as Will Be in Future.

THE protest of the grandmas and grandpas that Christmas in these days is different from what it was back in 1840 is doubtless true enough in respect to methods and details of ushering in the morn and celebrating the day, but in essentials probably the change is not so great as it seems. What grandma and grandpa have in mind is that the old-time simplicity pertaining to the great festal day has given way to innovations that are more fanciful and elaborate. The gift that comes in a gilt-bordered box, tied in pink ribbons, probably is opened with as much expectant thrill, however, as the exploration of the olden-time stocking occasioned.

We get little glimpses here and there in the colonial chronicles of Maryland of the old-time Maryland Christmas and there are plenty of traditions afloat of the rural before-the-war Christmas. Always the Christmas feast has been a great event in the social life of the state. It has been a day of family reunions from colonial days down to now. A Maryland Christmas feast of the olden time is aptly described in that classic phrase "the table fairly groaned under the burden of the viands." Sumptuous plenty was the first law of the olden Christmas feast. It wasn't so much on the decorative settings; it didn't make a specialty of fancy salads, but there was nothing to be desired in way of substantials.

As was the feast so were the Christmas festivity in general. It was gay and glad, boisterously gay and glad, with romps and games which have gone out of fashion along with two-course, table-groaning dinners. But the animating spirit of Christmas is the same now as it was 100 years ago, and will be the same 100 years hence as now. Which is but to say: Youth is ever the same; the new things are but the old things in altered outward guise.

A CHRISTMAS HOUSE PARTY

Skating, Coasting and Sleighing Good Country Pastime While City Offers Sight-Seeing, Music.

A house party at Christmas affords the young people of the family a chance to be gay and cheery for a week-end or more. The charm of a house party is in the bringing together of congenial guests who spend several days with their hosts. When the girls and boys return from college or boarding school for the holidays they often bring with them as guests classmates whose homes are too remote to make it worth while for them to take a long and expensive journey for the recess. The girl and the boy who hail from the west and attend an eastern school of learning, may be forced to spend a homesick holiday if no comrade tenders an invitation to join a family group.

Outdoor sports, skating, coasting, tobogganing and sleigh riding are the pastimes of the country, while the city offers sight-seeing, music and the other diversions. The long evenings at home, the little parties invited to meet the visitors, and the whole merry and swiftly passing time make a Christmas house-party one of the gala seasons of the year The housekeeper finds that her provision for the table must be ample. Her pies and cakes disappear like magic, for young people are noted for good appetites. Tableaux, charades and conundrums are among the amusements appropriate to such a party. Story-telling around the fire with the lights turned down, if the tales are of ghosts and spooks, is sure to be a favorite feature of the festivity.

A CHRISTMAS SONG.

Oh, Christmas is a jolly time,
When forests hang with snow,
And other forests bend with toys,
And lovely Yule-logs glow!

And Christmas is a solemn time
Because, beneath the Star,
The first great Christmas gift was given
To all men, near and far.

But not alone at Christmas time
Come holiday and cheer,
For one who loves a little child
Hath Christmas all the year.

—Flora Evelyn Pratt.

Christmas Atmosphere.

Christmas! Why the very word kindles thoughts of good will in our hearts, it seems to bring forth our best and natural instincts—the manliness of man—a desire to make the world happier. There's something noble and inspiring in the very atmosphere of "Christmas."

Santa Claus Is

By ELDON PATTERSON

Just as truly as love is, Santa Claus is. Santa Claus is a personified sentiment—he is a reality.

We speak and learn and teach of a God whom the world has never seen except in Christ Jesus, yet His existence is manifest in everything. He is a reality.

Santa Claus need not exist in physical form to be comprehensible—his spirit is endowed and devolved upon millions of willing personifiers, who in the spirit in which old Santa himself would shower blessings, shower them for him.

It isn't a lie to tell the children Santa is coming; it isn't even a "white" lie—

Santa Claus IS coming!

He may be the father, mother, brother or a stranger, but the sentiment of Santa Claus is upon him. He IS Santa Claus.

He is the expression of that which otherwise would indeed be a myth or cease to exist: He is the action of a world-old thought: He is the physical component of Love, Charity and Pity.

Santa Claus is Love made tangible.

He is not one, but many, and it takes all the flesh and blood Santa Clauses of all the world combined to make the one big Santa Claus whom the children know and worship and whom we symbolize in great furs—the wondrous figure whose great, kindly face with its never waning smile invites the confidence of the universe.

Santa Claus IS.

His visible form is generosity and kindness.

You can see him giving the newsboy a quarter for a penny paper.

You can see him, Scrooge-like though it may seem, helping here and there;

Or, and this is nobler than all the rest, you can see him sharing his last tiny mite with another, while tears of pity and happiness mingle in the bright smile the token gives.

Every household in its own way knows its Santa Claus.

Don't deceive the children by telling them there is no such person.

Santa Claus IS, and may he always be.

CALIFORNIA WOMAN SERIOUSLY ALARMED

"A short time ago I contracted a severe cold which settled on my lungs and caused me a great deal of annoyance. I would have bad coughing spells and my lungs were so sore and inflamed I began to be seriously alarmed. A friend recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, saying she had used it for years. I bought a bottle and it relieved my cough the first night, and in a week I was rid of the cold and soreness of my lungs," writes Miss Marie Geaber, Sawtelle, Cal. For sale by Upchurch Drug Co.

Action

To progress there must be action.

The earth, a mere ant hill in the planetary system, is ever in action, revolving on its axis. The sea, more restless than a guilty conscience, is ever responding to wind and tide. The heart and blood of men, women and children, animals, fowls and fish must be constantly in action for them to live.

Action—constant action—was ordained by the Divine.

Baseball, the great national game, must abound in action to hold the interest of the spectators. Let a theatrical manager stage a play; the demand is for action. The public demanded action in pictures and the "movies" became standard. The great men of history—Caesar, Napoleon, Gladstone, Washington—were men of quick, decisive action.

The world loves and honors men and women of action.

All plant life depends on action for existence. Plants, big and little, must be warmed by the sun, cooled by the dew and rain, nourished by the soil, otherwise they wither and die. And there is action in dying.

Action is the very life of agriculture and commerce. The soil must be prepared; seed must be sown; frequent tilling is necessary; a lapse for active maturity, and then the harvest. Commerce enters, in the shape of buyers of the crops and steam engines to move them.

The L. & N. has kept pace with the active and yet more active spirit of the age. Its engines are ever in action throughout the territory traversed by its lines. Its agents and other employees are ever in action, night and day seeking to supply the public demand for satisfactory service. Its agricultural experts are moving from place to place, giving advice here, practical demonstrations there, helpful always—and ever in action.

The L. & N. has tried to appeal to the imagination of men; to stir brains into action. Intelligent activity is an irresistible force for the constructive development of any community. Let men conceive ideas, dream practical dreams, and then put them into action.

The world will progress in industry, commerce, education and social enjoyment.

The L. & N. offers its service as a co-operative force in the active upbuilding of the territory. It wants to work with and for the people, and asks that the people reciprocate the cordial good will in the interest of the general public good.

You, the people, may call on any of the L. & N. officials or employees at any time, and if your call is in the interest of what is good for the territory you will find a quick, active response.

GRANDPA SQUELCHES A CANARD

By Wilbur D. Nesbit

Now Alferd Potts, he say he know
There isn't any Santy Claus!
He say his pa he tell him so
An' that he tell him so buhcause
He say that Alferd's old enough
Not to buhlieve that kind o' stuff.
But grampa say that Alferd's wrong,
And grampa has lived awful long.

My grampa he just laugh when I
Tell him what Alferd Potts he said.
Grampa say: "Ain't a Santy? My!
I hadn't heard that he was dead.
W'y, Santy's whole lots older 'n me—
He came to my first Christmas tree."
So Alferd Potts tell what ain't so,
Buhcause my grampa ought to know.

My grampa take me on his lap
An' say: "I mind as plain as day
When I was just a little chap
About your size, how some one say
There ain't a Santy Claus, an' how
It make me feel like you do now.
An' for a while I purty near Buhlieved it, too, but it seemed queer."

My grampa say 'at Santy Claus
He's fond o' little girls an' boys
That always minds their pas an' mas
An' never makes un-seem-ly noise.
An' he say he has seen him—Yes!
O, most a thousand times, I guess.
"How does he look?" he say. "Let's see.
Well, what if he looks some like me?"

I ast my grampa after while
If Santy Claus is rully so.
An' then he look at me, an' smile,
An' say: "When you're my age, you'll know
That what is good is always true."
So now, then! Alferd never knew
So much; him nor that pa o' his
Is half as old as grampa is!

A SANTA CLAUS GIFT

ROSY HAGGERTY pulled the worn coat more closely about her frail form as she hurried out into the cheerless dawn of the raw December day. The little lame sister—Maggie—crippled but always merry, the one bit of sunshine in the older sister's life still lay asleep, blissfully unconscious of the pitiful struggle necessary in order to procure the wherewithal to make life possible. The little sister had never walked, but the small room where she lived was kept as sunny bright as was possible, even when it meant that the older sister went oft times hungry to bed.

As she climbed wearily to the offices, dim and unbeautiful in the early morning light, and prepared for the rough work ahead, her mind reverted again and again to the question asked in such a pleading voice. "Sister Rosy, don't you think Kris will bring me a gold locket—a heart-shaped one like Miss Millie had on the day she called?"

A gold locket! Rosy's care and sacrifice, resulting in the magnificent purchase of a few candy toys, a new dress and a gingerbread man, suddenly sank to nothingness beside the startling significance of this childish question. In her years she had gleaned several dollars from generous employers at Christmas time. Perhaps she might manage to get one that was not really, truly gold all the way through. She rubbed away vigorously. The dust before her persistent onslaught. All through the hours only one thought was in those blue eyes.

The hour came that saw the finish of her labor—two crisp dollar bills and some loose change represented her gifts for the day—money was not as plentiful this year. The Christmas eve shoppers pushed and jostled her as she made her way along the crowded thoroughfare, where bright stores displayed their wares in tempting array. Carefully separating one of the new bills and putting it aside for the rent, she entered a store that promised the trinket she was looking for. The tired saleslady answered the question that was put to her politely, undoubtedly reading a pathetic story in the pale face before her. No, she did not think it would be possible to get a gold locket, nor even an imitation one, for the amount mentioned. Why did the lady not try to purchase a pretty string of beads? Muttering a low thanks for the suggestion, the disappointed woman turned once more to the street, depressed and forlorn, and decided to return home and make the best of what she had.

Suddenly her foot kicked something on the snowy pavement; it was a little square, rubber-bound package. Picking it up she flew down the street toward the spot she called home. Hiding it in her dress, she prepared the simple evening meal and after a few games coaxed the little sister off to sleep.

Nimbly and quickly the work-hardened and unbeautiful fingers decorated a small chair beside the child's bed; one by one the little dress, the candy animals and the gingerbread man took their places of honor to await a pair of blue eyes in the early dawn.

All this while the little square package lay like a bit of lead against the eager woman's breast. At last with trembling fingers she removed the rubber bands and tissue wrappings. A loud exclamation of joy made the sleeping child turn on her pillow, but she did not waken. On a dainty bed of blue cotton, swung on a chain as delicate as a thread hung a tiny gold heart. A queer half-sick feeling suddenly swept over the little woman, as she realized that this did not belong to her; a white card fell from the wrapping and fluttered to the floor. Picking it up she read:

"Merry Christmas to Maggie."

She laughed with the joy of possession. It was for Maggie, and taking it over to the little chair, she hung it lovingly around the neck of the gingerbread man.

FLORA DELL.

The Real Spirit of Christmas.

How often have I heard the word: "I wish I were rich at Christmastime, for then I could do so much for others," writes Margaret Woodward in an article on the problem of Christmas giving, in Suburban Life. "How strange it is that we never seem to learn the lesson that it is not the giving of things, but the giving of self, that counts! It is the spirit of Christmas which we must strive after—not the multiplication of gifts."

Christmas Athletics.

"Perley—Halloa, Jinx! Going to take Christmas quietly?

Jinx—No. Going to devote it to athletics.

Perley—Good. What kind? Golf or football?

Jinx—Neither. I am going to carve a turkey I bred myself for ten people. There's exercise for you!

SOME ODD THINGS ABOUT CHRISTMAS

IN Greece the kalikantzaroi are generally represented as mere tricky sprites who live, as a rule, underground, appearing to men only on the nights of the year between December 25 and January 6. They pass the days during this period in dark caverns, where they subsist on serpents and lizards, and come forth to dance in the moonlight, either alone or in company with the nereids, and also with mortal women, if they can lure any to join them.

* * *

INDIANS say the best time to catch a deer is on Christmas night at twelve o'clock, when they believe the deer kneels.

* * *

ROUMANIAN girls can learn, during the Christmas season, whether or not they are going to be married within the coming year. At midnight they enter the stable and strike the foot of the first ox they come across, saying: "This year; next year." If the ox gets up at the first stroke the girl will marry within the year; if it gets up at the second stroke he marriage will take place the year following; if it does not get up at all the gods have not yet decided on her wedding date.

* * *

IN many countries where they go by the old calendar Christmas is celebrated January 6, the celebration beginning twelve days before.

* * *

CAKES weighing from one to twelve pounds are made in Friedrichstadt. They place them in exalted position and play to them, representing, as they say they do, St. Nicholas. Of rye bread they make a boar or hog, six or seven inches high, with gilt snout and tail, with gold rings around its knees. The business men put goods they have exhibited for sale on a revolving disk and raffle them off.

* * *

KLINGEEST (Kind Jesus or Child Jesus) presides over all Christmas celebrations in Schleswig-Holstein. He is supposed to bring presents to the children, and sometimes punishes naughty ones.

* * *

ON Christmas day in Ditmarsh the cattle get an extra allowance of fodder. The cats and dogs, too, get better meals. At times the cattle are admitted to the higher joys to the extent that a candle is placed above the trough from which they feed just as each member of the family has his own candle, made by himself. These candles must be heavy and big for the one that goes out first will die first.

* * *

SOME of the Germans believe that those born on Christmas day have the power of seeing spirits, and even of commanding them.

* * *

THE after-dinner dishes must not be washed at once. They must be left until ten minutes before midnight, when the young folks take them outside to a well and wash them, for in the water they can, at midnight, see the faces of their future lovers and sweethearts.

* * *

OXEN kneel in the stall at midnight on Christmas, says English tradition. They kneel as if in adoration of the Nativity.

* * *

WHEN Christmas draws near every French family in easy circumstances sends for a cask of wine and lays in a stock of southern fruit. Those who have been enemies pardon each other; marriages are fixed; married pairs who have been separated are reunited.

* * *

A POPULAR saying in Spain for Christmas day is "the bird of dawning singeth all night long to frighten away all evil things."

* * *

CHRISTMAS celebrations in Mexico begin December 17 and continue until December 24. Each night a festival is held, nine in all, an invitation being sent out to these "posadas." "Posada" means "inn," typifying the day the holy travelers, Joseph and Mary, sought in vain for rest and shelter.

* * *

THE young Armenians, on Christmas day, pay "hand-kissing" visits to their elders.

* * *

TO learn the qualities of her future husband the Roumanian girl, on Christmas eve, partially disrobes, loosens her hair, bandages her eyes, and braving the cold goes into the courtyard, where she commences to count the stakes in the hedge. When she reaches the ninth one she binds it with ribbon or with threads of hair and re-enters the house. The next day she examines the stake; if it is upright and sound, her husband will be young, strong and handsome; if bent, her husband will be old and ugly.

CHRISTMAS seems to have been first observed between 180-190 A. D.

* * *

THE custom of making gifts at Christmas is widest spread in Germany, where even casual acquaintances express their regard for each other by making small presents.

* * *

OLD Christmas fare did not include the turkey, now the modern Christmas bird. In the olden days a roasted peacock took its place on the festive board.

HOLIDAYS IN HAWAII

Christmas Ranks First in the Minds of the Island People.

An Interesting Medley of Little Folks of Many Races and From Many Lands Participate in the Joyful Yule-Tide Celebrations.

By KATHERINE POPE.

AS in all other Christian lands, Christmas is the greatest of the many holidays in Hawaii. To realize the importance of the religious festival as compared with others I will mention a few of the others first.

The birthday of Kamehameha III., on the seventeenth of March, is celebrated by a display of bunting and the wearing of gay leis (wreaths) of flowers. Decoration day is made much of, by both the white and the brown folk. Kamehameha day, June eleventh, is a big day with the natives, a day in honor of their great king, Kamehameha I., sometimes styled the Napoleon of Hawaii. July Fourth, which now has double meaning in Hawaii, has always been the American resident's great day.

"One learns to skate in summer and to swim in winter," and one learns patriotism in a foreign land. At home, save in stirring times of war, one's heart is not apt to quicken its beat at the sound of "The Star-Spangled Banner;" at home in midsummer one does not often brave heat and crowd to listen to the reading of the Declaration of Independence; at home one does not flaunt red, white and blue on hatband and with badge; but we all know how the American in London and Berlin comports himself on this day, which when at home he tries to run away from. In the little land of Hawaii the citizen born in "the States" is not behind the American in London and Berlin. All muster to make of the day a glorious Fourth, and no one is in the least blase or indifferent about the celebration. The national songs rise lustily, 'way up above the palm fringes; the clearest voice in the land reads the immortal words of "When in the course of human events," and reads to reverent listeners; the most inflated American glorying is accepted as the day's due; very genuine feeling swells the volume and interprets the meaning of "My country, 'tis of thee."

November 28 is Hawaiian Independence day, a holiday to commemorate that on the twenty-eighth of the eleventh month of the year 1853 France and England announced, in a joint declaration, their consideration of the Typical Native Boy.

'Sandwich Islands as an independent state." Close to Independence Day comes Thanksgiving, which is celebrated by all, the divers races in Hawaii uniting to make a holiday of the New Englander's harvest festival.

And now for the one great holiday of all the year.

With us islanders, as with you of the States, Christmas is the holiday of all the year, is long looked forward to, long kept in recollection. No man so hoary, so superstitious, so clothed about with the old Hawaiian fears of evil, but that has heard of the magi and the Child; no little one in all the land but feels some influence of the spirit of the giver.

Though there is much of real Christmas in the air in the way of unselfish giving of pleasure and of renewal of youthful feelings, to you the twenty-fifth of December in Honolulu probably would not seem very much like Christmas. The gowns are white, the hats summery; many feet are bare, and at the beach considerable of the body of the native fisherman is also bare. The hibiscus hedges are aflame with blossoms, while the odors of roses, violets, stephanotis, heliotrope, plumarias and carnations make the air heavy with fragrance. There are no sleigh bells, but many merry horseback parties; there is no skating, but fine fishing; few indoor dances, but many picnics at Waikiki, where the seaside residences are and the beach which is the great water playground for the people of the city.

In Hawaii we are made aware of the approach of Christmas day all the preceding night. All night the Hawaiian warblers are abroad, all night the toy cannons boom, the firecrackers pop. The newcomer feels the midwinter holiday has changed places with the midsummer one, and wonders if a person can stand two "Fourths" in a year. Where I live in Honolulu sleep on the night before Christmas is impossible. Fortified, not for resistance but for a show of truce, with scores of oranges and innumerable sacks of candy, I go to my room and await, with as good grace as possible, the coming of my visitors. About midnight I hear the sound of many footsteps on the gravel, stifled mirth, the testing of strings, and then burst forth, "A ruby lip to kiss, love," and other songs of that ilk. The newcomer is surprised and asks if these be Christmas waits; says she is reminded rather of a crowd of Romeos besieging a Juliet. The Romeos at the particular balcony of which I speak, never found Juliet unresponsive, and into outstretched hands always fall a rain of goodies. There are hearty thanks called up to the windows, and many pleasant voices raised in "Merry Kreesmus! Merry Kreesmus!" The giver feels repaid, and philosophizes that the loss of one night's sleep is not so very serious.

On the islands there is an attempt made to copy the Christmas of the lands where the white man abounds; gift-making, church-going, plum-pudding and greens are used to help it out. Many of the gifts are such as you of cold climes have—toys, games, books, flowers, pictures, dolls, jewelry, finery; but, as was suggested above, there is no call for skates, sleds, mufflers, furs or velvets. The church-going is as it is with you; early mass for the Catholics, early service for the Episcopal church folk, church festivities for the little ones and the poor.

The going out into the highways and hedges is literally followed in Honolulu at this season. Brown babies from hovels hid at the foot of Diamond Head, big-eyed Portuguese girls and boys from the slopes of Punch Bowl, children sheltered in huts dotted among the lantana thickets of Kalihi valley, little aquatics from Waikiki, all are invited, to all the church portals are flung wide on Christmas eve. Central Union church, the stately cathedral, Kawaiahao, as well as the chapels at Makiki, Kalihi and Palama, bring them into the charmed circle of the Christmas tree.

Little Ah Oi and Ah Ooe, Sahto and Yokomitso, too, are not forgotten or treated unfairly. Queues and kimonos have their trees, their gifts, Christmas songs writ in their tongues, patron to act for them the part of St. Nicholas. When we peep in at this church and at that, see Saxon and Hawaiian, Portuguese, Japanese, Chinese, South Sea Islander, care for, happy, rejoicing, we seem to find some real meaning in "the brotherhood of man;" we repeat softly:

"The angels' song rings everywhere
And all the earth is holy land."

What He Wanted to Know.

Millionaire (to his daughter)—Tell me, child—that young man who wants to marry you this Christmas, has he got any money?

Miss Innocence — Money, father? Why, he has just given me a cluster diamond ring studded with pearls.

Millionaire—Yes, I know. Has he any money left?

WHY TOMMY WEPT.

Nurse—Why, what's the matter, Master Tommy?

Tommy—Boo-hoo! The gun at last, an' I've got no bears around here to shoot!

Marvelous Works of Art for the Panama-Pacific International Exposition

World's Greatest Sculptors and Painters Completing Superb Decorative Masterpieces

VISIONS OF ARCHITECTS COME TRUE AS VAST EXHIBIT PALACES RISE ON SHORES OF SAN FRANCISCO BAY

Whole World Will Be Represented at America's Eighty Million Dollar Panama Canal Celebration.

Wonderful progress has been attained in the superb Panama-Pacific International Exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915 to celebrate the opening of the Panama canal. Thousands of men are now at work upon the exposition grounds and the plans of the great architects for the city of exposition palaces are more clearly revealed than they were by the first published designs and drawings. The huge main exhibit section is fast nearing completion and a world's record has been established in exposition building.

Thousands of sightseers flock to the exposition grounds every Sunday and on holidays—visitors are not permitted during working hours because of the injury which might result to them. From the work already accomplished the visitor gains a vision of the exposition as it will appear when completed. Huge groups of statuary, executed by the world's most famous sculptors, have been enlarged and may be seen upon the exposition grounds. Hundreds of acres, once a vast barren waste, have been transformed into beautiful park-like areas covered with green sward in which are being set thousands of rare trees, plants and shrubs, converting the grounds into a semi-tropical paradise. A wonderful color plan has been designed by Jules Guerin, world famous decorative artist, and superb mural paintings to decorate the walls and porticos of the vast exposition courts have reached San Francisco. Several hundred thousand dollars have been expended upon these paintings alone.

In the opinion of notable authorities in world's expositions the Panama-Pacific International Exposition has attained a greater degree of progress than that reached in any other formal world's exposition at a period so far in advance of its opening.

Hundreds of great conventions and congresses, whose delegates will come from all parts of the world, will meet in San Francisco during the exposition year. A wonderful display of the exhibits from all parts of the world is assured. At this writing thirty-one of the nations have officially accepted the invitation of the United States to take part in the exposition. Construction has begun upon the foreign pavilions and upon the concessions section. The concessions district will be one of the most marvelous features of the exposition grounds, entailing an expenditure of more than $10,000,000. In the estimate of the comptroller, the exposition will involve an expenditure of eighty million dollars up to its opening day.

The opening ceremonies of the exposition will be in peculiar accord with its international character. President Wilson's invitation to the nations to be represented with detachments of their battleship fleets as the official celebration has met with an enthusiastic response; it is believed that more than two hundred battleships will be assembled at Hampton Roads, off the West Virginia coast, late in 1914. This magnificent fleet, the most formidable array of naval warcraft ever gathered together and representing the pick of the fighting strength of the world's navies, will proceed from Hampton Roads through the Panama canal, gathering in the Caribbean sea in time for the formal opening of the Panama canal on January 1st, 1915; thence the fleet will proceed to the Golden Gate, assembling off the site of the exposition, which opens on February 20, 1915.

The dramatic passage of the fleet can be easily imagined. The eyes of the whole world will be upon this vast array of battleships as they steam to the scene of America's brilliant Panama canal celebration.

This photograph shows a part of one of the figures of the sculptured group, "Nations of the East," at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. The group will crown the huge Arch of the Rising Sun in the Court of the Sun and Stars, and the highest figure in the group will rise 188 feet above the floors of the court. Frederick G. R. Roth, the noted animal sculptor, whose work is widely known both in America and abroad, designed the figure above. The entire group, "The Nations of the East," was the conception of A. Stirling Calder. A companion group, "The Nations of the West," depicting Occidental civilization, will balance the "Nations of the East" on the opposite side of the Court of the Sun and Stars.
